POTPOURRI OF OPENING DAY

Little Leaguers around Marin County kicked off their season today and in San Rafael, the would-be major leaguers first clustered in the Bank of America parking lot and then set off on a parade through town, a colorful mish mash of uniforms, smiles and dreams of a pennant. But while some of the rookies may have been excited with the season's opening, Patrick Malloy of the San Quentin Giants (right) yawns with the disdain of a 15-year major league veteran and perhaps wonders, "Won't this season ever end?"

Mao's China Orbits Red-Singing Satellite

World Ponders Effects

HONG KONG (UPI) — Communist China announced the launching of its first space satellite and said the 380-pound vehicle was broadcasting Peking's revolutionary anthem "The East is Red" as it spun around a world wondering about the military implications.

The Chinese, who invented the rocket almost 1,000 years ago and began testing nuclear bombs in 1964, thus became the fifth nation to create space satellites but American rockets technology, joining the United States, the Soviet Union, France and Japan, in the space race. Britain has launched satellite but American rockets have been used.

The United States reacted quickly to the Peking announcement, and said the progress of the satellite was being watched closely.

Dr. Thomas O. Paine, the head of the U.S. space agency, said the launching was a "dramatic demonstration" of the determination of Chinese

Bridge Directors Disagree On Need Of Transit Image

A $55,000 contract to give the Golden Gate Bridge District's planned transit system an image-building ran into strong opposition yesterday when it came before the board of directors for approval.

San Francisco Supervisor Ronald Pelosi, a member of the bridge board, said the cost of the contract proposed with Walter Landor and Associates was "outrageous."

But his move to have other firms solicited for their interest in the job was defeated, and action on the contract was tabled until the board's May 8 meeting.

The San Francisco industrial design firm was selected by Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring and recommended yesterday by the district's joint transportation and finance-auditing committee. Luehring noted that he had been instructed to get the "very best," and had selected the Landor firm after screening several firms.

Several directors noted that such firms will not bid competitively.

San Francisco Supervisor Peter Tamaras argued for hiring Landor. "We're trying to sell a multimillion-dollar

Two Scuffle In Attempt To Enter I-J

Two men who engaged in a brief shoving match with a security guard at the Independent-Journal last night ended the struggle by kicking out two windows in the plant, San Rafael police reported today.

A security guard told police that a man in his late 40s or early 50s came to the door of the newspaper about 10 p.m. and said he wanted to place an ad. The guard said he told the man to return during normal business hours, but the man kept his foot in the door and refused to allow the guard to close the door.

The guard told police a second man — described as a Negro about 23 years of age — then joined the first man and helped hold the door open. The guard and the two men scuffled briefly, police reported, with the guard finally succeeding in closing the door. The younger man then kicked out the glass in the door, police reported.

A few minutes later glass in the main revolving door of the newspaper was also kicked in, officers reported.

The guard told police the two men then joined a group of other persons getting aboard a bus which had brought them to a meeting at Carpenter's Hall

Span Board Speedily Becomes Ferry Owner

Immediate purchase of a $558,673 ferryboat to serve Sausalito commuters won formal approval yesterday by Golden Gate Bridge District directors in a 14-2 vote.

But doubt was raised whether the service could begin by the target date of July 1.

The district's attorney, Jerome B. White of San Francisco, citing the need for competitive bids to modify the vessel and for completion of terminal arrangments, said July 1 "as a target date is rediculous." No estimate was offered on how long it would take to clear these details.

Sausalito Mayor Robin Sweeny, warning that "changes" in the service may be needed if it worsens the city's already severe traffic congestion, won a unanimous board vote commiting the district to "go along" with what ever changes the city may ask after six months.

The district also plans a second terminal at Marinship, opening perhaps by Sept. 1. The first terminal will be downtown.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring attempted to report new cost estimates to modify the vessel, but directors, citing the late hour, pushed ahead with a vote without hearing his report.

The modifications include enclosing the second deck, strengthening the third deck, adding radar, and installing amenities such as a bar. Leuhring previously estimated the cost of the work at about $35,000, but his new estimate is up to $75,000 or $80,000, primarily to strengthen the top deck and add more comfortable seating.

The district's chief of ferryboat operators, Harlan Socten, told the Independent-Journal that the capacity will go from 500 to 597 passengers because of the strengthening of the top deck so it, too, can be used.

The modifications will come before the board at its May 8 meeting.

Both dissenting directors, Ben K. Lerer of San Francisco and L.E. Castner of Sonoma County, said they favored ferries, but first wanted more details on how the single vessel would operate.

"It's not a ferryboat — it's a railroad," Castner said of the speedy vote. The purchase was recommended last week by the district's "committee of the whole."

The ferryboat is the Point Loma, commissioned late last year in San Deigo. She is 111

Mayors' Objections Pepper Ross Valley Flood Budget

A presentation of next year's budget for the Ross Valley Flood Control Zone was interrupted repeatedly yesterday by two mayors who objected to their cities having to contribute to flood control in unincoporated areas and to the proposed tax rate.

William L. Hess, assistant director of the county public works department, presented the $152,400 budget, which calls for continuing the zone tax rate at five cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

Mayors Neil R. Brixon of Larkspur and Edward W. Colthurst of Corte Madera kept voicing objections until Hess said heatedly: "You can interrupt me all you want, but you're not letting me finish one single statement I make."

Hess finally managed to complete a rundown of the budget, but the mayors were far from happy with it.

Brixon said that in 1964 the cities had been promised a tax

BOLINAS-STINSON STRIFE

Many Children Benefit From Free-Style Study

By PAT ANGLE

(Last of three articles)

To veterans of the traditional "all right, class, open your books to page 34" educational system, a visit to Stinson Beach School is bound to be an eye-opening experience guaranteed to raise the spirits — or the blood pressure.

Gone are the familiar neat rows of desks, the hallowed (if forced) silence of the classroom and the lines of student papers, each with its inevitable gold star, marching across bulletin boards like little soldiers.

At first glance, it appears that "dear old Golden Rule days" have deteriorated into utter chaos. Parents who are graduates of traditional schools have been known to panic after only one visit to the school.

But it soon becomes apparent that exciting — though, to some, incomprehensible — things are happening at Stinson School — things as unheard of in schools of the past as closed-circuit television coverage of two men on the moon. A similar program is underway at Bolinas School.

On one recent school day, a group of students filmed credits for a documentary film they are making on the difference between life in the city and the country. The 20-minute black and white and color film was planned, filmed and edited by the students, who received technical advice from two professional film makers.

A fifth grade student read fluently from an adult book on guinea pig care to explain why a pregnant guinea pig in the small zoo she had started had to be kept in a separate cage until her babies are born. The same little girl, while cleaning a cage, proceeded to give a knowledgeable explanation of genetics, explaining "that is how we can tell what colors the babies will be."

Other students worked to

"Bogus"-Setting Type, Throwing It Away

The union insists that advertising supplied the I-J (already set by union printers) must, after publication, be set over again in type, proofread, corrected — then thrown away. For this, printers get full union wages. (So did those who set it in the first place). Under International Typographical Union laws "bogus" is a negotiable item. In practice, however, the S.F. Typographical Union 21 violates the laws of its parent body. While it continues to "claim" this item is negotiable, the union has never entertained or made a single proposal for its elimination even though the I-J offered generous added job security if the union would agree to eliminate this "bogus", uneconomic practice.

I-J Negotiation Session Held; Unions Talk General Stoppage

Representatives of the Independent-Journal and striking printers met yesterday in San Francisco over a new contract proposal submitted by the I-J at the union's request, but the session ended with no further sessions scheduled.

Representatives of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, which struck the I-J Jan. 7, assailed the proposal at the meeting's conclusion and said, "There is no basis for further negotiations at this time."

A statement charged that the newspaper proposed a cut in pay of more than $42 per week "for the vast majority of employees" and elimination of the apprenticeship training program.

However, Howard Looney, industrial relations consultant, representing the I-J at yesterday's session, said today that the union "must have engaged in some interesting calculations" to arrive at the salary-cut charge.

He said the paper proposes a different pay scale, based on skills, and a new job classification pattern. Linotype machine operators, for instance, would have a higher pay schedule than was in existence prior to the strike, he said.

He said yesterday's meeting was at the request of the union for a review by the newspaper of its position. "There was no

Chiang's Heir Continues U.S. Tour; Suspects Held

NEW YORK (UPI)—Two Formosan revolutionaries, members of a movement seeking independence for their countrymen, were held without bail today for the attempted assassination of Nationalist Chinese Vice Premier Chiang Ching-kuo, Chiang Kai-shek's son and heir apparent.

The 60-year-old Chiang, apparently unruffled by the gunshot attempt on his life as he walked through a revolving door of the Plaza Hotel Friday, flies to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., today. He had the blessings of Nationalist Chinese leaders on Formosa who decided after an emergency meeting the U.S. could provide adequate protection.

Peter Huang, 32, an Ithaca, N.Y., researcher for Cornell University and a member of the World United Formosans for Indepesdence in the United States which seeks the ouster of the Nationalist regime, was charged with attempted murder, possession of a dangerous weapon, resisting arrest and obstruction of governmental administration.

His alleged accomplice, Tzu-tai Cheng, 32, a New York architect and secretary-general of the independence movement, was held on similar charges except for possession of a weapon.

Both were held for a hearing Tuesday following their arraignment in Municipal Criminal Court Friday night.

The assassination attempt came from a shot fired by a .25 calibre Beretta automatic. The shot missed and punctured the glass door because police Det. James Zeide lunged for the gunman's wrist just as he fired and wrestled him to the pavement.

Nejedly Urges Reduction In Flood Of New Bills

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The legislators who introduced more bills this session than any of his Senate colleagues is proposing a crackdown on the number of bills to save time and money.

Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, is also urging chronically absent committee members be dropped and the rules committee changed to allow bills to be approved by fewer committee members.

"I don't think the present legislative system takes full advantage of the capabilities of the members of the Senate and Assembly, said Nejedly. The three-month period to allow bill introductions is "not particularly productive," he added.

"I think bill introductions should be limited to the first 45 days of the session."

Nejedly says he wants to end the customary last-minute deluge of bills. This year, 1,050 of the more than 2,500 Assembly bills come in during the last five days prior to April 3 deadline. In the Senate, 710 bills showered down in the final five days, more than the 698 bills introduced between Jan. 5 and the start of the Easter recess. Many measures are similar, some are exact duplicates.

"I think that ought to be cut down by a compulsory screening process of all bills," said Nejedly. He says bill drafting could be done between sessions.

Bill production costs annually exceed $600,000. Senate aides estimate it costs $14.71 to print a single page of each bill.

Sen. Nejedly says he is concerned also that the committee system is less efficient that it could be.

A major problem this year has been lagging attendance on the floor and in committee sessions.

Part of the problem lies in the fact 25 members of the 40-member Senate are running for election, 20 for re-election and five for other offices. As a result, it sometimes is difficult to muster quorums of committees.

Nejedly feels one answer would be allowing bills to be approved by committees by a majority vote of those present, rather than insisting on a majority of the full membership.

Yorty Belittles Reagan's Plans For Tax Reform

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty says that Governor Reagan's tax reform proposals "will have little direct effect on California cities."

During a day of campaigning in the Bay Area Friday, the Democratic gubernatorial hopeful told the Press Club that "most of Reagan's proposals call for significant increases in sales and income taxes."

"By utilizing this additional revenue solely for tax relief, and, in the process, building large and continuing funding commitments into the state budget, it will be virtually impossible for the Legislature to do anything with respect to the additional revenue needs of cities now or in the foreseeable future," he said.

Yorty said he was happy to see the governor change his mind on state withholding tax. "But the state has lost a half billion dollars because he didn't press for tax withholding four years ago," Yorty added.

The mayor proposed creation of a statewide Commission on Economic Development, an effort which must be given "new and dynamic direction."

Tank Plans Shift

LONDON (AP) — West Germany and Britain have reached a preliminary agreement to develop and build a new battle tank, and Germany has decided to bow out of a plan to cooperate with the United States in a similar project.

No-Ballot School Loan Plan Urged

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A measure to allow school districts to borrow money for new schools and sites without bond elections has been sent to the Senate by a 55-0 vote of the Assembly.

The bill by Assemblyman Jerry Lewis, R-Highland, would allow school districts to sign lease-purchase agreements and pay them off with override tax revenues.

Override taxes require approval of a simple majority of voters while school bonds, the normal means of financing new schools, take a two-thirds vote.

The Lewis measure, approved Friday, would allow override elections for lease-purchase financing only at general elections. The tax authorization would be good for up to 40 years.

That would be a significant change, Lewis said, but would not be as radical a shift as it appears to be.

"It is also very significant," he said, "that when these districts fail to pass bond issues with 62 or 63 per cent votes, it is usually in a special election with a small turnout."

A simple majority in a general election is a better indication of public will, Lewis said, and in many cases a greater "yes" vote would be needed.

"It is important to realize that every sizable school district in the state is using portable classrooms . . . Sometimes entire schools are built this way without any vote of the people," Lewis said.

He said he expected opposition from "the traditional conservatives" in the Senate but predicted final approval despite them.

"The main thrust of the bill," Lewis said, "is an effort to provide a flexible alternative to a ridiculous bond market. Today school districts have hundreds of millions of dollars of bonds approved by two-thirds votes which can't be sold."

He said Prop. 7, the June primary ballot measure to lift the five per cent ceiling on bond issues, would not solve the school construction problem if adopted because of the large number of outstanding bond issues.

MARIN FIRM GETS CANCER TEST NOD

Controversial Apricot Pits Drug Due Trials By A Sausalito Foundation

About 100 persons will be tested during the next six months with a controversial cancer drug found in apricot pits.

Andrew McNaughton, president of the tiny McNaughton Foundation of Sausalito, said Friday that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had approved use of the drug Laetrile, which has been labeled "dangerous" by the Canadian government and "unproved" by the American Cancer Society.

Authorities on both sides of the nation were cautious as to the drug's curative powers.

ONLY A 'TEST'

The FDA said in Washington its action did not represent any judgment on the drug's worth, but was "an experimental thing, nothing more than a test."

McNaughton said "we do not consider that the use of the word 'cure' is justified. But it certainly is our hope that it may turn out to be a useful drug in the prevention and treatment of cancer."

He said the FDA go-ahead means Laetrile "has moved from the stage where it is considered a controversial, worthless remedy, to where it is considered worth a trial in human patients.

LONG KNOWN

The drug, known chemically as amygdalin, has been known to medical science for more than a century. It is found in apricot pits and was used by Dr. Ernest T. Krebs Sr., founder of the John Beard Memorial Foundation of San Francisco as long ago as 1920. But although the drug has been used privately, the National Cancer Institute said the experiments would be the first clinical trials with government approval.

McNaughton conceded the medical "establishment" in the U.S. looks with disfavor on Laetrile.

"It is hard to say whether they think less of the drug or less of us," he said. "But that is changing very rapidly."

NO 'EVIDENCE'

The American Cancer Society said in 1966 it had found "no evidence that that treatment with Laetrile results in any objective benefit in the treatment of cancer in human beings." It classified Laetrile as among "unproved methods of cancer treatment."

Prior to this, the Food and Drug Directorate of Canada had moved to prevent distribution of the drug by the McNaughton Foundation of Montreal, contending it "was dangerous and did not meet the requirements of the new drug act."

The California Cancer Commission in a 1953 report said Laetrile "has been completely ineffective when used in large doses on cancer in laboratory animals."

HOW IT WORKS

The basis for the use of the drug in cancer treatment, McNaughton said, is a belief that it has molecules which, on contact with tumors, "break down and release cyanide and other chemicals which destroy the malignant cells without harming normal cells."

He said approval by the FDA after "very meticulous" investigation means that Laetrile "complies with regulations and human trials are justified."

Antismog Conference Spawns Spate Of Bills

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The report which came out of California's antismog summit conference last month has been put in the form of legislation which is likely to reach Gov. Reagan's desk within 60 to 90 days.

Principal feature of the report of the Air Resources Board is a plan to phase all lead compounds out of gasoline over the next seven years.

That timetable has been adopted unanimously by the Assembly air pollution subcommittee as an amendment to an antismog bill submitted the first day of the 1970 legislature.

The amended bill will be heard by the Assembly Transportation Committee May 14, but the hearing is likely to be a formality. A marathon 12-hour hearing by the committee two weeks ago was devoted almost entirely to the Air Resources Board report now in the bill.

If there is reluctance by members of the Transportation Committee to send the tough legislation to the full Assembly with a "Do pass" recommendation, it wasn't evident even during that hearing before an audience of the nation's biggest oil interests.

Lead compounds — used for over 40 years to reduce engine knock and increase gasoline octane ratings — emerged as the chief villain in auto exhausts in the two-day conference Reagan called of auto and oil industry executives.

Lead contributes 30 to 70 per cent of the visible smog produced by autos, various authorities said, and is among the greatest health hazards in smog. Furthermore, auto manufacturers said, the presence of lead in gasoline is one of the biggest obstacles to developing efficient catalysts to reduce auto smog.

Following the lead of General Motors President Edward N. Cole, the nation's major auto manufacturers all said they would produce cars to run on lower octanes, erasing the biggest obstacle to the manufacture of lead-free gasoline.

The phase-out proposal immediately cuts the maximum allowable lead content in gasoline from four grams to 2.5 grams. Premium grades now contain about 2.8 grams while regulars average about 2.4 grams.

All refiners would be required to market at least one lead-free grade of gasoline next year, and in three more years only one grade of leaded gasoline would be allowed. Final elimination of that grade would be required in 1977.

Major refiners have said they accept the proposal — it matches almost exactly a plan first suggested at the smog summit conference by Union Oil Co. President Fred Hartley — but small refiners say it could put them out of business.

The small refiners, who sell about 18 per cent of the gasoline in California, say they can be counted on to continue their opposition throughout the legislative process.

UNAWARE OF TROUBLE — Pope Paul VI receives kisses from a poor woman in a crowd in Cagliari, Sardinia, unaware that self-described anarchists were battling with police nearby, in protesting his visit to the poverty-stricken island. (UPI Telephoto)

Pope Flays Italian Press Over Sardinia Riot News

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI attacked newspapers today for emphasizing the violence marring his historic one-day trip to Sardinia. He said accounts distorted the real importance of the visit.

"The newspapers, even the ones that call themselves the great newspapers, absolutely perverted the news," he told several hundred persons attending a special general audience.

"They are no longer newspapers that inform, only newspapers that deform," he said.

It was the Pope's first public reaction to clashes Friday along a procession route he took near the end of the first papal visit to the island of Sardinia.

Vatican sources said earlier he was saddened by the violence that began when a group of self-described anarchists hurled rocks at the Papal motorcade. The Pope was not hit and the rocks smashed the windows of a police bus several dozen yards behind his open car.

The Pope apparently was unaware of the stoning which developed into a bloody battle between police and about 30 leftwing protestors.

Officials said 16 policemen were injured, one seriously, and 27 youths, including three girls were arrested in the incident Friday.

The fighting occured in a rundown area of prefabricated apartments called Sant'Elia. The pope chose to visit this area because it was expresentative of the many poor in backward Sardinia. Earlier he had celebrated an open-air mass in the harbor for thousands of persons to commemorate the arrival in Sardinia 600 years ago of a statue of the Madonna, believed by Roman Catholics to have miraculous powers.

The demonstrators, who had been living in pup tents on the beach at Sant'Elia, scored the Pope for living among riches while Sardinians starved.

They sat down in front of a police bus to demand return of a megaphone confiscated by police. The police waded into the group, punching, kicking and swinging heavy whistle chains. The protestors started fighting back and the battle moved toward a housing block where the Pope was visiting the bedridden mother of six children, Mrs. Graziella Murgia, 43.

Only seconds after the pope left her apartment, the rocks started flying. Cheers and applause turned to screams. Women dropped to their knees in prayer.

The massive police force in the area picked up the protestors one by one. Some were roughly treated.

At one stage, a plainclothesman pointed a pistol at a demonstrator and released the safety catch, but did not fire.

One protestor fought so violently that he was pitched into a squad car and several policemen sat on top of him for the ride to jail.

Some of the demonstrators were roughed up by members of the crowd. The attitude to them was mostly hostile. They were called Chinese because of their supposedly Maoist views.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Banks Bombed

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Explosions damaged the exteriors of three banks in the college community of East Lansing early today.

East Lansing is the home of Michigan State University.

Police said a peace symbol was found hanging near the First National doorway. The slogan "Free Bobby" was painted on walls near the other banks, police said, apparently in a reference to Black Panther leader Bobby Seale on trial in New Haven, Conn.

Meetings Sought

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mediator Benjamin Aaron sought to arrange separate meetings with strikers and administrators this weekend as a preliminary to possible joint sessions aimed at ending the two-week-old teachers' walkout that has sharply curtailed education in the Los Angeles School District.

But Aaron, a University of California at Los Angeles law professor and head of UCLA's Institute of Industrial Relations, was unable to predict Friday when the two sides might be brought together.

The strike in the nation's second largest school district was intensified Friday when more than 1,000 nonteaching personnel joined about half of the 25,400 teachers in a walkout that commenced April 13.

School officials said 10 schools in the South-Central part of the city were without custodial services, three cafeterias had to be closed and there were other service problems. They added, however, that elsewhere busing was normal as were trucking, rubbish collection and cafeteria operations.

Witnesses Dropped

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Federal Communications Commission examiner in the KRON-TV license renewal hearings has canceled appearances for 34 witnesses for the station.

The action by Chester F. Naumowitz Jr., came Friday at the end of the sixth week of hearings.

"It's basically the same message over and over again," Naumowitz said, noting he heard 16 pro-KRON witnesses Thursday.

Alioto Vs. Editors

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Look magazine editor has agreed through a deposition in Mayor Joseph L. Alioto's $12.5 million libel suit the magazine's article linking him to the Mafia could have hurt his reputation.

Editor Patricia Carbine said in a deposition read Friday by Alioto attorneys Darrell Salomon and Maxwell Blecher that "I believed the piece would raise questions about the mayor's reputation" at the time of publication.

Another Look executive, senior editor and West Coast editorial manager George B. Leonard of Mill Valley, testified through deposition that he was told a character reference had been done on the two authors of the article, Richard Carlson and Lance Brisson, with positive results.

He added he had never been "really consulted" about the story until a July 26, 1968, conference with the magazine's managing editor, Martin Goldman.

Chico State Strife

CHICO (AP) — Confrontations between students at Chico State College and police have led to 11 arrests, including two faculty members.

The issue is whether a city street running through the heart of the campus should be kept open for the weekend.

At the request of college authorities, Mayor Gordon Casamajor ordered the street closed Tuesday night but the city council ordered it reopened again Thursday.

In three separate incidents Friday, students tried to close the street, leading to the arrests. All 11 were booked for investigation of conspiracy to block a public street and four were booked for resisting arrest.

The two faculty members were Jack H. Zeilenga, 33, assistant professor of history, and Francis E. Burk, 27, professor of mathematics.

Childhood Ulcers

NEW YORK (AP) — Ulcers may be becoming an increasingly common childhood disease, particularly among children of upper socio-economic backgrounds, a Buffalo, N.Y., researcher says.

Dr. Harry A. Sultz describes the development in the current issue of the American Journal of Public Health. He based his findings on a survey covering 22 upstate New York hospitals from 1946 through 1961.

The sharpest increases in incidence were found among 15-year-old boys from the highest socio-economic class.

The researcher said interviews with mothers of some of the afflicted children suggested that, as in adults, ulcers in children may be rooted in emotional stress.

Trouble In Canada

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal's three-month-old postal workers' dispute erupted in violence again Friday. Vandals smashed post office windows, poured quick-drying cement into mail boxes and stole letters from others.

The labor dispute began Feb. 3 when G. La Palme Inc., lost its exclusive contract to carry the city's mail, putting 450 of its drivers out of work.

Office Bombed

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Terrorists hurled dynamite into the Istanbul office of the Israeli airline El Al before dawn today, shattering windows and those of neighboring apartments, police said. No one was injured.

The booking office of Pan American Airways in the Aegean port of Izmir was also attacked late Friday and windows were broken, the semiofficial Anatolia news agency reported.

Egypt Jets Raid Near Tel Aviv

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

A flight of Egyptian bombers penetrated to within 90 miles of Tel Aviv today, only the second time since the 1967 war they have hit so close to the Israeli capital. Cairo said they left their targets in flames.

Tel Aviv said Israeli interceptors caught the bombers after the raid and shot down two Soviet-made Ilyushin 28s, the first of their kind downed by Israel since the Middle East War. Cairo said only that one of its planes was hit.

An announcement from Egypt reported the targets as military objectives in two areas near El Arish, a Mediterranean coastal community half way between Tel Aviv and the Suez Canal on the Sinai Peninsula. It said "all targets were successfully set aflame."

Spokesmen for the Israeli Army said their bombs destroyed a cowbarn, an animal guarantine station and an ice factory, killing 30 sheep at the quarantine station. No civilian casualties were reported.

The fact that Ilyushins were used and that the raid occurred at 2 a.m. indicated a new tact by the Egyptians, whose previous air attacks have been virtually all in daylight by smaller, short-range jets.

Israel's air force answered the offensive in kind Friday with almost simultaneous raids against Syria, Egypt and Jordan—its three most militant Arab neighbors—the first such strikes since the 1967 war.

Cambodians Tow Away Viet Boats

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

In troubled Cambodia navy boats today began towing scores of Vietnamese houseboats and their occupants away from Phnom Penh and down the Bassac River.

There was no violence as the surprised Vietnamese were taken southward toward the junction with the Mekong River. But a Cambodian sailor would not say where the Vietnamese were being taken.

Fighting was reported in the town of Angtassom south of Phnom Penh for the third straight day. The neighboring provincial capital of Takeo, six miles to the southeast, was also believed to be under attack.

In Saigon about 100 disabled veterans shouting, "Down with Cambodia!" began a sit-in on the steps of the National Assembly building to protest reported massacres of Vietnamese civilians in Cambodia. Some 100 students occupied the former Cambodian Embassy in a similar protest.

South Korea indicated today it would consider providing military or other aid to the beleaguered Cambodian government if asked.

Cambodia has made a general request to friendly countries for military aid and has made a specific appeal to the United States.

In South Vietnam the enemy offensive launched April 1 has tapered off considerably, but informed military sources are expecting a resurgence of attacks by the beginning of May.

Official allied casualty summaries have reported 9,348 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed in the first three weeks of the offensive. In the same period, 380 American and 2,036 South Vietnamese troops were killed.

35 Children Vie In Spelling Bee

A 13-year-old Kentfield youth won first prize last night in the annual spelling bee for seventh and eighth grade parochial students in Marin sponsored by San Rafael Council 1292 of the Knights of Columbus.

Tony Trembley, an eighth grade student at St. Anselm's School in San Anselmo, won $25. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Trembley of 14 McAllister Avenue.

Second place and a $10 prize went to Carolyn Schlesselmann, also 13, a seventh grader at St. Patricks' School in Larkspur. Loretta Farley, 14, an eighth grader at St. Raphael's School in San Rafael, won third prize of $5.

The competition, which drew 35 students from nine schools, was held at St. Anselm's parish hall.

Sausalito's Flag Ordered On High

The flag at Martin Luther King School in Sausalito, which has flown at half-staff since last Wednesday as a protest to the Vietnam war, will be raised again, school officials decided yesterday.

Principal Sidney K. Walton and Vice Principal James T. Toliver issued a statement that said they would comply with a directive by Phillip W. Schneider, superintendent of the Sausalito School District, that the flag be raised.

The decision was announced after a 30-minute assembly at the school's gymnasium at which students, teachers and onlookers debated the pros and cons of raising the flag. Smaller group discussions then took place, after which the participants voted 134-109 to keep the flag at half-staff.

Citing the close vote as a "definite split in the sentiment of the students at this school," the black administrators said they were convinced that "those who oppose the overall direction of this school will use the flag issue to destroy what we have done."

The school's student council earlier had voted unanimously to raise the flag. It cited bomb threats at the school and the possibility that Walton might lose his job if the flag remained down.

Walton and Toliver said the decision to raise the flag was "contrary to our moral consicience" and accused those who fought its lowering of being "part of the structure which continues the process of killing people to solve the problems of mankind."

Students and teachers were allowed to address the gathering and about a dozen did. One student said he heard over an Oakland radio station that a man called the King office Thursday at 1 p.m. and threatened Walton and Toliver.

"This is a minuteman," the man reportedly said. "You have 24 hours to put the flag back up. We know where both of you live and you know we don't play."

Walton told the assembly that Virgil S. Hollis, county superintendent of schools, had been invited to chair the meeting but refused, saying that the meeting was "inappropriate" since Schneider already had instructed Walton to raise the flag.

Walton and Toliver said they thought the assembly and voting resulted in "tremendous educational benefits" for the students. "When they come to school Monday morning and look at the flag, regardless of its position on the flagpole," their statement concluded, "they will realize even more fully that people are dying in Vietnam."

rate of no more than 1.5 cents. "This flood control zone was set up for the maintenance of the main channel of Corte Madera Creek," he said and indicated he did not feel the cities should be forced to spend money on creek tributaries in unincorporated areas.

Merritt K. Robinson, president of the Sleepy Hollow Homeowners Association, said the unincorporated areas have no way of raising money to fight flooding, although cities have funds they can use.

The mayors complained that it wasn't fair to expect cities to pay for flood control outside their jurisdictions.

Hess countered that the flood control project should deal with problems of the whole district, rather than a piecemeal approach which separated city and county areas.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. proposed a compromise solution — the formation of a sub-zone for unincorporated areas which would allow them to be taxed separately for projects, so residents of towns and cities would not have to foot the bill for their problems.

Arrigoni's proposal would allow areas such as Kentfield to handle flood problems locally.

Mayor Frederick S. Allen of Ross complained that his town joined the flood control district on the condition that flooding problems on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and in Ross Commons would receive high priority, but said the community's problems have been ignored. He asked that money for the two areas be allocated in the new budget, but Hess said it would be impossible.

Arrigoni said that funds for Ross should not be budgeted, because there is a good chance that money can be obtained through the Army Corps of Engineers.

The meeting ended with no real agreement on the budget proposal.

Police Nab Suspected Speedy Thief

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Porsche-driving burglar, operating in Marin for the last five years, and always able to elude police in his speedy car, was arrested yesterday when San Francisco and Marin law officers broke down the door to his San Francisco apartment.

Inspector Robert Sisk of the Mill Valley Police Department said today that the suspect, Henry Garrison, 21, is responsible for more than 38 burglaries in Marin during the last five years.

Sausalito police and the county sheriff's office also were involved in the investigation, he said.

Garrison was booked in San Francisco on four counts of receiving stolen property and one count of possession of marijuana. No bail or a court appearance had been set today.

Garrison's girlfriend, Audrey Lee, 21, slammed the apartment door when she saw the officers yesterday. Police, armed with a search warrant, then broke down the door.

Some $60,000 in furs, jewelry, hi-fi equipment, guns and ammunition and other stolen property were recovered.

Wind Flips Auto

effort here," Tamaras said. To seek another firm would mean "we'd get second rate," he said.

District Engineer Robert E. Shields said that the firm would prepare a "handbook giving the best possible scheme" to coordinate the district's transit image as it gets into the transit business. Bus and ferry companies would be able to use the handbook as a guide for color and design features in their work for the district, he said.

Luerhing noted that Landor initially had proposed a $155,000 contract, but that the "scope of the work was boiled down."

Golden Gate District Bridge Directors also:

ATTORNEY — Set the annual retainer of their incoming attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins of San Carlos, at $17,500, the same paid the current attorney, Jerome B. White. Jenkins will start work July 1, when White retires as the district's attorney emeritus.

FERRY — Granted the district's ferry consultant, Philip F. Spaulding, a two-week extension to May 26 to complete plans for a ferry system to Marin. Spaulding asked for the delay to include new data on traffic projections.

AUDIT — Tabled the annual hiring of Arthur Young & Co. to audit district books after several directors objected a new firm should be considered to bring "new ideas" to the district's practices.

FLACK — Voted $1,000 to have a public relations firm prepare a scope, and invite proposals, on a public information program on the district's long-range transit plans.

MARIN — Adopted a formula setting Marin County's obligation to pay for the intracounty portion of the district's pending bus operation, the amount to be somewhere between $123,189 and about 260,000, depending on ridership.

SUBSIDY — Asked Marin County to continue subsidizing Marin Transit System, operator of the Southern Marin bus feeder service. The district's attorney ruled Thursday that the district could not consider the company's plea for a $12,000-a-month subsidy until the district was running its own transit system.

DETROIT — Approved sending members of the insurance committee to a Detroit meeting to explore pooling insurance coverage for major bridges throughout the nation. Bridges cannot get adequate coverage through conventional insurance.

PUBLIC — Adopted a policy allowing members of the public to address the board only with the unanimous consent of the directors.

COMMUTERS — Received a report from Luehring that over 1,600 of the 20,000 questionnaires given motorists last week had been returned, and that responses showed 60 per cent interested in car pools, 55 per cent in charter bus clubs, and 36 per cent in feeder bus service to a ferryboat.

MEETING — Reported the district's citizens committee would meet at 8 p.m. Thursday in Olney Hall, College of Marin, Kentfield, to work on the district's long-range transit plan.

really detailed discussion," Looney said.

"They didn't ask for any more meetings, and they said they'd be in touch with us. We are prepared to meet," he said.

Last night in San Rafael, Bay Area labor representatives met at Carpenters Hall to discuss strategy to end the strike and raised the possibility of a general Bay Area work stoppage.

A press release issued by the Marin Labor Council said the San Rafael meeting was attended by representatives from the Marin, Sonoma, Alameda, Contra Costa, San Francisco and Santa Clara labor councils, the Joint Council of Teamsters, and the Northern California International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

The statement said that the representatives passed a motion calling for a 25-man committee "to plan further action leading to Marin and Bay Area general work stoppages if it becomes necessary."

The committee will be appointed by Charles Weers, secretary of the Marin Labor Council, the statement said, and it was expected to meet early next week.

called by labor leaders to discuss the current strike against the I-J.

Police also reported today that a man identifying himself as a member of striking San Francisco Typographical Union 21 threatened the Marin Bay Lincoln Mercury dealership with damage if it continued to advertise in the newspaper.

"You'd better stop advertising in the I-J or put everything you got under cover because there will be more than just window damage," police said the caller told a secretary at the car dealership yesterday.

Bombs Mailed To Nixon, Draft Aide

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government agents have detected bombs mailed to President Nixon and Selective Service Director Curtis W. Tarr from "apparently the same source" in Seattle, the Post Office Department said Saturday.

A spokesman said Post Office inspectors are cooperating with the Secret Service and other government agencies in investigating the attempted bombings, but so far have no suspects. He said both bombs were believed to have come from the same source because of the similarity of the packages and types of bombs found in them.

leaders to push ahead with scientific achievements despite the country's many problems. Elsewhere in Washington, there was apprehension that Red China might be nearing the point where it could pose a military threat to the United States.

Diplomatic analysts in Hong Kong, without downgrading the military implications of the feat, said its biggest effect will be psychological and political.

These observers said it may do much to improve Red China's image as a major power abroad, and should help the leadership in Peking regain its domestic position, still weakened by the turmoil of the Cultural Revolution—or purge—which swept the mainland more than two years ago.

Radio Peking said the satellite—launched Friday night—weighed 173 kilograms or about 380.6 pounds. The news was obviously withheld until it was determined that the satellite was successfully spinning around the earth in its looping orbit.

The U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration confirmed that a new satellite was orbiting the earth. A spokesman said American equipment was tracking the vehicle.

feet long, cruises at 15 knots, and is very similar in design to the Harbor Emperor serving Tiburon.

The trip from downtown Sausalito to the Ferry Building would take 25 minutes, thus making possible almost hourly service seven days a week, Luehring said. With fares at 50 cents one-way, the ferry could break even after three months, he figured.

Terminals would bring the total capital investment to $702,000, plus the unexpected additional cost of the modifications. Temporary San Francisco terminal facilities will be available at the vacant heliport site at the Ferry Building, Luehring reported.

Marcus and a companion, Robert McKinstry, 19, of 40 Millside Lane, Mill Valley, were arrested after they sold thousands of LSD tablets to federal narcotics agents at the Seven Seas Restaurant.

McKinstry, who pleaded guilty to a similar charge April 3, is scheduled to appear in district court Tuesday for sentencing.

College Strife Costs Mount

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Trouble—some serious, some silly—continued at college campuses across the nation Friday.

Arson-caused fire destroyed the life work of several scholars at a Stanford University center Friday. The Stanford fire chief said an inflammable substance was thrown through the center's windows shortly after 125 anti-ROTC demonstrators were ejected from another building.

At the other extreme, police arrested 22 persons at the University of Dayton in Ohio after about 500 students participated in a rockthrowing demonstration "celebrating the end of the semester."

The damage at Stanford's center for advanced study in behavioral sciences was placed at nearly $100,000, but one of the persons whose work was damaged said, "You can't measure the damage in terms of dollars, but rather in terms of what a man has spent his whole life producing and thinking about."

Indian anthropologist M. R. Srinivas, whose mother died earlier this week, was among those who had their life work in the building. A colleague said, "What is lost it the irreplaceable product of a great scientist from India where his science is sorely needed.

About 100 students and faculty at the University of Hawaii occupied two ROTC buildings for the second night to press demands that ROTC be removed from the campus. University President Harlan Cleveland said he hoped to end the demonstration without calling in police but said he would resort to force if violence erupted.

In New York, helmeted police carrying nightsticks cleared the lobby and halls of Hunter College of campus militants who had shut down elevators, looted the cafeteria and kicked in the doors to the office of President Jacqueline G. Wexler.

At Pennsylvania State University, student government leaders called for a strike by the school's 48,000 students to protest a decision by trustees not to grant amnesty to 37 persons arrested earlier in campus demonstrations.

Tomales Bay Fill Request Before County Planners

A request to fill tideland property next to the Marshall Tavern on the east shore of Tomales Bay will go before the Marin County Planning Commission Monday.

The all-day meeting of the commission will start at 9 a.m. on the third floor of the Civic Center.

The fill is sought by Sven B. Berg, who owns 1.6 acres of tidelands at the site. Berg wants to install an eight-foot high retaining wall about 35 feet into the bay, and fill behind it to make space for summer homes.

County planner John Hau said he would recommend against the fill. If homes are to be built, they should be on pilings with just enough fill to provide for offstreet parking and septic systems, said Hau.

County planners will also consider a request for rezoning to put in a campsite for trailer campers in the Horshoe-Paradise Valley section of Bolinas.

Claude and Louise Powell own about 17 acres on the west side of Upper Road between Pine Gulch Road and Lauff Ranch Roady. They want the zoning changed from limited agricultural to resort-commercial.

The area is surrounded by one-family homes on large sites of three to five acres.

Painter Reports Bridge Plunge

An unidentified man apparently leaped to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge yesterday.

Bridge painter James Wilkins told the California Highway Patrol he heard something hit the water about 12:45 p.m. He said he saw the body of an adult man floating just below the bridge.

The Coast Guard unsuccessfully searched for the man's body, which apparently sank in just a few minutes. The body had not been found as of this morning, the highway patrol said.

Officers said they had no clues to the identity of the victim. No abandoned cars have been found, they said.

WHITE HOUSE FRACAS—Chicago Seven member Abbie Hoffman, suited and neatly shorn, claims he's a "bodyguard" for Jefferson Airplane singer Grace Slick, in a White House confrontation at which he and Miss Slick attempted to attend a tea given by Tricia Nixon. After a tussle with guards yesterday (below), Hoffman and friend left while he shouted obscenities.

(UPI Telephotos)

Abbie Hoffman Bounced From White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To the startled looks of 300 kid-gloved ladies, Abbie Hoffman proved at the White House Friday that the shearing of his locks did not clip his style.

Shouting obscenities, Hoffman was muscled away from a White House gate when he tried to crash a ladies-only tea party being given by Tricia Nixon for fellow alumnae of Finch College.

Hoffman, one of the flamboyant Chicago Seven defendants, arrived with pop singer Grace Slick. He claimed to be her bodyguard and said he was armed.

"I wouldn't let Miss Slick go in there alone," he said. "I understand they lose a President every three years. It's a dangerous place."

His hair still short — by hippie standards — from barbering at the Cook County (Ill.) Jail, Hoffman wore a conservative suit, white shirt and tie.

But after his altercation at the gate, he scooted across the street to a waiting car, stripping off his coat and tie.

Miss Slick, dressed in a leather jacket and boots, a purple midi-length skirt and a see-through black crocret top with no bra, dashed behind him.

Tricia, receiving her guests in the Gold Room, was unperturbed. She said Hoffman would have been welcome.

"Except, of course, he's not a Finch Alumna," she said. "If he had been, we would have been glad to have him."

Miss Slick, then known aas Grace Wing, spent the 1957-58 academic year at the exclusive girl's school in New York City.

She is presently a member of the Jefferson Airplane rock group.

BOLINAS-STINSON STRIFE

Most, Not All, Students Doing Well

complete covers for a book put out by the youngsters containing stories, poems, essays and a play on subjects ranging from an unsuccessful inventor to how the rhinoceros got his horn.

A group of youngsters worked to complete a poem on pollution, while a couple of boys prepared a chart to show how a ton of garbage could be recycled into useful materials.

A few students put finishing touches on a student newspaper which they had asked to publish. Other students worked intently to complete workbook assignments, while others sat in the sun reading books.

The children are planning a project to collect aluminum cans and stockpile them at the school until a plant to recycle the cans is completed in Hayward next year.

But, in the midst of all the activity, two boys sat in a bored fashion in the shade of a tree, then spent about 15 minutes throwing rocks at the side of a hill.

While most of the students (chiefly fourth, fifth and sixth graders) worked happily and enthusiastically, the two youngsters appeared completely disenchanted with all the projects. Although they appeared to be a distinct minority that day, the pair are part of an as-yet unsolved problem at Stinson Beach School — children who find the new, unstructured, self-directed learning situation unpalatable and have not been able to adjust.

William Niman, a teacher at the school, an intense, personable young man whose long hair has drawn the epithet of "hippie" from a few parents, watched the boys with concerned eyes.

"They are a problem we are worried about too," he observed. "It's true that a few students are having difficulty with this approach, but look at how many students are completely turned off by traditional school and eventually drop out . . .

"A student must be educated to this kind of learning; that is why it is so important that this system start in kindergarten before a youngster's natural spirit and desire to learn has been stifled."

He pointed out the new system has only been operative in the district for seven months and admitted: "we still have problems to work out."

Both Niman and the school's head teacher, Nancy Sullivan, an articulate motherly-looking woman, are enthusiastic about what is happening in Stinson and Bolinas schools, though aware of the problems. "There is more going on here than I have ever experienced on an elementary level," Mrs. Sullivan, an eight-year teaching veteran, said.

The teachers admitted they have not given any conventional tests to the students this year — a major bone of contention with some parents who say they do not know how their youngsters are doing.

"We know the kids so well, we don't need to," Mrs. Sullivan said. "You can tell if a child is learning if he is enthusiastic about his work, if he is reading more advanced books, performing more difficult tasks.

However, she agreed that teachers "probably should and probably will" give tests next year. "That way you can prove to the community that learning is taking place," she said.

Many parents in both communities are more than anxious to find out.

"Look at the kids," Mrs. Sullivan said pointing out the window where about 20 students were engrossed (on their own) in various individual projects. "Youngsters want to do — they don't like to just sit; papers and pencils and charts are not the only way to learn."

Both teachers stressed that basic subjects like reading and math are not being slighted in the new program. "The morning is fairly structured and we study reading, writing and math," Mrs. Sullivan said. "Parents have a right to expect results from their children's going to school," she said.

"An individualized program should provide a good education for all children," she contined, "but we can't expect even close to perfection the first year."

"But this is the direction we have to move in," Mrs. Sullivan said. "And this isn't just our view — most of the great educators of today are saying the same thing."

While Niman said most of the parents whose children attend Stinson are "delighted with what is happening," he admitted some are fearful and hostile. "But it takes time to orient the entire community to a great change like this."

"We are teaching our children for more than classes at Tamalpais High School — although we expect them to be well-prepared for those too'," Niman said. "We are teaching them how to teach themselves, how to learn and discipline themselves; we are teaching them for life."

He contentedly surveyed his charges. "This is what a school should be," he said happily.

Fairfax Councilman Ends 72-Hour Term; Plans Commissioner Quits

Robert R. Souza was reseated last night on the Fairfax City Council and Albert E. Gately stepped down from the seat he had occupied only 72 hours.

Criticism of the election system which had produced a 40-vote discrepancy between the election night tally and a recount Thursday, champagne for off-again-on-again Councilman Souza, and the resignation of a city planning commissioner marked the meeting.

Commissioner Leo T. Cronin of 12 San Gabriel Court submitted his oral resignation to the council.

He said he had been on the commission for six years, and been an outspoken proponent of the Fairfax master plan and the rezoning needed to bring it about.

With the results of the election, he said, he felt he could no longer put his "best foot forward."

Gately, chairman of the planning commission, had strongly supported the master plan and the need for planning in general during the campaign. Both Souza and Lee Nelder, also elected April 14, said during the campaign that they had reservations about the master plan.

Mayor Frank J. Egger asked Cronin to submit his resignation in writing.

Before leaving the council last night, Gately, in a short speech, again stressed the need for planning.

He said if a step-by-step program to solve Fairfax's street and drainage problems is not developed, the city will one day find itself faced with "castastrophic conditions."

He urged the council to give serious attention to planning, saying, "We owe it to the citizens now and to the generations that will follow us."

Gately then moved that his seat be declared vacant. The council agreed unanimously, Gately stepped down, and Souza was sworn back into the council seat he has held for six years.

Egger re-opened nominations for the positions of mayor and mayor pro tem to which he and Councilman Cornelis Van Vliet were elected Tuesday. They were reelected last night by unanimous votes, except for Van Vliet's vote against himself.

Saying "in behalf of the many people who believed in him and never for a minute doubted his right to the seat he has," Roberta Laidly of 34 Meadow Way then presented Souza with a red, white and blue ribboned bottle of champagne topped with a small American flag.

E. Ross Parkerson of 70 Manor Road criticized the competence of election officials.

In the election night tally, Gately, third in the race for three seats, had led Souza by three votes. The recount gave Souza a seven-vote margin over Gately.

At one precinct alone — precinct 2020 which voted at Central School — the recount showed Gately with 19 less votes than the original count, Souza with nine less, Nelder with five less, and James K. Hennington, who finished sixth in the field of seven, with two more votes.

Parkerson also mentioned that the cost of the recount, because it proved Souza a winner, must be borne by the city.

Van Vliet said that it was the county, not the city, that appointed the election officials.

City Administrator Frances Lestanguet said she had already talked with Peter C. Meyer, county elections officer, and "he was very concerned about it."

She said she had asked Meyer to dismiss the two poll workers at Central School.

Councilman Francis J. O'Connell said some type of election machine or a better training program for election workers is needed.

"The mistakes are practically built in," Nelder said, "It's the system that has to be changed." He commended the five women who served on the recount board.

Marin Misses Draft Quota: None Go At All

Marin County set a record of sorts this month when none of the 12 men ordered to report for armed services duty was inducted.

Joy Kinzer, executive secretary of the Marin Selective Service board, said it was the first time Marin has batted zero after ordering men to the Oakland Induction Center.

A Selective Service official in Sacramento said his records showed that 15 men were selected, but explained there may be some duplication.

Ben Wilson, public information officer for Selective Service in Sacramento, gave this tally from his figures: seven failed to report, two failed to cooperate, two refused induction, one walked out of the center, two were found to be unqualified and one whose status is uncertain.

The two who failed to cooperate, the pair who refused induction and the one who walked out may account for the discrepancy between the Marin and state figures, Wilson said.

Officials declined to reveal the identify of the 12.

The county draft quota for May is 39 but will be held to two men with lottery numbers under 145, Mrs. Kinzer said.

Warner Ridge Plan On Agenda

The Mill Valley Planning Commission will consider a master plan for a 62-acre residential development proposed by William E. Cullen on Warner Ridge when it meets Monday at 8 p.m. in city hall.

Also on the agenda is a request by Cal-Fong Investment Co. to construct a development in the Alto Bowl with a density of 5.4 dwelling units per acre when the city's general plan calls for a density of 3.

The commission also will consider a use permit to reconstruct an Atlantic Richfield service station at 789 Redwood Highway.

$110,000 Decree In Divorce Order

The wife of former San Rafael publicist Peter L. Goldstein has won an uncontested dissolution of their marriage in Marin Superior Court.

Vivian B. Goldstein was granted a $100,000 trust fund for herself and their two children in a property settlement. She is also to receive a $10,000 down payment on a house to be selected by her.

In 1968 Goldstein received a settlement of $361,995 for serious injuries sustained in a two-car accident on Highway 101 on Oct. 19, 1965.

Joint Session For Rohnert Park

Park development plans and the hiring of a full-time recreation director will be considered Monday at 7:30 p.m. at a joint meeting of the Rohnert Park City Council and recreation commission.

The landscape architectural firm of Ribera and Sue will present preliminary plans for park development. The possibility of providing funds for a full-time recreation director to replace part-time director Thomas West in July will also be considered.

West, a college student, would remain employed to direct activities at the swimming pools, City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan has said.

John Massen, president of the Northern California Council of the United Nations Association, will speak at the annual public membership meeting of the Marin chapter of the association Friday at 8 p.m. at Alexander Hall of the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Handling Temper Tantrums Easy—Just Let Them Cry

A young child usually cries when he is angry. Let him get it out of his system, because if he is well fed, free from physical pain, and has not been agitated by someone, no harm is done. Now and then in the midst of violent crying, the tyke will suddenly stop breathing for 30 or more seconds.

Mother is likely to push the panic button, especially if his face turns blue, the extremities twitch, and the youngster loses consciousness. There is no need for concern because breathing begins spontanenously—as soon as the child can no longer hold his breath or passes out. The best remedy is to ignore the emotional outburst.

AS THE CHILD grows older, he expresses anger by sullenness or irritability. Temper tantrums also represent resentment and are often associated with frustration. These bouts occur when junior does not get his own way, is deprived of an object, or is asked to do something he does not want to do. Parents who are overly protective and too solicitous unwittingly encourage the outbursts.

Reasoning is futile and punishment rarely successful. The tantrum should be met with calm firmness and indifference. These attacks of screaming and kicking are prone to occur at the age of resistance (from 18 to 24 months of age). And, they are less likely to occur when the parents recognize this state and avoid situations that are likely to produce the reaction. The child who is ill or tired usually is irritable.

MORE THAN a year ago, President Johnson's special assistant for consumer affairs told women at a luncheon to "scream, shout, carry on, and complain" when they do not get what they pay for. There is a growing tendency for government to treat us like children, but this is the first time we have been told to throw a tantrum when we do not get what we want.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

RESTLESS LIMBS

J. A. writes: Please write about nervousness in the lower legs and what causes it. Is there a cure? I am a very calm person otherwise.

REPLY

You may be suffering from the restless limbs syndrome that develops in some people when the legs are immobile. In this disorder there may be an aching, crawling, or restless sensation in the lower extremities. Relief is obtained on movement. Distress is usually worse when abed at night or after sitting for a long time with the legs in a dependent position. Aspirin is an effective remedy.

BAREHEADED

A. L. writes: One cold day I asked five boys (none wearing hats) if they felt a chill and they all answered in the affirmative. Now, I ask you, is it healthy for boys (or the rest of us) to go bareheaded in winter?

REPLY

You neglected to ask these lads whether they were healthy or how often they got sick. Considerable body heat is lost thru the bare head, and I am sure they'd feel warmer if they wore a hat.

BUERGER'S DISEASE

H. A. writes: Is Buerger's disease the same as hardening of the arteries of the legs?

REPLY

There is considerable evidence that Buerger's is a form of early arteriosclerosis. But regardless of definition, both conditions impair circulation to the legs. Our leaflet on Buerger's disease can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

AREA GRAYNESS

Mr. M. writes: I'm 67 years old and do not have a gray hair on my scalp. But the beard I am cultivating is coming out gray. Why?

REPLY

Depigmentation of the hair follows various patterns. Some persons are gray all over whereas others are gray only in certain areas. Many whitehaired women, for example, have a dark streak at the nape of the neck.

SUPPLEMENTARY THYROID

M.G. writes: Why are thyroid tablets needed after a person's goiter is removed?

REPLY

Because the small part of the gland that remains does not supply enough thyroid secretion to make the body work efficiently.

SPONGING FOR FEVER

Mrs. R.P. writes: Should a child who has a fever, be sponged in cold water?

REPLY

Yes, but only if the temperature goes sky high.

Today's Health Hint — Donating blood is a safe and simple procedure.

Ross Open House

Ross School will hold its open house in connection with Public Schools Week from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. next Thursday, not on Tuesday as incorrectly listed recently in the Independent-Journal calandar of schools week events.

In 1898 Congress formally declared war on Spain.

In 1901 New York became the first state to require automobile license plates. 954 cars were registered.

In 1945 delegates from 46 nations met in San Francisco to organize a permanent United Nations.

A thought for the day: American Poet Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "Every sweet has its sour, every evil its good."

Sidewalk Sale Plans Studied

Further plans for a two-day sidewalk sale June 5-6 have been discussed by the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce board, according to office secretary Esther Squire.

Sales people will be wearing farm clothes to carry out the "Country Fair Days" theme, she said.

San Anselmo Avenue will be closed from Tamalpais Avenue to Tunstead Avenue from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. June 6. Music and entertainment will be transported up and down the street on a flat bed truck from 1 to 3 p.m.

In This Situation, Better To Receive Than Hand Out

When an opponent has a choice of finesses, it's only natural to hope that he picks the wrong one. If he picks the finesse that works, do you scowl and break an ash tray or two? Or do you smile a nd congratulate him on his skill and flair for the game? I don't recommend either course.

IN DUMMY

Declarer won the first trick in dummy with the king of hearts, and East signaled encouragement with the ten of hearts. South returned a club from dummy and played the king from his hand.

West took the ace of clubs and led a heart to dummy's ace. Now declarer stared at the dummy and wondered which black finesse to take.

If East had the king of spades, declarer could take the trump finesse and could later afford to lose one heart and one diamond in addition to the club already lost. If East had the jack of clubs, South could take a finesse with the ten of clubs and discard dummy's losing heart on the queen of clubs.

SENSES PROBLEM

As South stared at the dummy, West sensed declarer's problem. Naturally, West rooted for declarer to try the trump finesse. But South finally led a club and boldly put in the ten of clubs.

The rest was easy, and West warmly congratulated South for his winning decision. Very noble, wasn't it?

JUST A COVER

Not at all. West was covering up. If West had refused the first club trick he'd have been receiving congratulations instead of handing them out.

Suppose South wins the second trick with the king of clubs. He must get to dummy to lead another club. South's only chance is to lead a diamond, but West steps up with the ace of diamonds to lead another heart. And now South is doomed.

Selling Out The Public In Name Of Postal Reform

President Nixon handed the Congress a rather remarkable package in what he calls the "Postal Reorganization and Salary Adjustment Act of 1970."

The bill (House Resolution 17070) came on the heels of the walkout of postal employees, which stirred the lawmakers and the administration to take some action about complaints over inadequate salaries which they had been ignoring for a long time.

But the "Postal Reorganization and Salary Adjustment Act of 1970" goes far beyond meeting the salary demands. It exceeds them. And it does a lot of other things.

IT PROPOSES to recast the postal service along new lines; to increase postage rates sharply, with the biggest bite put on the private citizen who sends letters and cards to friends and business firms. And it proposes to introduce into the government service for the first time the principle of compulsory unionism.

Although the package was presented to Congress by the President, and is being pushed as the solution to making the Post Office Department self-supporting by Postmaster General Winton M. Blount, apparently much of it was written at neither White House nor Post Office Department, but at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations.

ITS PROVISIONS (probably apart from the rate increases, which were changed somewhat after the outcry over the first proposal for a four-cent hike in the letter rate) came out of a conference of Blount with George Meany, AFL-CIO president.

When the conference agreement was announced at the White House, it dealt only with the pay raise. And when a reporter asked what else was included, he was told by John D. Ehrlichman, counsel to the President:

"These things were not announced here. They were announced over at the AFL-CIO as the number of terms of this settlement agreement."

Somewhat flabbergasted, the reporter asked: "The AFL-CIO is announcing what the government is doing?"

And Ehrlichman replied: "That is the place where the announcement was made."

IT WAS INDEED. And in making it, Meany said with pride that the agreement would permit collective bargaining on "all matters subject to collective bargaining in the private sector." He called this "a major breakthrough" for all government employees.

The bill specifies that postal workers may refrain from union activity "except to the extent that such right may be affected by an agreement requiring membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment."

This means that every postal worker would have to join a union. About one-third of them are not now union members.

This would mean also a sizeable increase in the $1.3 million per month union dues received from postal workers. Further, it would open the door for compulsory unionism for all government employees, federal, state, and local.

THE BILL also would put control of the Post Office Department under a postmaster general appointed by nine "commissioners of postal costs and revenues" appointed by the President. And to advise this commission, it would set up a 13-member advisory council of whom four "would represent major mail users."

This last should assure that future rate changes will follow the pattern set by the bill, which calls for an immediate two-cent hike for every letter, a whopping 18-cent increase in the basic charge for parcel post, but only a cent a pound increase for "controlled circulation" throwaways and only six cents a pound for bulk mailings of advertising matter.

IT WOULD BE FAR, far cheaper to give the postal workers the 12 per cent pay boost they asked in the first place, and forget the rest of the package.

As for the reorganization making the Post Office Department self-supporting by 1978, as Nixon and Blount claim it would, the indications seem quite the opposite. A Post Office Department with compulsory unionism on the one hand and a governing board heavily weighted with "junk mail" users on the other could scarcely be expected to accomplish such a result.

In the name of giving a merited pay raise to postal workers, Meany, Blount and Nixon seem willing to sell the American public down the river.

Hummingbirds

Hummingbirds seem supernatural, rather magical, elfin creatures. The iridescence of their feathers, their magnificent up and down, side to side, backward and forward maneuverability, their tireless wings so swift in motion they are a blur to the eye, the fact they live on flower nectar, and their tiny size—all together give the impression of other worlds, of fey spirits.

Our few year 'round hummingbirds are being joined by fellows who winter in Guatemala and points south. They play chicken with each other in front of the azaleas and early-blooming fuchsias.

Bright bits out of Nature's imagination.

TRY AND STOP ME

A kind and considerate doctor in Texas has come up with a way to extricate yourself from an automobile when you're caught in a sudden downpour. "Sometimes the doors get stuck at a time like this," the good doctor reminds us. "If that be the case, roll down the window. The water will pour in immediately. Wait until the compartment is full, take a deep breath—and swim out." Voila!

A tough old sergeant faced a new group of ill-assorted draftees with an anticipatory gleam in his eyes. "Remember, soldiers," he began, "this man's army is more democratic than it used to be. Today, no matter how distasteful an order to you may be, no matter how angrily I may bawl you out—you now have the right of every American citizen to have the last word."

The sergeant paused for a moment to let this unexpected bit of information make its impact. Then he added, "That last word is 'Yes, SIR.' "

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Infant's Death Deeply Disturbing

The details of the death of the Lampiris baby as given in the April 15 edition would bear serious thought by all those concerned about the future of our country. They were as follows:

1. The 5-month-old infant had been living for four days in a 6-by-6 tent with its parents and two other young men at a cold, windy campsight on the slopes of Mt. Tam.

2. The baby, when pronounced dead of asphyxiation at the hospital, was found to have several broken ribs and severe contusions on the face and body.

3. The baby had been released from a San Francisco hospital less than two weeks before, after having been treated for a broken rib and two black eyes. . .

4. The mother of the child, aged 17, claimed that the baby had been fine when she put him to bed in the tent the night of his death. She has no explanation for his death or injuries. . .

5. The two young parents had come to California from Wisconsin about two months prior to the baby's death and were living on welfare. They had been married only since last December.

Those infatuated with the cult of "hippyism," the new "morality," and the so-called welfare state will, I am sure, find an explanation for this incident that satisfies them. But what about the rest of us? Can we also ignore or explain away a social climate which spawns such completely amoral and utterly irresponsible young adults?. . .

. . . God help America if the trend continues! Isn't it about time those of us who are concerned get off our posteriors and demand an accounting. . .from every part of our society which seems to contribute in some way to it — laxness in law enforcement, maudlin and incompetent welfare officials, cold-blooded hospital authorities, schools which teach a great deal about individual human rights but little or nothing about the duties which accompany such rights or basic morality?. . .

Some Plain Words For Window Breaker

When I came into my shop this morning (April 20) and discovered my front window broken, needless to say my Irish was instantly called upon, plus when I found out my insurance didn't cover it and I would have to pay $350, my heart sank a little. That's a lot of money to a small business. Well anyway I want this letter published in the I-J because even though my financial spirits have greatly been dampened my fighting spirits haven't.

An open letter to the union goons or goon responsible for my plate glass display window being broken:

I would really like to know what type of a person are you. What do you look like? How do you dress? Are you a father? Do you go to church? Or do you even know right from wrong? Do you ever venture out during the daylight hours or just in the night to do your dirty work? Because I've got a few things to say to you.

First of all let me tell you that you creeps made your point. Second if I were a man I'd like to meet you in person and knock the hell out of you.

But most important let me tell you, people like you apes have been using these Nazi tactics for years and years and usually on the little guy, but if you think for one minute it will solve your problems, Buster I've got news for you!

Names In Editorial Draw Objection

"They nave no payed (sic) society twice."

In your editorial of April 17, regarding narcotic offenses and punishments, you presented public information, quite legally, however, far from the reality of the situation.

By printing the names of offenders you have contributed to the burden of these young persons who are searching for jobs or careers. Thus, you continue to reveal your poor relations to individuals and the family's (sic) for the sake of the mass, and the media, and I believe you are wrong.

Whereas, once such young people were assured that remaining in school and getting a diploma would secure a job, today's situation of "gaps" and such can only reveal to our youth that the use of a potentially "good," not to mention "powerful" media, is in fact failing the people. . .

LINES ON LIVING

Man, Not God, Is Dead As He Becomes Proxy

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

If the purpose of religion is to justify man to God and to "prepare the ways of the Lord and make straight His paths," then the purpose of psychology is to justify man to himself and prepare himself for those ways and straight paths. Religion, it has been wisely noted, deals with saving his soul, while psychology is preoccupied with saving his mind.

The dilemma of modern man, however, is not so much that life is a problem — man himself has become the problem. And the crisis of religion today is not that "God is dead," only that the image-God which we have hitherto worshipped is dead — the symbol is in a mess. Like life itself, we have compartmentalized, institutionalized and popularized God to a stifling formula. We have often buried Him, as we entomb life itself, under heaps of words and empty rites that bore us to death by their routine and rasping paganism. For how else can you explain the paradox that while life has become easier and more comfortable to live, it had become at the same time less durable and promising because for all our freedoms and our creative sciences, we are disjointed in our inner lives — enslaved to a computeriezd system in which the individual is just another zero in a dizzying numbers game?

WHAT IS HAPPENING, to contemporary man is not that life is less attractive than it used to be. On the contrary, it is far more exciting and exhilarating. Only that man himself has become a bore — to himself. He has luxury and abundance, but it's insipid and indigestible; he has more leisure time but spends it in an outer space, and not in the inner space of his own individual person, thus finding himself lost in orbit, weightless, soulless. He is forever preoccupied with public relations, craving to create an image for himself, instead of cultivating his private relations, toward creative imagination. Little wonder then that so many of our young "cop out" of a society which they consider to imprison the individual in institutionalized functions, rendering the whole person into a "type", a functionary, instead of a fully creative and unfolding individual!

The organization man in Lou Albee's description is a sad commentary on contemporary life. After being unemployed for nearly two years, with the exception of a few temporary jobs, the man said: "One good thing is that I have achieved a new identity. When people asked me to identify myself, I used to say that I was vice president of General Merchandise Co., and I though that was pretty important. Now I say I am John Smith."

JOHN SMITH, and many like him, living by proxy of his merchandising company, and apparently by proxy of his religious institution, has found most of his life jaded and listless. For he is living in a society that has institutionalized both man and God — dehumanizing his humanity and humanizing his God, to deadly proportions. In the process, he lost his identity until he became a mere shadow: a ghost of a man; and his God: a man's ghost.

Dubcek Socialism Continues To Be Dream Of Europeans

VIENNA — During a visit to this important listening post for all of eastern Europe, Frank Shakespeare, head of the United State Information Agency, summoned the chiefs of information from communist capitals. They came from Warsaw, Bucharest, Budapest, Sofia and Prague.

As the conference concluded Shakespeare put the following question to each of the USIA mission chiefs: If the people in the country where you're stationed could have a free choice of the form of society under which they would prefer to live, what would be their choice?"

WITHOUT EXCEPTION they replied, "Dubcek socialism." They were referring, of course, to the program of liberalization that Alexander Dubcek had undertaken to carry through in Czechoslovakia. Under the Dubcek program the essential features of a socialist economy would have been retained while press and public opinion would have been freed from dictatorial control.

Shakespeare, the hard-sell Madison Avenue success boy, is said to have suffered something resembling cultural shock from the unanimity of these replies. This couldn't be. What about private enterprise? Capitalism? And, if this was the end result, what was the value of American propaganda over the years?

As the Russian invasion of Prague proved in August of 1968, Dubcek's dream was an impossible dream. He was swept away by the ruthless force of Russian tanks and troops. The former first secretary of the Czech Communist Party is, in effect, in exile as Czech ambassador to Turkey.

Yet the specialists on Eastern Europe here in Vienna are in accord that the Dubcek dream has a powerful appeal.

A REALIST in these matters is Bruno Kreisky, the tough-minded leader of the Austrian Social Democrats, who has just had the audacity to form a minority socialist government. He was approached in May, 1968, by a Dubcek envoy from Prague, "You will never succeed," Kreisky said to the envoy. "The Russians will never allow you to liberalize, even though you retain the elements of a socialist economy."

Three months later Kreisky's prophecy was proved all too correct. The response here throughout virtually the entire political spectrum, including even some leaders of the Austrian Communist Party, was one of indignation.

Moscow entered a formal protest over the attacks in press, radio and television. The Russians resisted holding the second round of the strategic arms limitation talks in Vienna. It took a great deal of persuasion on the part of Gerard C. Smith, chief American delegate, to have the current session convened in the Austrian capital.

IN AUSTRIA, where the Marshall Plan really worked and where there is a continuing sense of the contribution of American aid in restoring the economy, the degree of anti-American feeling is probably less than in any other European country.

While it is most unlikely that the Russians would try to use force in neutral Austria, in that event Kreisky is convinced that the response would be a total nationwide strike, paralyzing every facility and bringing a halt to all forms of transportation. This would present an occupying force with great difficulties.

ART BUCHWALD

It's Great To Have An Expert On What We're Doing In Asia

WASHINGTON — There's this fellow at the National Press Club bar and he's always briefing me on what is going on in Southeast Asia.

"Did you hear that President Nixon is going to pull 150,000 more Americans out of Vietnam?"

"That's good," I said.

"Well it's not exactly good," the fellow replied, "because he didn't indicate when he was going to do it. He did say it would be within the next year."

"That's not bad."

"IT COULD BE BAD for the Democrats."

"How's that?"

"He might pull out 50 soldiers now and 149,950 just before the elections in November."

"I see," I said.

"No you don't. Although the President said he would pull out the 150,000 troops within the next year, he also said he would be influenced by what happened in Cambodia and Laos."

"That's good." I said.

"IT COULD BE BAD. If the war spreads into Cambodia and Laos, we might be obligated to stay out there."

"I should hope so. Hey, why are the Cambodians killing the Vietnamese civilians?"

"Because they hate them."

"But doesn't that make it very embarrassing for us, since Cambodia is asking for U.S. military aid?"

"It doesn't help."

"I would think if we gave Cambodia military aid and they used it to kill Vietnamese civilians, the South Vietnamese wouldn't be too happy about it."

"THEY AREN'T dancing in the streets of Saigon. But killing civilians is the price you have to pay for freedom in Southeast Asia."

"What can the Americans do to stop the Cambodians from killing the civilians?"

"The best thing we can do is bomb the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos."

"I was going to ask you about Laos. What the hell are we doing there?"

"We weren't doing anything until Senator Symington's committee shot off their big mouths. Our story now is we're preventing the Viet Cong from using Laos to get the upper hand in Cambodia."

"That's good."

"THE ONLY TROUBLE is that the Royal Laotian Army is not very well trained at the moment and so we have to use Meo tribesmen as mercenaries."

"That's interesting. If the Meo tribesmen fight for Laos, won't the other Laotians be miffed?"

"Not if it helps South Vietnam."

"I almost forgot about South Vietnam."

"YOU SEE, things are much brighter now that the South Vietnamese can knock out the Communists' staging areas in Cambodia, which until recently were off limits to them."

"That's good."

"It's good only if Pnom Penh doesn't fall."

"Pnom Penh?"

"That's the capital of Cambodia."

"What's to prevent Pnom Penh from falling?"

The man seemed disgusted with my ignorance. "Two Royal Army battalions from Thailand, stupid."

Schultz Should Be Restored To Post

Tuesday was indeed a sad day in the political life of Marin County. An outstanding public servant was unceremoniously replaced on the Marin County Planning Commission. No legitimate reason for his replacement could possible be found.

The behind-the-scenes efforts of a few hard-core, selfish, single-purpose individuals were apparently successful in applying sufficient political pressure to force the removal of Mr. Niels Schultz Jr.

With 14 years of unselfish, devoted service in helping to keep Marin a lovely place in which to live, Niels Schultz has gained the respect of all concerned Marinites. Perhaps those few individuals who caused his removal could not control his vote. There can be no other legitimate reason for the pressures they must have exerted on an elected public official . . . .

Marin County cannot afford to lose the services of this dedicated man. The vast majority of Marinites cannot be cheated by the political mania of a few. For the good of all Marin, the board of supervisors can and should find a way to reappoint Mr. Schultz to the planning commission. I have confidence that they, in their wisdom, will do so post haste.

California Water Plan Faces Environment Challenge

By JACK V. FOX
U.P. International

The nation's sudden environmental awareness is setting up a historic confrontation in California where the world's vastest water project is threatened on grounds it will attract millions more people and turn the state's southern section into one giant smog-ridden Los Angeles.

The idea of abandoning the $3 billion California Water Project at this late date, with 90 per cent complete or under construction, appears at first glance preposterous. The chances are it will never happen.

But it is coming under growing attack from articulate politicians and conservationist groups who are chewing away at certain sections of the giant water transport scheme and hitting the whole concept with the argument that the present rate of growth is dangerous and that southern California needs Air, not water.

The project is describable only in superlatives.

It eventually would bring enough water 700 miles from the northern Sierra Nevada to central and Southern California each year to cover the state of Rhode Island to a depth of six feet.

One concrete aqueduct will be 444 miles long. This man-made "river" is 200 feet wide, 35 feet deep and stretches a greater distance than the Rhine.

The key Oroville Dam, already in operation is the world's highest earthfill dam at 770 feet and has a mass 10 times greater than Egypt's six biggest pyramids. The pumping stations which will lift 110 million gallons an hour 1,926 feet over the Tehachapi Mountains is hailed as one of the world's engineering marvels.

Authorized by the legislature 10 years ago and approved by popular vote that same year with a go-ahead for floating huge bond issues, the complex is now two-thirds operational although the Southern California leg taking more than half the flow will not be open until 1971.

Thirty-one water agencies have signed contracts and some have already paid the state $120 million in anticipation of water supplies. Bonds totalling $1 billion have been marketed with a built-in pledge of amortization through revenue from the customers.

A U.S. Supreme Court decision in 1963 sharply reduced the amount of water that Southern California, and particularly Los Angeles, has been receiving from the Colorado River on the Arizona border 300 miles away. That supply is expected to be cut in half by the middle 1970s.

Projections are that southern California's population will jump from its 11.3 million to 14.6 million in 1980, 17.5 million in 1990 and 20.5 million by the year 2,000.

Seventy per cent of California's water is in the north. Seventy per cent of the people are in the south.

The project enthusiasts say it will make the desert bloom, create vast new agricultural fields, furnish water for new cities to lessen the concentration in Los Angeles.

Abandonment or sharp curtailment of the project now would have "catastrophic consequences," they say. Gov. Ronald Reagan has pledged that his administration will "do all in its power to see that the California Water Project is completed on schedule."

The opponents concede the consequences of a shutdown would be extreme. But they argue that completion of the Southern California section — which will take by 1980 a total of 2.497 million of the overall flow of 4.230 million acre feet —should be delayed pending a study of overall environmental effects.

Their prime argument is that the area, smog-ridden, crowded, choked with automobiles, its land rapidly disappearing in cookie cutter rows of tract housing developments, needs more people about as much as India.

SEN. JOHN NEJEDLY

They also contend the planners have not furnished protection against the ecological damage that could result in northern California, particularly in the vast Delta at the confluence of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers and the increased pollution in the San ing the major flow of the two rivers southward.

The champion of the anti-project forces is a 45-year-old congressman named Jerome Waldie, a Democrat from a Francisco Bay area by divert-northern district who was once majority leader in the state assembly. Waldie is an aggressive lawmaker as marked by his attempt this session of Congress to unseat 78-year-old House Speaker John McCormack on grounds he was too old for the post.

Waldie recently invaded the stronghold of the enemy, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and the Metropolitan Water District, and spoke some words which left many sputtering and challenging his motives.

"What is the resource that Los Angeles really needs most?" Waldie asked. "Is it really water? Or is it air? It is obvious that it is air."

"I don't believe there is anything good about this megapolis increasing its growth. Surely, if you don't have enough air now, what is the sense in bringing in water to attract more people?

"I don't believe the average resident is hung up on the delights of seeing new subdivisions in the desert when he drives to work."

Centering in on the effects of cutting down the flow to the Golden Gate of the two great rivers is State Sen. John A. Nejedly who comes from the same district as Waldie and who says frankly that if he had his way he would have California say to the people of the rest of the states:

"We don't want you! It's a free country but we don't want you."

Nejedly says the project presupposes the promise that there has to be population growth in California.

"It is a continuation of the mood of the 1930s and 1940s that any project anyone conceived of was desirable," Nejedly says. "Build for the sake of building. Man is a better planner than God. Take water from here and put it there and don't take into account that we do not have an inexhaustible supply of environment."

Another opponent is the 90,000-member, prestigious Sierra Club which has called for a halt on the project pending reevaluation of the plan which it says was "narrowly conceived and unresponsive to the new goals and values society is fast adopting to insure its own survival."

Says Sierra President Phillip Berry:

"One Los Angeles is enough for the world. To build people in concentrations like that and to carve up open space like that is flatly immoral.

"Figuratively speaking, there are men down there at the other end of the pipeline with bags of cement. There is still a lot of open space to build on in Southern California. They'll build on it and one third will be concrete streets and highways."

The prime job of defending what up until last year had seemed to be a program going smoothly and accepted as a boon to the nation's biggest state has gone to William R. Gianelli, director of the California Department of Water Resources.

Gianelli's hair would stand on end were it not so closely cropped at accusations that his department, which planned, supervised and will operate the water project, did not take into account as one of its priorities how it would affect and enhance the total environment.

Gianelli says the real trouble is that Northern and Southern California are divided in attitudes until there is a "Mason-Dixon line" across the state on the "gut issue" of water.

"Every time mention is made of using surplus floodwaters in Northern California for any other portions of this state, the hue and cry goes up about the Rape of the North," he says.

"I have yet to hear a hue and cry from Southern California about the Rape of Long Beach when a Northern Californian sends his child to schools that are being financed by the tideland oil funds from the south.

"Have we fogotten what the word neighbor means? IF so, then perhaps we had better draw a real line across the state right now and let northern California flood itself out of economic existence rather than offer a drop of water to Southern California.

"Don't ever get so swept off your feet by this movement to protect or enhance our environment that you forget people are environment, too. One man's environment may be an air-conditioned room, a sirloin steak and a Brooks Brothers suit. Another man's environment may be the wide open spaces, a brace of birds and blue jeans.

"Every man has his individual right to the environment he prefers and nobody —no government —can take that right away from him or tell him where to live and how to do it."

Kerry Mulligan, appointed by Reagan as chairman of the State Water Resources Quality Control Agency, agrees.

"Unless we are going to start playing God, I don't see how we can tell people where they are to live," Mulligan says.

The anti-project forces have zeroed in on specific objectives. One is to turn down the proposed 43-mile "Peripheral Canal" which would channel water directly from the Sacramento River around the Delta area to the site of pumps sending it southward.

It is a highly complex and untested undertaking, involving questions of salinity, danger to fish and other wildlife, regulating the flow of water so it does not erode levees, maintaining sufficient flow of water to wash out the sewage from the San Francisco area.

REP. JEROME WALDIE
. . . water project?

Gianelli says the canal is the best means of insuring the ecology of the Delta. It would provide nine outlets from the canal into the picturesque net of 50 islands below sea level which in some respects resemble the Florida Everglades.

Gianelli contends that Waldie's real motive is to get a "free ride" from the river waters instead of forcing industry and municipal polluters to clean up their mess.

Waldie contends that since the Water Resources Department has contracted to sell its water to customers in the south, the Delta and the San Francisco area will be the first to have the tap shut off when shortages develop. Gianelli replies that the project is restricted by statute to send only surplus water to southern users.

The "antis" have already won a significant battle by persuading Reagan to postpone building of another dam complex on the Eel River on the rugged northern coastal area of the state which had been part of the overall plan.

A crunch will come June 2 when voters are called upon to approve Proposition 7 authorizing the state to increase the interest ceiling on its bonds from the present 5 per cent to 7 per cent and even above that — with legislature approval —to sell them on national money markets.

If Proposition 7 is voted down, the water project backers warn, the money will have to be found elsewhere and it may be necessary to raise California's sales tax from 5 to 7 cents. Any defaulting on bonds would do irreparable harm to California's hitherto excellent credit rating.

It is a highly emotional issue. Says Waldie:

"There are two tragic signals warning the nation of the results of our battle with nature —the death of Lake Erie and the almost complete contamination of the air of the Los Angeles basin."

Doyle F. Boen, president of the California Water Resources Association, says proposals to halt the project amount to "killer conservation."

"We hear too much of this kind of double talk and loose criticism based on the faulty reasoning that old values must be changed," he says. "It is one thing to demand abolishment of smog or water pollution; quite another to tamper with vital water supplies for people."

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York may have phrased it best.

"Behind the complex predictions and obscure language, beyond words like ecology, environment and pollution there is a simple question: Do you want to live or die?"

The mayor was addressing a New York crowd on Earth Day — a day set aside by Americans to consider the problems of global environment threatened by pollution.

All over America Wednesday people marched, gathered and demonstrated for a cleaner earth unifying to a degree such ordinary diverse elements as conservatives and militants housewifes and hippies, businessmen and professionals.

There was a "dead orange parade" in Miami, a "survival march" in California, a "festival of death" in Boston and, at Southeast Missouri State University, a mock funeral to "symbolically bury the earth under a pile of trash."

In New York City a long-haired man held up a handful of evil-smelling fish and said, "This is what pollution does to fish. It's fish today, people tomorrow."

Ohio University students pasted stickers saying "this is a polluter" on cars in Athens, Ohio, while in Omaha, Neb., there was a run on gas masks because students wanted them to protest dirty air.

Inevitably there was some rowdyism. Radical students stormed the stage where Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken was speaking at Michigan State University. State police moved him to safety.

Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Henry Jackson, D-Wash., underwent heckling during speeches at Yale University and Seattle.

But generally participation in the day's activities was enthusiastic despite opposition by some radical groups that termed them a distraction from larger and more immediate issues.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

SAIGON — A total of 14 American aircraft were reported shot down in two days by Communist gunners over South Vietnam and Laos. Military sources said South Vietnamese soldiers had been stationed on Cambodian soil near the border to bolster outnumbered Cambodian units facing Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon ordered an end to any more occupational deferments from the draft and halted deferments for fathers except in extreme hardship cases. Nixon also asked Congress to open the way for him to stop all future student deferments.

TRINIDAD — Troops loyal to the government fought to suppress a mutiny inspired by black power elements. By Friday rebels said they were in full control of an arsenal and were holding several loyalist officers hostage pending the outcome of negotiations with the government.

BOGOTA — Former Colombian Dictator Gustavo Rojas Pinilla called for a revolution following his defeat for the presidency by the government candidate Misael Pastrana Borrero. But the country appeared to be returning to normalcy under the watchful eye of police enforcing a dush-to-dawn curfew.

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. — Television entertainer Herb Shriner and his wife were killed when their car went off a Florida highway and slammed into a tree.

LATIN KIDNAP FAD

Revolutionaries' Ploy Turns Deadly

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shortly after C. Burke Elbrick, the United States ambassador to Brazil was released by leftist kidnapers in exchange for 15 political prisoners last September, he said of political abductions:

"It's something you can expect to spread in the same way plane hijackings have spread."

The months since then have shown Elbrick knew exactly what he was talking about. Six diplomats have been kidnaped since then in Latin American countries. Three of the victims have been Americans, one Japanese, one Paraguayan, and one West German, one was the Guatemalan foreign minister kidnaped in his own country.

The recent rash of kidnapings was started in Rio DeJaneiro Sept. 4, when four gunmen ambushed Elbrick's limousine and drove off with the 61-year-old ambassador in a station wagon. The kidnapers left behind a manifesto saying Elbrick was "the symbol of exploitation" and announced he would be executed if the government did not release 15 political prisoners within the next 48 hours.

The 15 prisoners were allowed safe passage to Mexico, where most said they would continue their travels to Cuba, and Elbrick was released.

Kidnapers struck again at the height of the Guatemalan presidential election campaign, when four young men with machine guns pulled Foreign Minister Alberto Fuentes-Mohr from his car on Feb. 27. The government agreed to turn an imprisoned leftist student over to the Mexican Embassy for safe passage out of the country, and Fuentes was released unharmed.

A week later, on March 6, six gunmen of the Rebel Armed Forces -- the same group that was responsible for the kidnaping of Fuentes— blocked a road through the southern section of Guatemala City and intercepted the United States labor attache, Sean M. Holly. Holly was freed after the government released three prisoners.

Leftists in Brazil took the limelight again March 11, when five kidnapers—four of them armed with machine guns—pulled the Japanese consul-general from his car in Sao Paulo, just a block from his home, and took him away in his car. The government agreed to release five prisoners, and the diplomat, Nobuo Okuchi, was freed.

March 26, leftist kidnapers freed the U. S. air attache in the Dominican Republic, Lt. Col. Donald J. Crowley, after holding him in captivity for two days. The government in Santo Domingo had to agree to release 19 prisoners in order to guarantee the safety of the American.

Kidnapers in Argentina have not fared so well. Waldemar Sanchez, a Paraguayan consul in Buenos Aires to meet Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner, was captured March 24 by kidnapers who posed as potential buyers interested in a car the embassy was offering for sale.

They demanded two prisoners in exchange for his freedom, but the Argentine government refused, saying one of those demanded was not in custody and the other did not want to be freed. The kidnapers charged that the missing prisoner was either dead or so badly tortured that the government could not free him, but they released the Paraguayan anyway, "for humanitarian reasons."

Police clame rightists for the attempted kidnaping of a Russian dipiomat in Buenos Aires March 29. An alert police guard fired nine bullets into the fleeing escape car, preventing four men from abducting Yuri Pivovorov, the 40-year-old assistant chief of the Soviet Embassy's commercial office.

March 31, kidnapers struck again in Guatemala, snatching West German ambassador Count Karl Von Spreti. Officials expected the kidnapers to demand the release of five members of the terrorist Rebel Armed Forces in exchange for Von Spreti's freedom.

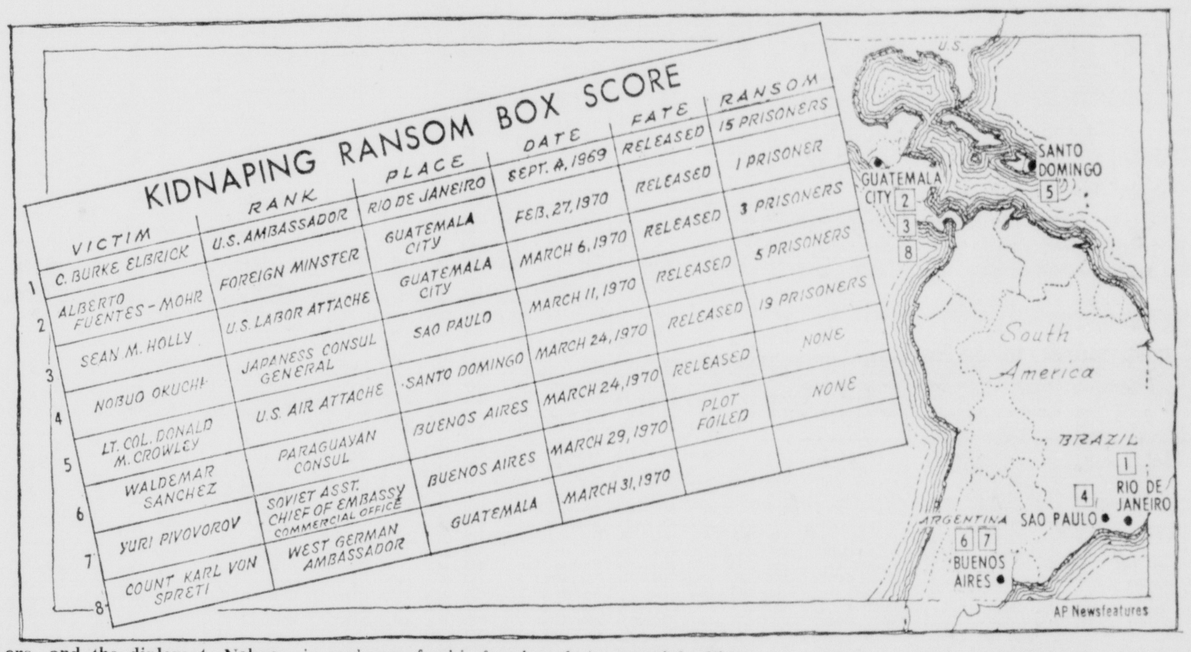
But the body of the diplomat was found April 5, a bullet in his head. That same day, four gunmen tried to kidnap U. S. counsul Curtis Cutte in Porto Alegre, Brazil, but Cutter escaped after being shot in a wild street fight.

Some American diplomats in Latin America have said they feel the United States should publicize a policy of "no ransom" in order to stop the trend.

"It's high time we let the extremists know their political blackmail will not work and that we told our host governments there is to be no ransom," an American diplomat in La Paz, Bolivia said recently.

But another diplomat in Lima, Peru, said: "We'd probably lose a couple of guys dead and buried before we convinced anyone we really meant no more ransom."

Defying the demands of political kidnapers has more than a slight risk. In 1968, the U. S. ambassador to Guatemala, John Gordon Mein, was slain in a barrage of machine gun fire as he tried to flee from would-be kidnapers.



VOTER'S MOOD CAREFULLY WATCHED

Next British Election May Come As Early As June, Or October

By YORKE HENDERSON
(London Express News Service)

LONDON—Before next spring Britain must choose another government. It is then that the present Socialist administration's five-year term of office ends.

All the betting here is that the general election will be held much sooner than that. October is the favored date, although the odds on June are shortening.

October is traditionally a good month for an incumbent British government. The voters are relaxed after their summer holidays, and less likely to want a change of administration just for the hell of it; the weather is likely to be good (another contribution to popular placidity); the financial budget which could increase the voters' tax burden or frustrate their hope of concessions lies half a year in the future.

June is being touted because the Socialist administration's fortunes are better now than they've been for a long time; the relatively healthy balance of payments can be used as evidence of Socialist good government - an advantage which could be swept away by industrial wage demands before the fall; and the opinion polls of late have shown a shortening of the Conservatives' popularity lead.

If the results of local government elections about to be held confirm a growth in Socialist popularity, then Prime Minister Harold Wilson may well decide to take his chances on a June election.

In case he does, it's as well to know now what the British general election is about, how it works and what the main issues will be.

First, the purpose of a general election: Simply, it is to choose a national government for the ensuing five years.

Next, how it works: This is simple, too. The British have only one elected house — the House of Commons. True, Parliament consists of two houses; but the second - what the commons traditionally refer to as "another place", like Victorians talking about a lavatory - is the House of Lords whose members are either hereditary aristocrats or non-hereditary "life peers" appointed by the government of the day. In political terms, the House of Lords is all but impotent.

All legislation goes through the Lords, but the most they can do is delay its implementation for a very limited period.

The Commons is the power house of British politics, and the political party which gets most members (M.P.) into it forms the government. That party needn't even have an overall majority. Theoretically it could be outnumbered by the opposing parties together.

In fact few British prime ministers would choose to govern without an overall majority. To do so would mean putting an absurdely disproportionate influence in the hands of some small unrepresentative party which by sheer chance controlled the balance of power.

There are two major parties in Britain, Conservative and Labor (or Socialist). It is a mistake to draw parallels between them and America's two parties, for no other reason than that both are further to the left, by U. S. standards than, say, the liberal wing of the Democratic Party. The Conservatives, for instance, accept as a fact of life the state-ownership of the power industries, the railroads and the principal domestic and international airlines (BEA and BOAC).

The Liberal Party, once dominant in British politics is a very poor third. At present it has only 13 of the 630 members in the House of Commons.

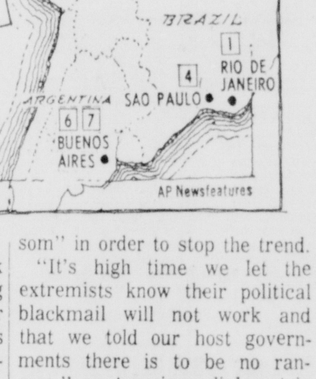
The Communists haven't had a man in the House of Commons for many years and show no signs of staging a comeback. (A conservative American, it must be said though, might experience some difficulty in distinguishing between Communists and some elements of the far left in the Labor Party).

Nationalists, both Welsh and Scots, have managed to get a member each into the Commons, but despite fears to the contrary, they've turned out to be the thick end of the wedge.

Effectively, then a British general election, like an American presidential one, is a two party affair—Conservatives versus Socialists.

But the British have much less say than the American in choosing their chief executive. The successful party does that when it elects its leader. For instance, the prime minister who emerges from the coming general election will be either the present tenant of 10 Downing Street, Harold Wilson, or Edward Heath, who as well as leading the Conservative party is also Leader of the Opposition, an official and salaried post in Britain.

Behind The News



HAROLD WILSON
Watching vote winds

Voting is a straightforward business. The country is divided into constituencies based very roughly on area and population. Each constituency returns one member to the Commons. All the voter has to do is choose the man he prefers from the individual candidates put up by each party in his constituency. In a great many constituencies the choice is limited — Conservative or Socialist.

Crank candidates are discouraged by the requirement of a $600 deposit which is forfeited if the candidate doesn't receive at least an eighth of the votes cast.

Unexpected Slugging Keeps Giants Afloat

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some unexpected slugging has kept his San Francisco Giants buoyant in the National League western division. Today will determine whether the perennial second-place club receives a much-needed pitching boost.

Manager Clyde King sent ace right-hander Juan Marichal to the mound against the Montrael Expos, hopeful the ailing star would resume his winning ways. He was sidelined since the start of the season with an allergic reaction to penicillin.

Gaylord Perry, 2-2, allowed only three runs Friday night, but the Giants needed 10 runs in their last two at bats for a 12-3 romp over the Expos.

"If I can get six good innings from Juan, I'll be satisfied," says King. "I don't think he'll be able to go nine, but we'll see." Marichal faced a club the Giants have beaten 12 times in 13 games.

DIETZ STARS

Catcher Dick Dietz wielded a hot bat Friday night, driving in five runs on a four-for-four performance that boosted his batting average to a hefty .447. The output included Dietz' fifth home run in a seventh-inning rally that saw six runs.

Perry, who allowed seven hits, entered the bottom of the seventh in a 2-2 tie. But he started the winning rally with a one-out double off reliever Dan McGinn, 0-1.

Bobby Bonds walked on four pitches and Ron Hunt walloped his second homer of the season on his 36th at bat. Hunt collected only three homers in 478 trips to the place last season.

Willie Mays' walk and Ken Henderson's single prefaced Dietz' three-run homer.

Perry's single triggered the four-run ninth off Carroll Sembera. Three runs scored on wild pitches, while Bonds and Willie Mays belted doubles.

BIG HITTERS

The Giants' 11-hit attack left five regulars with averages above .300. Dietz heads the list, followed by Henderson (.438), Hunt (.361), rookie Alan Gallagher (.323) and Bonds (.317).

Those five have picked up the slack for National League MVP Willie McCovey, slumping at .176, and Mays, who was hitless in 15 trips prior to his double. Gallagher is 0-for-18.

"The encouraging thing," says King, "is that we're not depending on just a couple of guys. When Marichal hits his stride and McCovey starts hitting, we'll be all right."

Lightfingered Latecomers Pace Knicks Over Lakers

NEW YORK (AP) — The hot hand belonged to Los Angeles' Jerry West, the cold shoulder to New York's Willis Reed . . . until a pair of lightfingered latecomers eased the pressure off the Knickerbockers' backs and dropped it back into the Lakers' laps.

Cazzie Russell and Walt Frazier, who had squirmed on the bench as New York blew a 20-point lead to the West-led Lakers, ignited a fourth quarter rcounter-attack that gave the Knicks a 124-112 victory in the opener of the National Basketball Association's championship playoff series Friday night.

Reed poured in 37 points, despite a first-half shoulder injury, as the Knicks got the jump in the best-of-7 set, which resumes Monday night at Madison Square Garden. Super-sub Mike Riordan, picking up the slack when Frazier got into foul trouble, added 19.

But it was Russell and Frazier, held to a combined total of two points through the first 39½ minutes, who turned the tide after West scored 16 of his 33 points in a third quarter spurt that sent the Lakers, trailing 50-30 at one point, to a 98-95 edge early in the final session.

"The Man Upstairs just seems to be on my side," said Russell, who followed Frazier's first field goal since the opening quarter with his first basket of the game, putting the Knicks

Traditionalist Feeney Breaks A Tradition

Chub Feeney is a traditionalist and conservative. His Ivy League background (Dartmouth) cultivated his conservatism, which is as much a part of him as his shadow. He couldn't shed his conservatism any more than he could shake his shadow on a sunny day.

Still, Feeney is a realist. There was ample evidence of his realism on many occasions when he was vice president of the Giants. Sometimes realistic situations put a strain on a conservative's defense of tradition.

In the four months he has been president of the National League, Feeney has demonstrated both realistic and conservative approaches to problems.

Feeney realistically sanctioned a souped up baseball in the National League to put more action in the game even though his conservative nature had to tell him the game was perfect as it was.

Won't Admit It's A Rabbit Ball

Neither the baseball commissioner nor Feeney has admitted a jackrabbit ball already has been used this season in at least several games that developed into sensational slugfests, featuring tape measure home runs and grand slams by batters who never previously hit a slammer.

Perhaps Bowie Kuhn, the commissioner, Feeney and Joe Cronin, president of the American League, feel that such an admission would cause old timers to scoff. Maybe it would. But old timers already know that something is going on.

More importantly, from the viewpoint of baseball's brass, the occasional baseball fan is coming out to see just what is going on. It's true that it was Bat Day last Sunday in Crosley Field but that alone couldn't account for the crowd that turned out, 31,569, largest Crosley Field gathering since 1966.

One Reason For Big Turnout

Feeney's realistic approval of the jackrabbit ball must be given some credit for the Crosley Field turnout.

Now, here is an example of his conservatism that makes him a strict constructionist of baseball's official rules. For years, due to his long practical experience in baseball, plus a lawyer's degree he picked up at Fordham after graduation from Dartmouth, Feeney was a member of the rules committee.

The rules say that umpires should call a balk on a pitcher who, while his pivot foot touches the pitching rubber, fails to step directly toward first base before making a pickoff attempt of a runner.

For years umpires have been permitting pitchers to make halfsteps—midway between first base and home plate. Umpires even have given veteran pitchers the benefit of the doubt when their step winds up on the home plate side of an imaginary line between home and first.

That's out this season. National League umpires called a dozen balks in the first two weeks of 1970 campaign. They wouldn't have done that unless Feeney ordered a strict interpretation of the rules.

Redwood Rallies To Retain Lead

The Redwood High School Giants gave away five runs in the first inning yesterday and then unloaded four home runs to defeat Drake, 9-6 at Larkspur and remain undefeated atop the Marin County Athletic League.

Second place San Marin Mustangs and Terra Linda Trojans both won to stay half game off the pace. The Mustangs downed San Rafael, 8-3, and the Trojans shutout Tamalpais 7-0, behind the two hit pitching of Dave Stone.

Marin Catholic won its second straight game after losing its first four of the season, 6-5 over Novato.

GIANT HOMERS

Fourth inning homes by Jerry Piro and Tom Wickert broke the game open for Redwood, now 6 and 0 in league play. Pete Cooney and John Boro clouted homers earlier as the Giants played catchup ball after allowing five runs in the first inning, when they used three pitchers.

At Novato, hot hitting third baseman Ken Gnoss hit a two-run homer in the first inning and doubled to start a three-run rally in the third as host San Marin defeated San Rafael. He is now hitting .522 with three home runs and 13 runs batted in through six games.

All the runs off winning pitcher Steve Francis were unearned. At Terra Linda, Bob Daniele tripled with the bases loaded in the second inning to give Stone all the runs he needed as Terra Linda knocked over Tam. Catcher Rick Payne got on via an error, Stone singled and Bill Barry walked to set the stage for Daniele's blast to center. Stone struck out nine and allowed only two singes.

WINNING RALLY

At Kentfield, host Marin Catholic came up with five runs in the bottom of the sixth to edge Novato, scoring on a two run hit by Mike Parnow, run producing singles by Steve Sherry and Bill Donnellan, and Larry Piatti's ground ball to score Mike O'Brien with the winning run.

Novato almost pulled it out in the last inning when Dave Judnick belted a three run homer to pull the Hornets to within a run.

MARIN PREP TRACK AND FIELD

San Rafael Captures The Big Meet

San Rafael High School all but locked up the Marin County Athletic League track and field championship yesterday with a 75-52 victory over the Tamalpais Indians at San Rafael.

The undefeated bulldogs were led by triple winner Bob Peterson, who ran the 100 yard dash in 10 seconds flat, the best time of the season in the league. He also took the 220 and the long jump.

Tam's Vian Collier bettered the Marin County season's best time in the mile with a 4:28 his fastest clocking ever.

The Indians, undefeated until yesterday, were thought by most to be the only challenge for San Rafael, which is now 5 and 0, with two meets remaining.

In the freshman class, where both teams had been unbeaten, Tam won, 64 - 49.

Marin Catholic pulled a mild upset with a 76 - 55 win over Drake. Mark Lewis won the low hurdles and the high jump for the Wildcats, while Joe Tierney took the 100 and 200 for Drake.

Monza Race Is Won By Porsche

MONZA, Italy (AP)—Mexican Pedro Rodriguez and Leo Kinnunen of Finland, in a Gulf-Porsche sports car, won the 1,000-kilometer Monza auto race today. The event counts toward the world championship for prototypes and sports car manufacturers.

The Mexican and the Finn led the 621-mile race for the last 298 miles, bearing off the strong challenge of three Italian Ferrari 521-s cars

The victory strengthened Porsche's lead in the world maker standings.

The winning Porsche, entered by J. W. Automotive Engineering Ltd., covered the 174 laps in four hours, 18 minutes, 1.7 seconds for an average of 144.4 miles per hour.

The second place Ferrari was clocked in 4:19:27.6.

The official Ferrari 512-s driven by the Italian team of Ignazio Giunti and Nino Vaccarella placed second, more than one minute behind. Two other official Ferrari 512-s entries placed third and fourth. Third was the team of John Surtees of Britain and Peter Schetty of Switzerland. Chris Amon of New Zealand and Italian Arturo Merzario were fourth.

Frank Beard's Remarkable Round

By BOB GREEN

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Frank Beard had just fired an eight-under-par 64, including a string of six consecutive birdies, but refused to be jarred out of his conservative, easy-going role.

"You know me," he said, "I never have anything to say." Beard's remarkable round — he needed only 24 putts—put him into the second round lead in the $150,000 Tournament of Champions Friday.

Was he thinking about the all-time PGA record of eight consecutive birdies when he had his string going?

"No, not really. You just hit it and go find it and hit it again."

Was it his best putting round?

"I don't know. I don't keep records on that sort of thing so I really don't know."

Has he ever had six birdies in a row?

'DON'T KNOW'

"Again, I don't know. I've had five before, I'm sure. I don't know about six."

How would he characterize his round?

"I played well. You have to to shoot 64. But it was kind of ragged at times."

Ragged or not, the 134 total — 10 under par on the 7,114-yard La Costa Country Club course — left him with a three shot lead going into today's third round. (Tomorrow's final round will be televised by ABC at 1 p.m.)

British Open Champion Tony Jacklin had a 68 for 137 and Australian Bruce Crampton was in third place with a 69 for 138.

South African Gary Player, the defending champion and first round leader, never really got it going and drifted back with a 72 for 140. He was tied at that figure with Jack Nicklaus and Masters Champion Billy Casper, each with a 69.

Lee Trevino and Dale Douglas had 72s for 141 and Arnold Palmer took a 72 for 142.

IT'S UNUSUAL

Beard, the 1969 leading money winner, said it's unusual for him to play this well this early in the season.

"For one thing, bad weather bothers me," he said. "If there is one mile per hour of wind or it's one degree below 72, I don't like it."

"For another, the better you play the more you relax, and the more you relax the better you play. I guess you should be able to relax at the start of the season, but that's not easy to do until you have your goals for the year in sight."

Beard started his birdie string on the eighth with a 20 footer, then chipped in from 18 feet on the next. He holed one "from 40 or 50 feet" on the next, rifled a seven iron to within four feet on the next, had a two-putt birdie on the par five 12th and wedged to within six feet on the next.

His only bogey came on the 16th, when he was in a trap. But he had three other birdies, including the difficult 18th, had three one-putt pars and missed other birdies from 6 and 1½ feet.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Cincinnati Ace Finally Beaten

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Not content to leave the hitting to the hitters, National League pitchers took matters in their own hands Friday with positive results on three separate fronts.

St. Louis managed just three hits against Cincinnati's rookie flash, Wayne Simpson, but one of them was a sixth inning single by hurler George Culver that touched off a two-run rally and helped the Cards to a 3-1 victory over the Reds.

San Francisco broke an eighth inning tie against Montreal with a pair of three-run homers by Ron Hunt and Dick Dietz but the hit that started the rally was a double by, of course, pitcher Gaylord Perry. The Giants went on to win the game 12-3.

In Chicago, pitcher Ken Holtzman ripped a tie-breaking, two-run double and the streaking Cubs won their eighth straight, knocking off Houston 6-3.

DODGERS WIN

Elsewhere in the National League Friday night, Pittsburgh shut out Atlanta 9-0, Philadelphia edged San Diego 5-4 and Los Angeles edged New York 1-0 in 15 innings.

In the American League, Detroit dropped Minnesota 8-6, Washington trimmed California 5-3, Cleveland defeated Chicago 4-1 and Baltimore knocked off Kansas City 7-5. Rain postponed Milwaukee at Boston and Oakland at New York.

Lou Brock opened the Cards-Reds game with a leadoff homer—only the second run in four starts off Simpson. Then the Reds' rookie shut the door on the Cards until the sixth when Culver, who had been matching zeroes with the youngster, opened with a single. Errors by Tony Perez and Dave Conception sank Simpson, allowing two runs to score and that was all Culver needed.

Perez jolted his ninth homer of the year and two other hits, raising his average to 500. The nine homers broke the National League record for the month of April. The old mark of eight was shared by Lee Walls, Willie McCovey and Wally Moon.

Holtzman had held the Astros hitless until the sixth inning before Houston broke through for a pair of runs. But the Cubs bounced right back in the bottom half with hits by Billy Williams, Johnny Callison and J.C. Martin producing two runs before Holtzman's two-out double brought two more across.

Callison iced it with a two-run homer in the seventh as Chicago built its longest winning streak since 1953 when the Cubs strung 10 victories together.

NASH STARS

Jim Nash scattered five hits and the Braves halted a six-game losing streak by blanking Pittsburgh. Tony Gonzalez drove in three runs and Rico Carty extended his hitting streak to 15 games for Atlanta.

Reliever Dick Selma choked off an eighth inning San Diego rally and saved the Phillies' victory over the Padres. Selma fanned Dave Campbell and Ollie Brown and got Ed Spiezio on a bouncer, leaving two runners stranded in the eighth and then mowed the Padres down in order in the ninth. Deron Johnson drove in two runs with a single and homer for Philadelphia.

Tom Haller's 15th inning single drove in the only run of the game as the Dodgers outlasted the Mets. Wes Parker, who had opened the inning with a single and moved up on a ground out, scampered home with the game-winner.

Perry's, Turtles Win

Perry's Delicatessen walloped Suburban Auto 10-4 and the Two Turtles nipped Brandon Tires 6-5 in San Rafael Adult Softball League games last night at Albert Park.

MARIN SWIMMING

Terra Linda, Tam Showdown Is Near

Terra Linda Trojans and Tamalpais Indians high school swimming teams blasted weaker opponents yesterday on their way to a season ending championship confrontation next Tuesday.

The Trojans got double wins from Rick Demont and Tom Guthrie as they overwhelmed San Rafael, 75-19, winning every event in the process at San Rafael. Freshman Keith Strange set a school record in the 100-yard breast stroke with a 1 minute, 6 second clocking.

At Mill Valley, host Tam was more merciful, defeating Drake, 74-21. Lowry McFerrin had two wins for the Indians, who are tied for the league lead with Terra Linda. Both teams are 11 and 2 in the won-lost column.

Roger Rechsteiner, Dave Behrens and Mike Smith scored double wins to lead Novato to a crushing 74-18 win over cross-town rival San Marin.

Novato's Johnn Summerfield, the league's premier diver, racked up 262 points to remain undefeated for the season.

ahead 99-98, and then hit three more two-pointers down the stretch.

"It took a little time for the adrenalin to flow tonight," added Cazzie, who was 0-for-3 from the floor in the first half.

"This is my first world championship series. I wouldn't say I was jittery, but I guess I was trying too hard in the first half. I know I wasn't as warm as I was then I came back in."

FOUL TROUBLE

Frazier, sacrificing his offensive game in an effort to defend against West, was yanked after picking up his fourth foul with just 51 seconds gone in the third quarter. But he scored another key basket—off his own steal—during the Knicks' deciding burst and helped limited the Lakers to 20 fourth quarter points.

"I felt terrible sitting there on the bench while they came back to take the lead,, he said. "I felt I had let the team down. I knew I had to get in there and stabilize the defense, and try to get the team moving again."

Reed went over and around the hulking Wilt Chamberlain, still slowed by the after-effects of knee surgery, for 25 first half points.

16 FOR 30

"I just played my game and mover around to wherever I could get the shot," said the 6-foot-10 All-Star pivotman, who shot 7-for-9 in the first quarter and 16-for-30 over-all. "But I was wondering how long it was going to last."

Reed, who had collided with the Lakers' Happy Hairston while stuffing a shot in the second quarter, began to miss after intermission when his left shoulder tightened up. "I was still getting the good shots," he said, "but I couldn't get the ball over the perimeter of the basket."

Total attendance for 28 home games was 246,825, beating the 1967-68 total by 63,318 fans.

A sampling of nearly 2,000 of the 9,964 fans who attended the Seals-Los Angeles Kings game April 3 showed that 80 per cent came from the east side of San Francisco Bay.

Marin Seeks Way To Avert Suicide

A recently formed committee of the Marin Association for Mental Health is making a preliminary study of setting up a suicide prevention service in Marin.

The 20-member committee, headed by Dr. D. S. Maher of Terra Linda, is now looking into suicide prevention services in other cities, according to Mrs. Nevada Christian, mental health association executive director.

The need for the Marin sureau is evident, Mrs. Christian explained, with 45 recorded suicides here last year. This figure was given to the association by Keith C. Craig of the Marin County Coroner's Office and a member of the new committee.

The actual number may run higher, Mrs. Christian said, because this figure does not include Marin persons committing suicide outside of the county.

A suicide prevention service is available on a 24-hour basis at the Community Mental Health Center at Marin General Hospital, Mrs. Christian said, but many people do not know of its existance.

Also, she added, many potential suicides would rather speak to a layman than to medical personnel.

Many calls received by the San Francisco suicide prevention service are from Marin residents, Mrs. Christian added. That bureau is also staffed by many volunteer workers from Marin, she said.

After the committee finishes its study, ways of funding the new service will be looked into, Mrs. Christian said.

Volunteers are needed to work on the committee and may obtain information from the association office at 1368 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

The committee will hold a public meeting May 20 at 4 p.m. at the association office.

Hickel Backs Trans Pipeline

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel, told a joint session of the Alaskan Legislature yesterday construction of a trans-Alaska oil pipeline will not damage the environment.

"The construction authorizations will be given only after a thorough engineering and design analysis," Hickel said in a speech. "And I can guarantee that we will not approve and design based on the old and faulty concept of 'Build now, Repair later.'"

Conservationists who heard Hickel's announcement approving the pipeline's right of way Thursday were openly skeptical that the Interior Department had resolved questions about possible damage to the land and wildlife.

Texas Lawmaking Is Growing Complicated

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Lawmaking is getting more complicated in Texas.

The 61st session of the State Legislature in 1969 considered 2,341 bills, 1,951 resolutions and 100 proposals for constitutional amendments—all record numbers. Legislators approved 944 bills and agreed to submit 16 of the constitution change proposals to voters.

There Are Worse Things Than Mothers To Have In Your House

DEAR HELEN:

I loved this poem and want to share it with your readers. If anyone knows the author, please tell us. — V.C.

Mothers Are People

Mothers are people who cook things
Like breakfast or lunch or a snack;
Dexterious people who hook things
Which button or zip up the back.
Mothers are people who blow things
Balloons and kisses and noses;
Green-thumbish people who grow things
Like ivy and poppies and roses.
Mothers are people who send things
Like letters and strawberry tarts;
Magical people who mend things,
Like blue jeans and elbows and hearts.
Mothers are people who find things
Like mittens and homework and germs;
Fussbudget people who mind things
Like cusswords and snowballs and worms.
Mothers are people who sweep things
Like porches and cobwebs and rugs;
Softhearted people who keep things
Like artwork, report cards and hugs.
Mothers are people who nurse things,
A boy or girl or a spouse.
And, all in all, there are worse things
Than mothers to have in your house.

AUTHOR UNKNOWN

DEAR HELEN:

Something really wonderful happened to me last night and I'd like to share it. An old boy friend called and wanted to talk to me.

You see, two years ago, he refused to marry me for the simple reason he didn't love me, though I was to have his baby.

I hated him for a long time because I hated myself. Then I found out I wasn't so bad. Stupid maybe, but not bad. What I'm trying to say is that as soon as I lost this hate for myself, stopped feeling sorry for me, I found literally hundreds of people who have problems that made mine look silly. I love again. I love human beings because that's what we all are. That phone call last night brought it all into focus. I'm able to forgive.

I'm so glad I'm alive that I sometimes want to walk down the street and say to the first person I meet, "Hey, You're Great. Aren't you glad to be alive too?"

But I suppose people would think I was crazy or something. — FOR PEACE AND LOVE.

DEAR FOR:

No, I don't believe people would think you are crazy or something. You'd be surprised how one person's aliveness makes others around her glad that they're alive.

Your letter did that for me. Keep on sharing your wealth, Honey. — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

QUANT'S NEW LOOK

Inventor of the mini, designer Mary Quant has forsaken the style but not the way-out fashion concept. In a recent showing in London, she introduced knickerbockers with knee high laced boots. The model, left, wears a brown and white tricot shirt over panne velvet knickers, topped with a wrap-over satin jacket with tie belt. Right, a printed panne velvet shirt and knickers are topped with a wide-brimmed hat.

SEW SIMPLE

New Fabric Looks Like Silk, Is Washable But Expensive

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I do quite a bit of my own sewing, especially my better clothes, and I'm wondering why the new fabric called Qiana is not available to home sewers? I have seen this fabric advertised as being used by the designers. Also, please tell us the content and the advantages of this new type of fabric.

MRS. C. P.

DEAR MRS. C. P.:

Qiana is a very refined nylon that has been in the development stages over 20 years and finally appeared in limited supply about two years ago. Naturally, the old law of supply and demand controlled the price, and it was too costly to be used by anyone other than the expensive costume room clothes designers.

Today, it is available in limited amount at better fabric shops. The availability should reduce the cost in the near future.

The advantages of Qiana are many, especially for women who travel frequently or those who lead such a busy life they have little time for taking care of their clothes. This fabric looks like silk, feels like silk and yet has many advantages silk does not have.

It will not water spot and is washable, provided everything you use in construction and trimmings on the garment is also washable. Because of the nature of the fabric and the wrinkle resistancy, the seams will not look perfectly smooth, but almost have a soft, puffy look. This is part of the look of silk, and you shouldn't object to this.

I shall never forget the first time I saw Qiana in a fashion show. I was told the gowns were over $250, but they were washable. It was rather amusing to imagine a woman who could spend this amount of money washing out her little dress at night.

If I ever spent this for a dress, I think I would sit up all night and look at it. But, perhaps we all need to be re-educated to new thinking when it comes to new fabrics.

MRS. RICHARD Tuttle, Fremont, Ind., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing hint:

"If you are making slacks or skirts out of the new knits and wish to use the elastic top instead of a waistband, I find the elastic from a discarded or ruined pair of panty hose works perfectly. It is usually a neutral color and can be used with any color fabric since it is hidden anyway. The greatest asset is that if you are using it for the same person who wore the hose, it should be the correct size."

DEAR EUNICE,

I have two small children and have never had the time to sew very much but would like to plan ahead and make a chiffon dress for a summer formal. What kind of seams are best for chiffon?

MRS. A. Y.

DEAR MRS. A.Y.:

Please stop with the first sentence. If you haven't done much sewing, forget chiffon; this is for the experts only.

You may achieve a very lovely, soft effect similar to chiffon if you choose voile, lawn, organdy, organza or very sheer Swiss cottons. These fabrics have more body, won't slide around and are just as popular today.

Unless you are underlining this fabric, you will want to make the smallest seams possible. Usually a French seam is best. Make your ⅜ inch seam by placing the two wrong sides of the fabric together. Trim seam allowance evenly to about ⅛ inch. Then with the two right sides together, stitch about ¼ inch from the seam. This will completely encase the two raw edges and you will have a narrow seam that will not be noticeable.

DEAR EUNICE,

My daughter bought a dress at a big savings and it ended up too short. Friends have suggested I add a band of black velvet to the bottom of the hem. Now I'm beginning to wonder how this should be put on. If I use it on the straight grain [illegible] ure it w[illegible]

[illegible] wa[illegible]
E. M[illegible]

DE[illegible] I.:

on the bias grain. It is much easier to conform with the fabric of the dress.

Cut a piece twice the width of the finished band, plus two seam allowances. Carefully pin one edge of the velvet to your dress (right sides together). Be sure not to stretch either the dress fabric or the velvet band. Machine stitch, removing the pins as you come to them.

Now, fold the free edge of the velvet to the inside of the dress and carefully turn over the edge and pin in place. Your machine stitching will be your guide. May I caution you that it is very easy to pull this edge. You will know something is wrong if you see diagonal folds appear from the right side. When you are certain it will look perfect and smooth, carefully hand whip the inside folded edge to the inside of your dress.

Entertaining Means You Care So Don't Tell The Mistakes

By BARBARA HOSMER

It's show business and that's the fun of entertaining, says Nan Birmingham, who as the wife of author Stephen Birmingham often plays hostess to many of the celebrated "beautiful people."

A drama graduate of Stanford, she was show biz herself entertaining the audience as the finale to the A.M. lecture series yesterday morning at the Tamalpais Theatre in San Anselmo with hostess anecdotes that kept the ladies laughing.

Braced by an elbow on the lectern, Mrs. Birmingham clothed the points of her talk in best raconteur manner—

"The afternoon the turkey fell—it was Thanksgiving—and the thing was, before it fell it blew up. . .My mother-in-law had offered to get up early and help. 'What are you going to do with the rest of that stuffing? It's no good unless all the turkey juice is going through it. You hold the turkey and I'll stuff it all in,' she told me.

"Now she graduated from Wellesley in 1924 in chemistry. But I learned at Hamlin's from the chemistry teacher that when you get into the bathtub the water goes up. I knew when all the stuffing got into the turkey something was going to happen. It did. One side blew out.

"I told my husband, we'll just cover it up with parsley. We picked it up and the whole turkey went poosh—stark naked right out of the skin.

"So I said to my sister-in-law, 'Susan, get the turkey and we'll just back it into the skin.' Of course the wings were a little hard. . .Then we pulled the curtains, doused the candles and took the turkey in. Everybody said it was the best one since last Thanksgiving.

"THAT WAS when I decided there are three basic entertaining rules. First, don't ever tell—anything. Some women frown as they serve the roast, 'my butcher let me down,' or 'I wish you could have seen the roast last week'—I wish I could have too. It makes me want to say to the hostess, 'why didn't you invite me then?"

"Second, always keep on hand lots of parsley—it covers a multitude of sins.

"A friend said to me, 'what do you do when you're unmolding the aspic and it goes whoosh down the disposal?' I say then just serve parsley.

"Third, learn to carve very fast."

Entertaining is show biz, says Mrs. Birmingham, because the hostess is the producer, casting director, costumer and all.

"Decide what the style of this party is going to be, what people are going to wear, where it will be—on the terrace for the first course?—and who are you inviting? That can make or break a party."

SHE RECOUNTED the time she was entertaining a Hungarian woman friend from Mexico—

"When you're entertaining a woman like Irina it's a good idea to have an extra man—or she'll take yours. She's like having the Gabors all in one woman. She's so sexy she doesn't look quite clean. Then friends said they couldn't come because the head of the Swedish branch of their business was in New York and they had to take him out. I said, 'You mean he's here alone?' and a count, too. 'Wouldn't he rather have a home-cooked meal? Bring him.' So at dinner there was this dark, oozing gypsy of an Irina talking in seven languages to this distinguished, tall, correct Scandinavian Count stuffed shirt. But Irina seemed to be doing pretty well for herself."

NAN BIRMINGHAM

The upshot was that the count turned up missing for four days.

"I decided that was pretty good casting."

BE CAREFUL about serving a fancy dish whose vogue is over, the hostess warned. "If you haven't already done a fondue, don't go out and buy a set now. That's about over.

"And when people call you up and say, 'come on over for dinner—I won't go to any trouble' — I feel like saying, 'then I won't go.' When you take the trouble to think through entertaining and you are saying to people, 'I'm giving you my time, energy and imagination,' then you are saying, 'I care about you.' I think that's what entertaining is all about," said the noted hostess.

Marin Women

FDA Advises Less Estrogen In Pill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration yesterday advised physicians to prescribe oral contraceptives with the lowest content of estrogen, a hormone.

The FDA letter to doctors and pharmacists followed application of British findings that oral contraceptives with higher estrogen levels were involved in two to three times as many blood clotting incidents as lower dose formulations.

The government has already established that women using the pill are six times more likely to suffer serious blood clots than nonusers. Approximately one woman in 33,000 using the pill will die each year because of leg, lung or brain clots, the FDA said.

"Accumulated evidence," said FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards, "has suggested that there is a sufficiently clear relationship between the presence of estrogen and the incidence of thromoembolic disorders, (blood clotting) that patients for whom the pill is necessary get the least possible amount of the estrogen that is effective."

About half of the 8.5 million women using oral contraceptives in the United States are taking preparations with higher estrogen levels, the FDA has estimated.

Lose-dose compounds contain approximately 50 micrograms of estrogen, the others run between 60 and 100 micrograms of the female hormone. A microgam is one one-millionth of a gram.

Oral contraceptives are a combination of estrogen and another female hormone, progresterone.

All of the so-called sequential preparations contain either 80 or 100 micrograms of estrogen. With the sequentials, a woman takes estrogen only during most of her menstral cycle and a combination of estrogen and progesterone during the rest.

The other major type of preparation, the combination pill, contains estrogen and progesterone for use at all times during the cycle.

The FDA said it had examined the British data as well as other experiments from this country and Denmark and Sweden.

British medical authorities warned women last Dec. 10 to abandon the higher dose pill preparations.

Ball chairmen are Mmes. Clifford Meagher and Spiro Spiliotis. Other committee members are Mmes. Adolph Capurro, decorations; Alfred Garcia, invitations; Thomas Sinna, reservations; Raymond Sciutti, grab bags; Fred Acciari, house; and Clint Waring, publicity.

Edward Ragghianti will be master of ceremonies for the waltz contest, with Mrs. Lawrence Antz serving as its chairman.

The evening will begin with cocktails at 6:30 p.m. and dinner will be served at 8 o'clock, followed by dancing.

The Social Service Auxiliary presents the ball among its yearly efforts to aid the Catholis Social Service Agency of Marin.

A DAY AT the Races" will be held by members of the Petaluma Woman's Club Tuesday. They will take a chartered bus to Golden Gate Fields in Albany, where they will have luncheon in the Turf Club and view the races from their tables.

The bus is scheduled to leave the clubhouse at 10:30 a.m. and return at 7:30 p.m.

The portion of the cost of the trip to be returned by the racetrack will be used for charity, club officials said.

MRS. ALICE KOON of Lomita, state chairman of the Memorial Cancer Dressing Stations of the Order of Eastern Star, paid a visit to the San Rafael Cancer Dressing Station Wednesday, where she told of the work being done by the 126 stations in California. Dressings are made and given free of charge to persons who need them. Materials for making the dressings are provided by gifts and memorials made to the Order of Eastern Star for that purpose.

Mrs. Koon was interested in the varieties of dressings made by the San Rafael group, which is mainly made up of Eastern Star members from San Rafael, Fairfax and Mill Valley chapters, helped along by several who have no affiliation with the order. Workers are of various ages. One, Mary Ann Hand, is in her late eighties. During vacation periods girls from Jobs Daughters and Rainbow Girls give helping hands. Sometimes grandmothers bring visiting grandchildren who can help in various ways. The San Rafael station has a man as a member—Fred Redden—who helps prepare the work room in the San Rafael Masonic Lodge Building, cut cellucotton and pack materials. Most of the dressings prepared by the San Rafael station are distributed through the Marin County Cancer Society, often at the request of doctors.

Accompanying Mrs. Koon were Mmes. Mary Schwelke, Northern California vice-chairman; June Chrysler, co-ordinator of the Cancer Dressings program, both of Sacramento; and Ernestine Winters, chairman of the Oakland Cancer Dressing Station. They were entertained for lunch at the Mill Valley home of Mrs. Marjorie Reinecke, chairman of the San Rafael Cancer Dressing Station, who was assisted by Mmes. Marie and Edith Kramer.

TAMAL REBEKAH Lodge 393 of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will hold a luncheon and bazaar Tuesday at 11 a.m. at the Odd Fellows Temple in San Rafael.

Chairmen of the luncheon and bazaar are Mrs. Ada Earwood and Mrs. Marie Westlund, assisted by members of Tamal Rebekah Lodge and the Tamakwa Sewing Club.

Aprons, pillow cases, tea towels and other hand-made items made by members of the Tamakwa Sewing Club will be among the many items for sale. There will be a white elephant table as well as the hand-made items. Baked goods will be available.

"STYLES INTERNATIONALE," salad bowl luncheon and fashion show will be presented by St. Raphael's Mothers Guild Tuesday at noon in St. Raphael's Auditorium.

The luncheon and fashions will reflect an international mood. Members of the guild will prepare dishes with a foreign flavor. Breasts of chicken, imported cheeses and wine will be served to augment the salads.

Fashions, modeled by guild members and their children, will feature non-crushable, easy care clothes that will see the wearer well turned out whether she travels to Omaha or Osaka.

The decor follows the international theme with a Japanese tea garden from which the models will step, through the auditorium decorated with various national flags and into the foyer in which our green oasis, earth, represented by a huge globe, will stand. At the tables, guests will find miniature transportation for a trip around the world, in the form of a basket with balloon power to take it aloft.

Chairmen are Mmes. John Lichtenwalner and Arnold T. Bertolli. Directors of the fashion show are Mmes. A.C. Latno Jr. and Edmund Steacy. Mrs. Emil Boracchia is reservations chairman.

MRS. CHARLES Meacham of Mill Valley will be initiated into Mu Phi Epsilon, international professional music sorority, at a ceremony tomorrow at San Francisco State College, conducted by the Epsilon Omega Chapter.

THE MILL Valley Branch of the American Association of University Women will have the opportunity to hear a first-hand report on Southeast Asia by a longtime career diplomat, John P. Coffey, at its annual spring luncheon Tuesday.

It will be held at Sabella's restaurant in Mill Valley with cocktails at 11:30 a.m. preceding the 12:15 p.m. luncheon.

Coffey, who has been with the state department since 1941, is chief of the Consular Section of the United States Embassy in Singapore. He will be returning to his post from a home leave in Washington, D.C.

Officers will also be installed at the luncheon meeting. Re-elected for the 1970-71 year were Mmes. Elgar Hill, president; Robert Alexander, first vice president and program chairman; and James Leonard, recording secretary.

New officers to be installed are Mmes. William Knox, second president and membership chairman; John H. Larson, corresponding secretary; Quinn Millar, treasurer; and William Wallace, membership treasurer.

MRS. ALLEN P. Lovejoy of San Rafael, recently named Volunteer of the Year by the Volunteer Bureau of Marin, has resigned her position as a Director of Central Marin's League of Women Voters in order to support the campaign of a partisan candidate in the coming elections.

The league's president, Mrs. James Good of San Rafael, says "Mrs. Lovejoy's resignation conforms to League policy."

The League of Women Voters encourages participation in politics and in civic organizations for all its members. But, according to Mrs. Good, "League officers and directors are restricted in political activity in order to preserve the League's policy of non-partisanship and objectivity."

Students Find Nickel Still Has Some Value

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI)—Ever wonder what the value of the nickel is today?

In these days of rising living costs almost everyone has begun to worry about the purchase power of a dollar. It caused a Texas Tech University journalism professor to wonder just what the nickel will buy. He assigned a feature writing class the project of investing a nickel to purchase something—and then to write about it.

True enough the nickel is like the old gray mare—ain't what it used to be. But, as teacher Tanner Laine hoped, the students were able to use their imagination and come up with several values of the small coin.

A nickel can get earmuffs, chopsticks, napkin rings, spoons, bubble gum, old phonograph records, nails, a cigar and a live turtle. Possibly the most valuable things from a nickel today are happiness and experience.

One student used a nickel to purchase an ice cream cone for a little, ragged boy. She turned in a slip, 'One Ice Cream cone-One Happy Boy."

Another offered a nickel for a thought, and learned that no longer could you get a person's thoughts for a penny — today they are a nickel.

One student bought a postcard, but was instructed it would have been worth more had it been used to write home for a $10 moneygram.

One young man shopped a discount store until he came up with 79 nails. These he turned over to a little boy, helped him drag up scrap lumebr and build a castle. He reported his five cents purchased the imagination of a small boy—the biggest thing of all.

James M. Salvi Weds Leanne Janet Cerruti

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cerruti of Greenbrae and the sister of Paul Cerruti of San Rafael. The maid of honor was Marilynn Gagliardi of San Anselmo.

Best man was Richard Borghello of San Francisco, and ushers were Paul Cerruti and Donald Musante of Sunnyvale. After a reception at Sabella's of Marin the couple left for a wedding trip to Canada. They will return to live in San Rafael.

A graduate of Marin Catholic High School, Leanne attended the University of San Francisco and Munson's Business College in San Francisco. She is employed by Paramount Export Co. in San Francisco. Mrs. Mary DeMartini of San Anselmo and Mrs. Nicoletta Cerruti of Oakland are her grandmothers.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Salvi of San Francisco, James is a graduate of George Washington High School in San Francisco and is employed by Sunset Scavenger in San Francisco. Mrs. Leon Belli and Mrs. David Belli, both of San Francisco, are his sisters. He is the grandson of Mrs. Eugenio Musante and Mrs. Bartholomew Salvi of San Francisco.

ROCK 'N' ROLL

'Turned On' To Religion

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Hey, man, it's a mixed up thing now —rock 'n' roll 'n' religion.

The rock thumpings always have carried a hint of the gospel beat, but now it's coming on loud and strong, breaking out in the lyrics.

It's usually not in traditionally pious terminology, and some of it may not make much theological sense, but it nevertheless registers a religious inclination.

Variety, the show-business publication says pop music is "returning to one of its earliest roots, the gospel-spiritual influence."

Current albums and turntable shows for the young reverberate with the "soul" sounds by various rock and folk groups and individual baladeers.

Some of the titles include: "Jesus is Just All Right," sung by the Byrds; "I Guess the Lord Must Be in New York City," sung by Harry Nilsson; "Superstar," a number about Jesus sung by Murray Head and a backup group; "Resurrection," by a group called Aum and which starts out, "God is Back in Town."

In the country-Western category, there are such recent numbers as Lawrence Reynolds' "Jesus is a Soul, Man," Bobby Bare's "God Bless America Again," Linda Ronstadt's "We Need a Lot More Jesus," and the Chaparral Brothers' "Jesus Love You, Rosemary."

A trade magazine, Entertainment World, predicts the religious themes are likely to become more prominent. Noting that "rock 'n' roll has a solid foundation in gospel music" in rudimentary orgins, the magazine adds:

"Since this is a period when rock musicians are exploring their musical roots, it is not surprising that religion is finding its way into their music."

However, the magazine says the trend has encountered some resistance among radio and television broadcasters, who occasionally have shunned using some of the discs for fear they might offend conventional piety.

Some of the songs convey a keen element of doubt and questioning—which actually is a classically authentic note in religious searching.

For instance, "Superstar" includes lines such as "Every time I look at you I don't understand ... Jesus Christ, Jesus Christ, Who are you? .... Jesus Christ, Superstar, Do you think you're what they say you are?"

MISGIVINGS FADE

Misgivings of some stations about it faded after several clergymen backed its use, including a Bismarck, N.D. Catholic priest, Rev. John Owens, who played it on his radio show, "Padre's Platters."

It "should be a cause of some welcome introspection," he says.

Also, the Anglican dean of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, Very Rev. Martin Sullivan, says some people "may be shocked by this record" but they should think again. He calls it "a desperate cry ... and a very proper one at that."

Numerous other hits lately have had a religious questing ingredient in them, as well as sheer fervor, including "Oh Happy Day," started by a California Pentecostal group.

The song, "Mrs. Robinson," has a line in it, "Jesus loves you more than you will know," and Frankie Laine's recent anti-swearing record, "Dammit Isn't God's Last Name," came as a follow up to his widely used plea to the Lord, "You Gave Me a Mountain."

The Cowsills, an Ohio group, has a rising, mystical number out called "The Prophecy of Daniel and John the Divine," taken from prophecies of Daniel and the New Testament Apocalypse or Revelation about destructive forces in the world.

LONG-TIME HIT

Then there's the long-time hit, "Turn, Turn, Turn," sung by Pete Seeger and taken from the Book of Ecclesiastes, and the Beatles' "Ballad of John and Yoko," which Beatle John Lennon calls "a gospel song."

"I'm a big Christ fan—the song is my prayer," he says.

Rev. John Sheerin, editor of the Catholic World, commenting on the religious notes in pop songs, says its okay for the beat and the mood but it gives only a "misty shadowy picture of Jesus that has scant resemblance to the Jesus of history and Christian belief."

It's in line with the interested in Eastern mysticism current in youth circles today, he says, with its appeal mainly in the chants and rhythms rather than the meanings. It offers a "purely romanticized image" of Jesus, he adds, but fails to "face up to 'the fact of Jesus"—which is essential to genuine faith.

Commitment For Unity Plan Urged

NEW YORK (LC) — A statement calling for commitment to the ultimate goal of Lutheran unity has been submitted for consideration and action to the participating bodies of the Lutheran Council in the United States of America.

Drafted by a seven-member Consultation on Inter-Lutheran Cooperation, the report is being recommended for adoption through appropriate channels of the Lutheran Church in America, American Lutheran Church and Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod.

"The goal of Lutheran unity," the statement asserts, "is that the oneness of those who are committed to the fulfillment of the will of God shall be evidenced by their oneness of understanding, activity and structure."

The churches are urged to seek, as intermediate steps, increasing theological agreement, congregational fellowship, and unified programs. . ."in awareness" that such efforts "may lead also to structural unity."

OVERALL PLAN

"This will come," the statement adds, "when there is general consensus that the envisioned unity of faith and life, mission and ministry, unhampered by needless duplication or competition, will further the fulfillment of God's will."

The report stresses that the concept of union "should not be restricted to mean a monolithic structure which embraces all Lutherans in a single church," although "such a structure represents one possibility which merits consideration."

Cited as another possibility is a federation of regional churches made up of Lutherans within predetermined geographic boundaries.

In this arrangement, it is noted, each regional church "might address itself to the needs and challenges of its region."

The regional churches could relate to one another through a common structure "where a united program, action, and witness could be developed to meet national and international needs."

WISDOM, JUDGMENT

"It will require wisdom and judgment to determine the most appropriate structure that will be needed to carry out the functions of a united Lutheran church," the statement observes.

"This judgment must be based on sound organizational principles designed to achieve carefully defined goals."

The report says "it is recognized that neither the structure of the church nor its activities assures the fulfillment of God's will," that "this is accomplished only by God's grace."

A CROCODILE SHOWS UP FOR BAPTISM

LUSAKA, Zambia (London Express) — A candidate for baptism at a Zambian Watch Tower sect ceremony recently in the Kafue River found the water a little nippy.

For just as he and 200 other participants were immersing themselves he was bitten on the leg by a crocodile.

The man, Davison Kapyasa, was wrenched from the crocodile's jaws by other initiates. But he will get no satisfaction of revenge. Commented sect leader Lawson Pupwe:

"We don't intend to kill the crocodile as it's a creature of God, and according to our beliefs its blood should not be spilled."

Eastern Lutheran Group To Join Missouri Synod

BYRAM, Conn. (LC) — By a margin of better than six to one, congregations of the Synod of Evangelical Lutheran Churches have approved merger of the 20,556-member denomination into the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Rev. Milan A. Ontko, president of the SELC, who is pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church here, reported that congregations voted 41 to 9, with 14 abstentions, to ratify the affirmative action taken at the SELC's 43rd general convention last October. Only a simple majority was required.

April 10 had been set as the deadline for completion of the referendum and congregations that did not respond by that date were recorded as favoring the merger.

The synod's board of directors will meet in New York City, this coming week, at which time steps will be taken to execute and implement the union agreement with the LC-MS. The formal merger is expected to take place this summer, possibly by June 1.

According to the agreement, the synod will become the SELC District of the 2,870,355-member Missouri Synod for a period of seven years, after which the former Slovak Church will be dissolved and its congregations, pastors, and teachers assigned to the appropriate LC-MS geographical districts.

The SELC, according to 1968 statistics, the latest available, has 62 ordained ministers, of whom 50 are serving congregations. Its baptized membership of 20,556 includes 15,247 confirmed members. It has 57 Sunday schools with 640 teachers and 5,525 pupils.

Marin Baha'i's Will Observe Feast Of Ridvan

The Baha'i Faith of Marin will observe the Feast of Ridvan, beginning Tuesday through May 2. It is one of the most sacred holiday periods of the independent world religious body.

It was also announced this week by the group that Dr. and Mrs. Douglas Gibson of Marinwood will be delegates from Northern California at the 61st annual national convention of Baha'i's to be held in Wilmette, Ill., beginning Thursday through May 3.

Delegates to the convention will hear activities planned by the U.S. Baha'i Community in connection with the observance of International Education Year 1970 and the 25th anniversary of the United Nations.

CHURCH SPEAKER — Minerva Mattar of Pasadena who, together with her late husband, Dr. Solomon J. Mattar, spent 15 years as warden of the Garden Tomb in Jerusalem, will speak on her life in Palestine tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at the San Rafael First United Methodist Church.

National Presbyterian Church Doors Opened

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

Another great religious edifice is ready to join the National Cathedral (Episcopal) and the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception (Roman Catholic) on the "must-see" list for visitors to Washington, D. C.

It's called the National Presbyterian Church and Center. Although formal dedication ceremonies won't take place until next month, it's already open to visitors.

NATIONAL CENTER

As the name suggests, it will serve as a national center of the United Presbyterian Church, one of America's largest Protestant denominations. It also will sponsor seminars, conferences and studies aimed at bridging some of the gaps which beset communication in American society between people of different races, creeds, nationalities and generations.

The huge neo-gothic church—a cathedral in all but name—is the fulfillment of a dream long cherished by Time-Life publisher Henry Luce. Luce was an ardent Presbyterian and it dismayed him that his denomination had no church in the nation's capital large enough to accommodate the 1959 state funeral of Presbyterian elder John Foster Dulles, the secertary of state.

Luce felt that the Presbyterians should have a suitably impressive national church in Washington for the funeral of another Presbyterian statesman whom he greatly admired, President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The publisher headed a committee and raised the funds —about $8.5 million—required for the building project.

Unfortunately, Luce didn't live to see it completed. Nor did Eisenhower, whose funeral was conducted a year ago—in the same Washington Episcopal Cathedral where Dulles' last rites were held.

NOT IN GUIDEBOOK

You won't find that little bit of history in the official souvenir guidebook on sale at the National Presbyterian Church and Center. But the handsomely-illustrated book, written by former Washington Star religion editor Caspar Nannes, is full of other fascinating facts about America's newest great church.

That congregation came to be known, aptly enough, as First Presbyterian Church. In 1930, it merged with Covenant Presbyterian Church in a grim Romanesque building that had stood at Connecticut Avenue and 18th Street NW since 1889. The combined church was renamed in 1947 the National Presbyterian Church.

IKE'S BAPTISM

It was there that Dwight Eisenhower was baptized a few days after his inauguration in 1953. Eisenhower attended faithfully during his eight years as President, and his pew, number 41, has been preserved, along with historic pews used by 17 other presidents, in a special wing of the new edifice known as "The Chapel of the Presidents."

Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, Chaplain of the U.S. Senate, is chief minister of the new church. The conference center — a separate operation — is under the direction of Dr. Lowell R. Ditzen.

College Professor Will Deliver Talk

Dr. Gordon Chan, professor of biochemistry at College of Marin, will be the guest speaker at a special guitar folk mass at 10 a.m. at the Church in Ignacio (Episcopal).

The congregation will celebrate a "liturgy of the good earth" written by Rev. Charles Gompertz, vicar, in celebration of the fifth anniversary of the dedication of Grace Cathedral in San Francisco.

Religious Work

Expert In ESP To Given Talk

Dr. William G. Roll will be guest speaker at 7 p.m. tomorrow at the First Congregational Church of San Rafael.

Project director of the Psychical Research Foundation, Durham, N. C., Dr. Roll will speak on "Poltegeist and the Expanded Self."

He is in the Bay for the weekend, attending a conference on "ESP and Psychic Phenomena" at the University of California Extension Center in San Francisco.

Missionary Team To Talk Tomorrow

Rev. and Mrs. Paul Seaberg, newly appointed Assemblies of God missionaries to Sierra Leone, West Africa, will be guest speakers at 7 p.m. tomorrow at the Central Assembly of God Church in San Rafael.

On Wednesday, Rev. Artus S. Erickson, veteran missionary to Peru, will talk at 7:30 p.m.

Pulled Punches By Networks

(Editor's note: This is the second of two articles by the outspoken Federal Communications Commission member and author of the current "How to Talk Back to Your TV Set" from Atlantic-Little Brown Press. The columns are adapted from Nation magazine.)

By NICHOLAS JOHNSON

For some time I have contended that the networks—CBS, NBC, ABC—have been pulling their punches by withholding from the public information in their possession.

Now, Variety magazine provides a long list of "shrunken or vanished" documentaries at CBS which have been shelved, turned down or killed.

The list includes the following: a "hard-hitting" documentary on homosexuals by Bill Peters, gutted by the management before showing.

An in-depth investigation of Saigon corruption by Jay McMullen of CBS News, tabled.

Felix Green's film footage of North Vietnam, rejected for broadcast by CBS and given to NET.

Doug Leiterman's hour production on the black middle-class, dumped several months ago.

A project on "police brutality" turned into "an industrial promotion film for sponsor IBM."

And Gene DePoris' probe of the military-industrial complex, ultimately devoted to the "nomenclature of military rockets."

THE ARTICLE says CBS News has also had pending for several years a project on "Congressional ethics." I wonder when we'll see that one.

In fairness to CBS, and its news president, Richard Salant, the Variety article congratulates CBS for being the best of the lot, and at least having "good documentary intentions." Perhaps author Bill Greeley of Variety was remembering an earlier article in that publication which reported that ABC had doctored some of its documentaries to fit the corporate tastes of the sponsoring 3M Company.

Before Elke Sommer and Carol Burnett were censored—or since both CBS management and Vice President Spiro Agnew dislike that word—"edited", Mrs. Martin Luther King had hoped to deliver an impressive stack of mail, asking for an end to violence and war to President Richard M. Nixon.

CBS' rather cloudy explanation for censoring the idea was "long established network policy prohibits appeals for active support of any cause without prior consultation with the network."

YET THERE was ample time for such consultation between CBS and its employee, Carol Burnett, during the five or six days between the show's taping and broadcasting. Indeed, one wonders whether Vice President Agnew's similar appeal for mail during his Des Moines "media speech" was also subjected to "prior consultation" and network approval.

Just the other night Bob Hope presided over a nationwide NBC entertainment special which honored Mrs. Eisenhower and featured a statement by President Nixon—with explicit appeals for money, not just letters, for an "Eisenhower Hospital." And "long-established network policy" does not prevent "appeals for active support" in overt and subtle plugs for products—whether cigarettes, alcohol or automobiles.

In its recent Red Lion Broadcasting decision, the U.S. Supreme Court upholds the constitutionality of the FCC's "Fairness Doctrine." In its opinion, the high court made the extremely important observation: "Freedom of the press from governmental interference under the First Amendment does not sanction repression of that freedom by private interests."

It is clear that events and law, (most recently, the CBS censorship of Carol Burnett and Elke Sommer and the Supreme Court rulings) are converging toward newer doctrines prohibiting censorship by government and private corporations alike.

IN RED LION, the court made another observation that has generally been overlooked by commentators. The broadcasters had "strenuously argued" that requiring them to devote time (possibly free) to issues of controversy might force them to eliminate such coverage completely.

The court rejected this for two reasons:

First, the Court quoted network officials to the effect that they did not intend to abandon their efforts to cover controversial issues.

Second, and more significantly, the Court said that if broadcasters reduced the "volume and quality of coverage," the FCC has power to insist that they give adequate and fair attention to public issues.

The Red Lion decision was scarcely three months old when Variety reported that CBS has refused to broadcast an announcement by Look, describing an article on New Orleans Dist. Atty. Garrison, because the Look advertisement might require CBS to offer Garrison rebuttal time.

It would appear, therefore, that the Supreme Court's precise fear has materialized: that "licensees should suddenly prove timorous." To the extent that broadcasters are now refusing to cover issues of public importance and controversy, new approaches are needed to safeguard the flow of information to the public.

THE NETWORKS have also tried to argue that the dissemination of "news and opinion" is different from "entertainment" and that while they may censor news with some reluctance, they normally feel free to cut and chop "entertainment" programming as they see fit.

On this professed ground, for example, CBS eliminated the Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour. Yet here, too, the networks have refused to heed the clear words and warnings of the Supreme Court, which has discussed and rejected the distinction between opinion and entertainment:

"The line between the informing and the entertainment is too elusive for the protection of that basic right (a free press.) Everyone is familiary with instances of propaganda through fiction. What is one man's amusement, teaches another's doctrine."

The networks are used to asking others to listen to them. Now it may be their turn to listen—to the people, and to the Supreme Court.

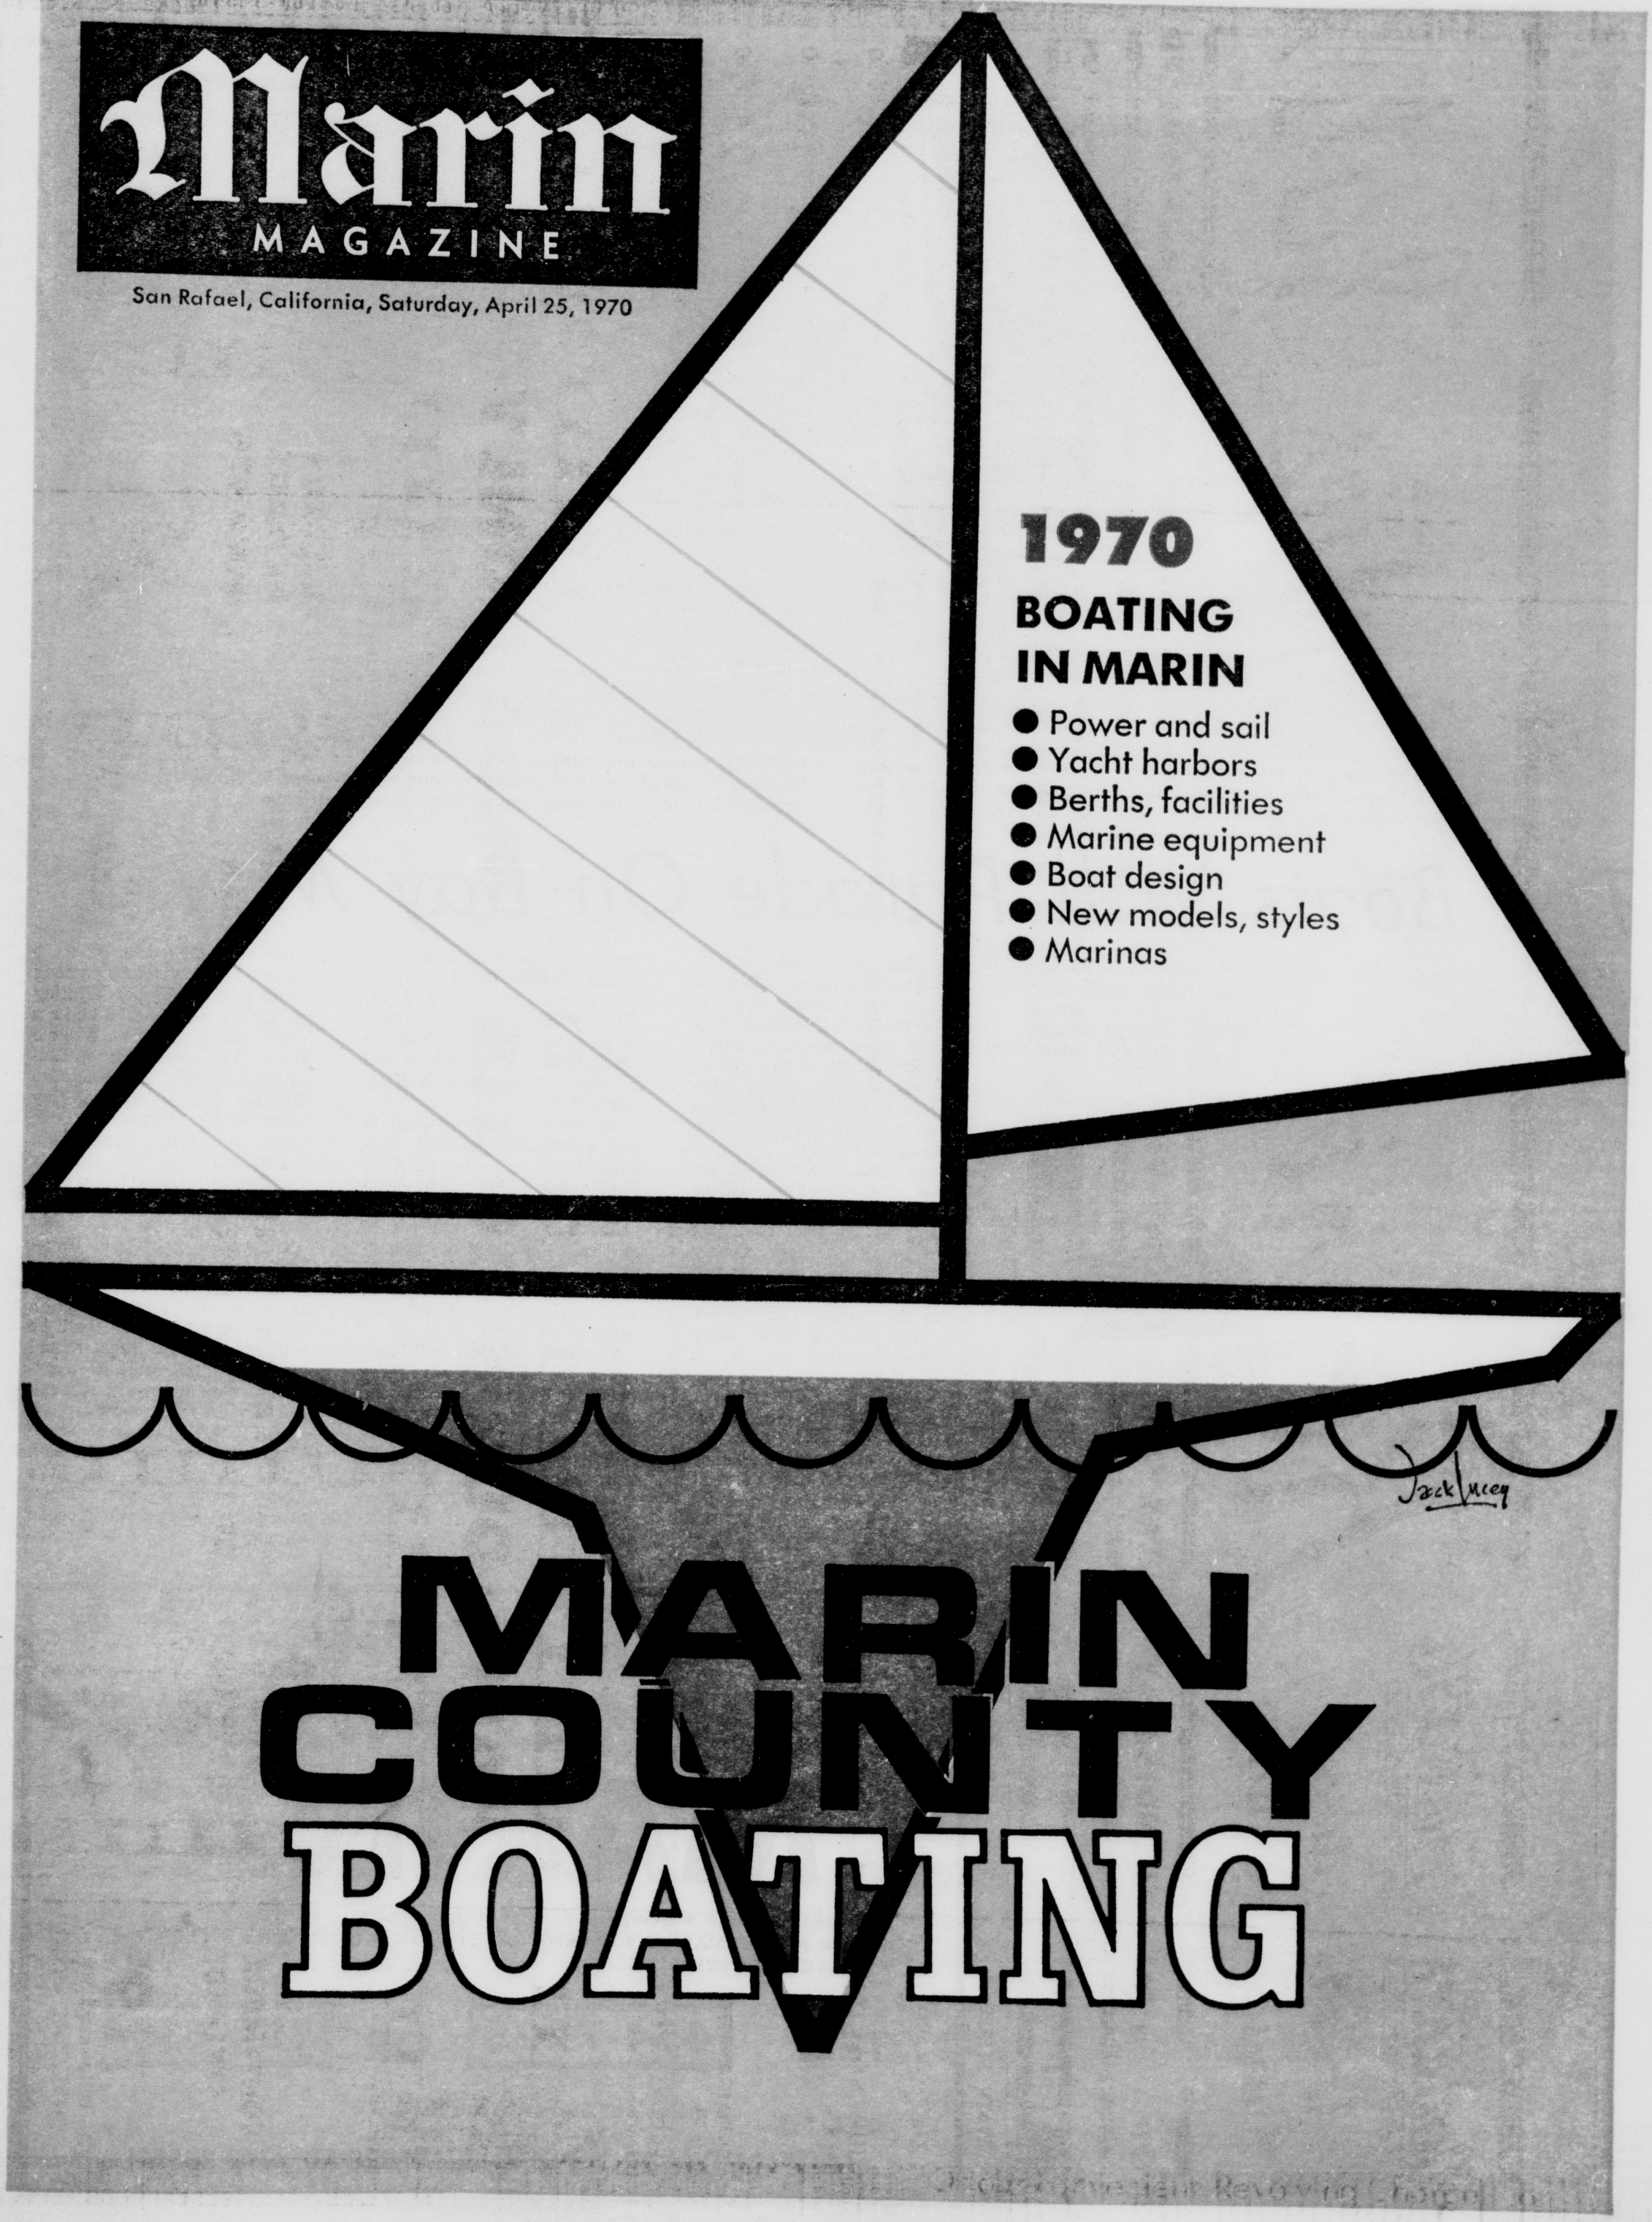
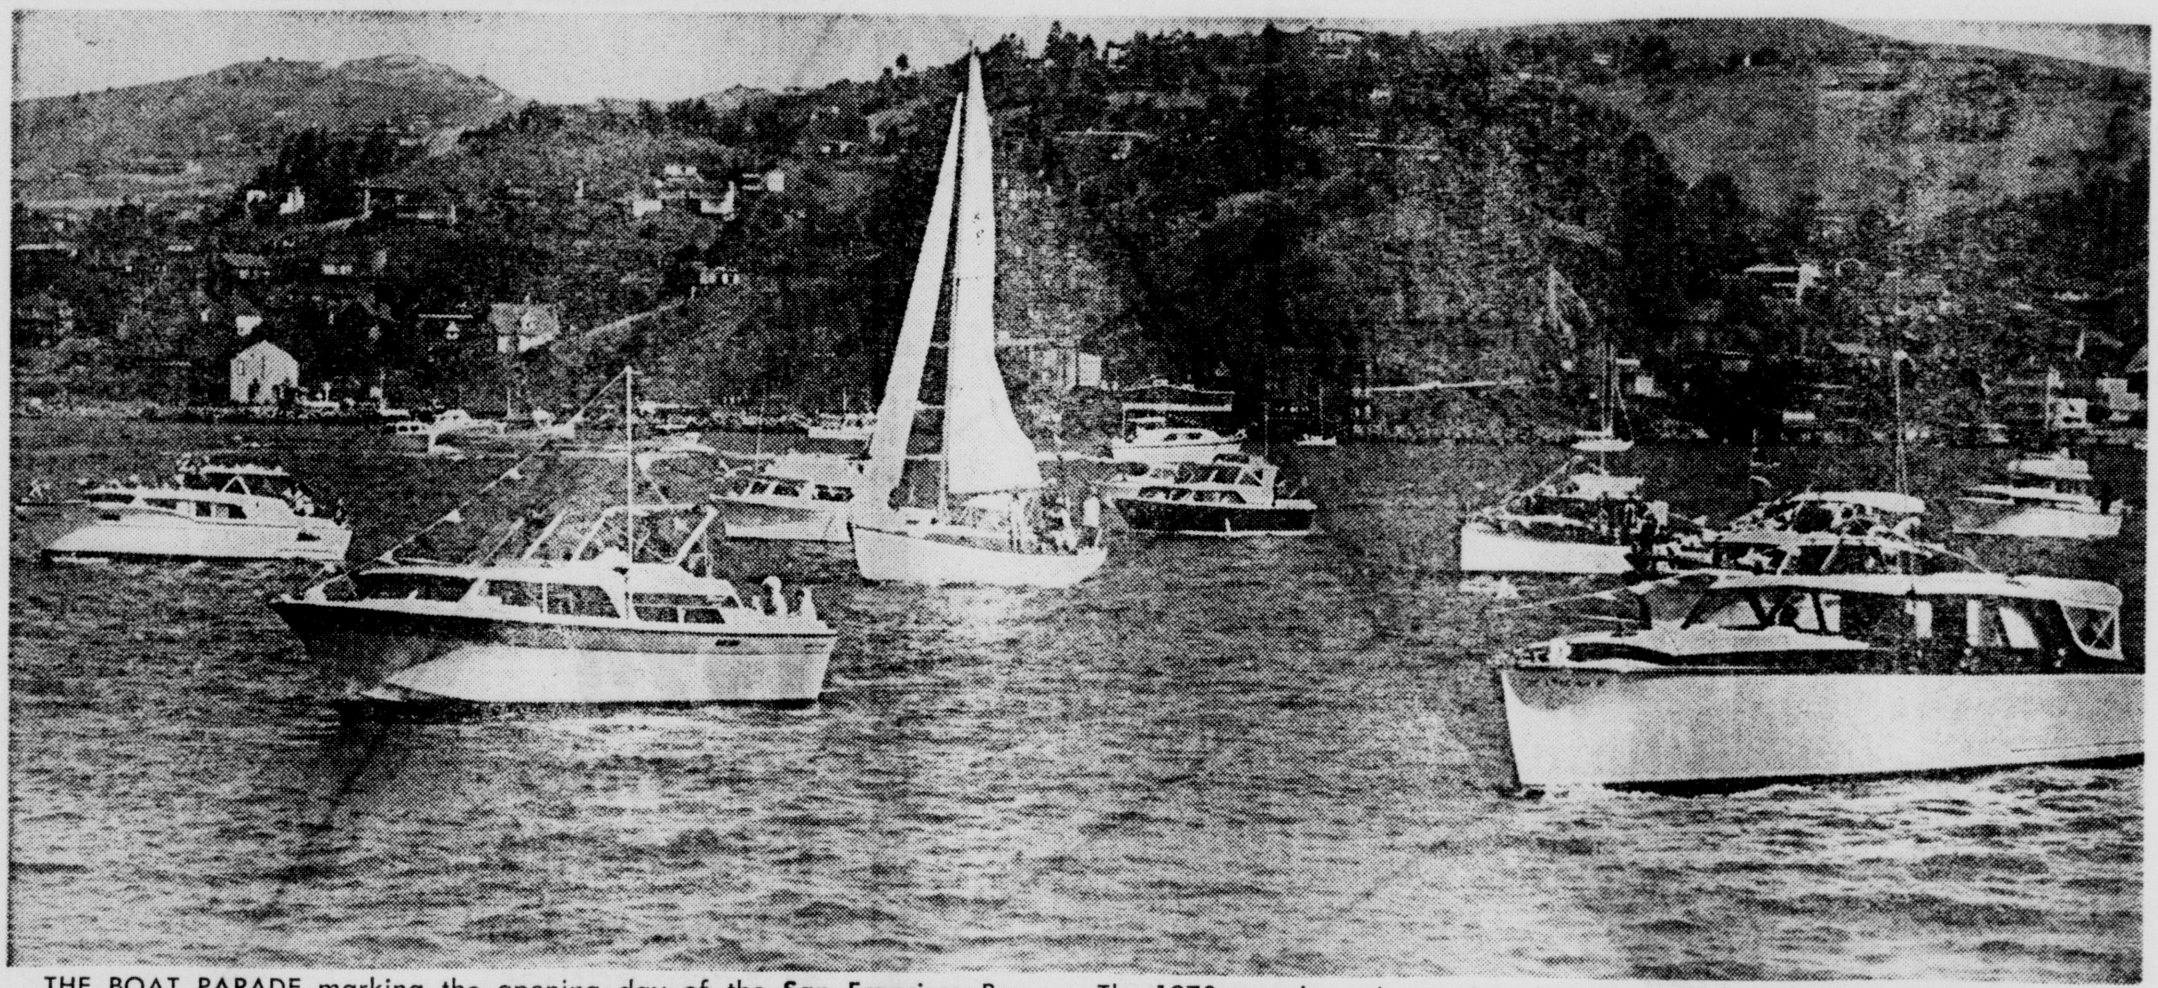
MAGAZINE
San Rafael, California, Saturday, April 25, 1970





THE BOAT PARADE marking the opening day of the San Francisco Bay yachting season is a colorful Northern California tradition, bringing out thousands of both motor and wind-driven vessels of all shapes and sizes.

The Boats Will Parade On Bay May 3

All year long, they drift or putter out on the bay, ready-made shots for a photo magazine, unnoticed by anyone except maybe shutter bugs, their owners, or big-eyed kids just discovering machines that motivate.

"Look, daddy, there's a ship-boat!"

Look, daddy, on May 3 there will be a thousand ship-boats, and sailboats, and motorboats, and boat-boats, all or some of them decked out like a dowager going to her second debutante ball.

ACTUALLY, there's expected to be some 3,000 pleasure craft of all sizes, shapes and gaudy colors on hand off Racoon Straits on hand to be blessed in something more concretely spiritual than champagne when the 1970 yachting season officially opens on San Francisco Bay with the giant parade of boats.

Things will get under way at Corinthian Yacht Club in Tiburon with a breakfast, pledge to the Flag and a prayer for the deceased in Vietnam.

From there according to activities chairman Capt. Elmer Towle, who helped originate the blessing of the fleet some six years ago as a Marin County tradition, the host of crafts will converge on Racoon Straits to begin the parade and receive the three-denominational blessing from aboard the U. S. Navy's destroyer the USS Cowell.

Rev. William Perdue, of the Westminster United Presbyterian Church in Tiburon, Rabbi Joseph Ashley of Temple Emanuel in San Francisco, and Fr. George Johnson of the St. Hillary's Church in Tiburon, will be on board to deliver the solemn and impressive blessing.

THE BLESSING of the fleet will also be actual in form, since the boats will be baptized, so to speak, by spray from a fireboat. In addition, there will be music from the 26th Navy Band.

All sorts of boats, enough to boggle anyone's nautical imagination will be on hand for the Pacific Inter Club Yacht Association-sponsored event, from sailboats to power cruisers of all sizes to some huge windjammers.

The blessing is set for 10 a.m., with the actual parade of boats going at 10:30 a.m.

YACHT CLUBS will once again be divided into three fleets for different starting times. The three color designations are green, blue and red.

The San Francisco Chronicle will again liven up the event with some friendly competition with its ninth annual best-decorated-boats award, with winners receiving plaques plus prizes of merchandise.

Marin County clubs among the 63 yacht clubs participating will include the Corinthian Yacht Club, San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere, Sausalito Yacht Club, Sausalito Cruising Club, Paradise Cay Yacht Club, Strawberry Cove Yacht Club, Marin Yacht Club, San Rafael Yacht Club, Gallinas Yacht Club, Loch Lomond Yacht Club and Bel Marin Keys Yacht Club.

The Coast Guard will be on hand for the second straight year, to assure greater safety on what is bound to be a super-crowded bay. This will be achieved through regular and auxiliary patrol craft for possible boarding of boats that break safety and parade rules.

IT'S BOUND to be a pleasurable, memorable day on the bay.

And if on May 3 your little toddler suddenly says: "Mommy, daddy, I see a whole ocean of ship-boats," you better believe it.

The Cruisers Woo Ladies With Luxuries

Upgraded Galleys Typify Trend In The Bigger Boats

Ever since builders elected to grant full voting rights to women in boat-buying decisions by including woman-appeal in their designs, there has been a growing emphasis on interior comfort, convenience, and — yes, that's the word for it — luxury.

This year more than ever before, in greater numbers than ever before, big-boat builders and their designers have pulled out all the stops to woo the feminine vote.

TO WIN IT, they are putting forth some truly handsome candidates among the big-boat power fleet. These are the luxury craft of 30 feet and up which, on the outside, bear the rich good looks of the thoroughbreds they are.

Inspection of the interiors yields proof their beauty is much deeper than a skin of gleaming fiberglass, and also underscores the importance the designers have placed on the distaff endorsement.

Not surprisingly, the aim to appeal to women has resulted in some distinct improvement.

Aware that a woman looks first to the kitchen, designers have up-graded galleys in most luxury craft to include larger stoves and refrigerators; many include ovens this year as standard or optional equipment. Specifically, the three-burner countertop stove is now the norm where once a two-burner unit was standard. And electric power has replaced alcohol in many instances.

REFRIGERATORS, once a cheese-and-beer proposition, are bigger, fully lined and color coordinated. In several of the houseboats and one or two large cruisers, refrigerators are full wall units.

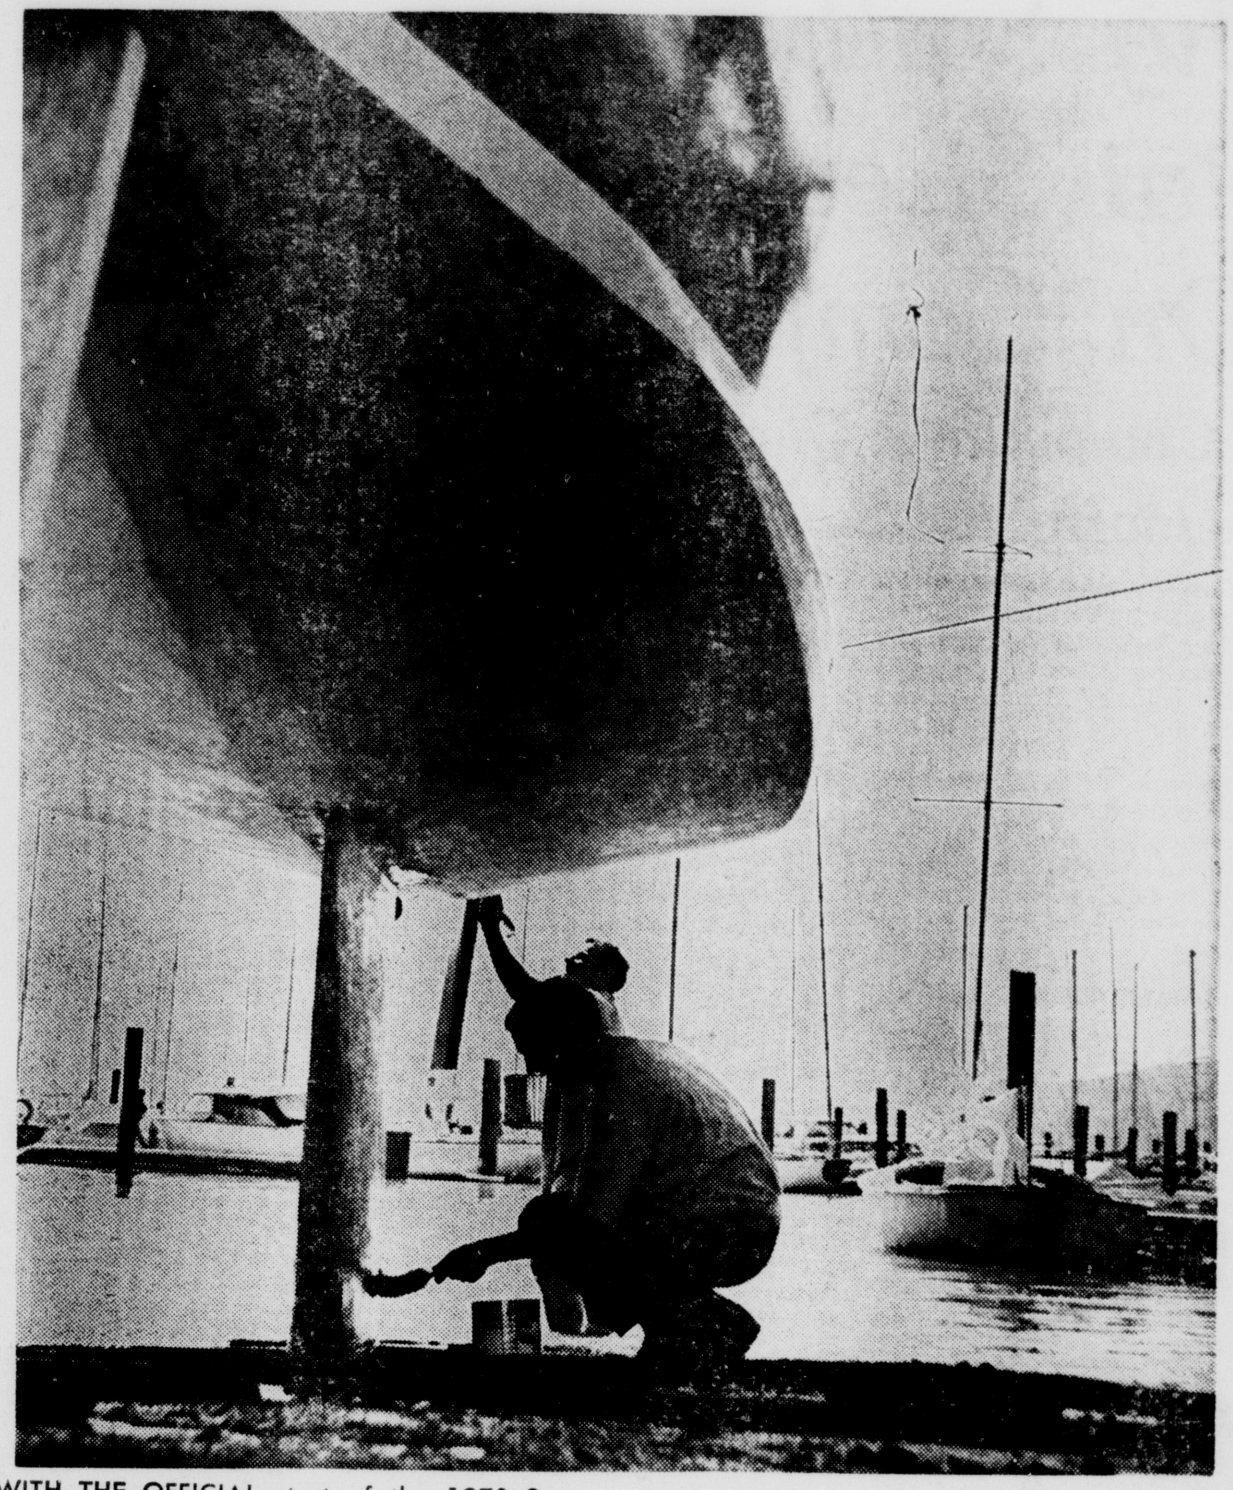
Several 36-foot sportfishermen come with eye-level wall ovens, an improvement straight from the architectural magazines. One electronic model will roast a meat course in a matter of minutes.

Even the electric garbage disposal can be found on board this year, and more shelf space and easy-to-clean counter tops and floors make the clean-up chores easier.

Indoor-outdoor carpeting, wall-to-wall, is standard in virtually all luxury boats on the market. So, too, are such wife-winning ways with interiors as color coordinated lined curtains and slipcovers; wipe-clean surfaces throughout in richly-grained wood patterns; fuller, more spacious heads (frequently two) with showers, ventilation, and electric flush toilets; fluorescent-lit vanities with dressers; more closet space; and general roominess.

TODAY YOU can order your yacht with air conditioning and built-in stereo and TV.

The campaign to win the women's vote is clearer than ever this year. Designers and builders, determined to remove a man's boats from the status of "the other woman" in his wife's eye, have unmistakably brought the afterguard to the fore in the luxury yacht design — and made some marked improvements for everybody in the bargain.



WITH THE OFFICIAL start of the 1970 San Francisco Bay yachting season drawing near, Peter English, rear, and Jerry Gunn put a new coat of paint on the bottom of the Galatea at the San Francisco Yacht Club harbor in Tiburon. They crew on the Galatea, giving skipper Allan Laidlaw a hand. (Independent-Journal photo by Alfred M. Arn)

Big Sailboats Put Stress On Comfort

Competitive Qualities Are Unaffected By The Changes

Stock cruising sailboats for 1970 show more attention to interior comfort for the crew than in previous years, yet they still carry features designed to give them a competitive edge in racing.

There is an increasing trend toward the fin keelspade rudder configuration along with high aspect ratio sails, more ballast-to-displacement ratio, and small, lightweight diesel engines in the auxiliary sailboats.

FEMALE FIRST mates will appreciate the better galleys, dinettes, and berth arrangements in many of the 1970 models.

The O'Day 23 - foot keel-centered sloop utilizes a simple mechanism to raise the cabin top to increase headroom from four feet six inches to six feet three inches, with side curtains for weather protection. The cabin of this trailerable cruising sailboat sleeps five.

Mid-ship cockpit, double cabin layouts providing greater cabin privacy are found in Newport Boats' Concept 25 and several imported English boats.

THE FIN KEEL-spade rudder arrangement common to many racing class boats appears on boats as big as the Columbia 43, designed by Bill Tripp. Also available with a centerboard, the Columbia 43 has a waterline length of 32 feet six inches with a broad beam affording fine stability and plenty of living space below. The boat is a flush deck sloop.

Chris-Craft's new Pawnee 26, built in Taiwan, has a high ballast-to-displacement ratio, as does the Grampian 30 (46 per cent), the Tartan 34 from Douglass & McLeod, the Jensen's Cal 2-30, the Allied 39 cutter, and Larsson Trade USA's Vega 27.

Nautica Corp. is producing what may well be the smallest ketch-rigged yacht around. Only 20 feet long, the keel-centerboarder sleeps four and has a galley and head. Like most of the cruising sailboats available today, the hull is fiberglass and the spars aluminum.

THE VIVACITY 24 from Russell Marine has a special barbecue galley and twin ice boxes for use from cabin and cockpit.

Among the new small cruising sailboats available are the 18 foot Alberg-design Typhoon by Cape Dory with 160 square feet of sail, MacGregor Yacht's Venture 22-foot retractable keel boat sleeping five, and the Gary Mull-designed Newport 20 from Lindsey Plastics. Nautica Corp.'s 16-foot Marauder, a keel centerboard boat sleeping two, is one of the smallest.

The trend to diesel power for auxiliary sailboats is more evident this year, notably in boats from 28 feet up. Despite initial higher cost compared with gasoline engines, the diesel offers sailors more long range dependability, greater protection from fire and explosions, and operating fuel economies.

The trend has been boosted by the development of smaller, lighter weight engines that fit into the tight space and rigid weight requirements of racing-cruising sailboats. Diesel power is available on Chris-Craft's 35-foot Caribbean, the Islander Yacht 37-footer, and the Larsson Signolla 34-footer, as well as a number of others.

RAFAEL GARCIA is pictured at work on the Circle in the Sausalito Yacht Harbor. The boat is not his. But some day, he says, he will have a boat of his own. In the meantime, he is happy at the opportunity to work upon and around the fine watercraft that abound in the waters and the harbors of Marin and its neighboring San Francisco Bay counties.

You Can Take Good Boating Pictures

Follow These Simple Rules To Retain The Pleasure Of Your Outings

By FRANK ROHR JR.

There's probably no sport more suited to exciting and memorable photography than pleasure boating, and the best looking ships' logs are those with photo sections.

Whether it's a silent anchorage whose peace will vividly recall the cruise, or a boisterous family weekend complete with kids, picnic hampers, rain squalls and brilliant sunshine, good pictures can increase the pleasure in boating.

YOU NEED NOT be a skilled semi-professional to produce good boating photos. With luck, the beginning amateur is likely to snap the one great picture of the trip.

There are, however, some rules and precautions which will reduce the element of chance and help insure good results.

Marine photography demands cameras with adjustable lenses. The moments are fleeting, and usually include action, often distant; so for all but the most tranquil scenes, fixed-focus types are not sufficiently versatile. The 35-millimeter camera in an adjustable, single-lens reflex model, is compact and perfect for sequences on board your own boat.

A long distance or zoom lens will "pull in" nearby scenic and sport subjects.

THE TWIN-LENS reflex while more bulky and capable of taking only a 12-exposure roll, can be invaluable, especially for color photography. For example, there's nothing like a good two and a quarter inch square color negative for big color prints, for magazine reproduction, if and when you enter this field.

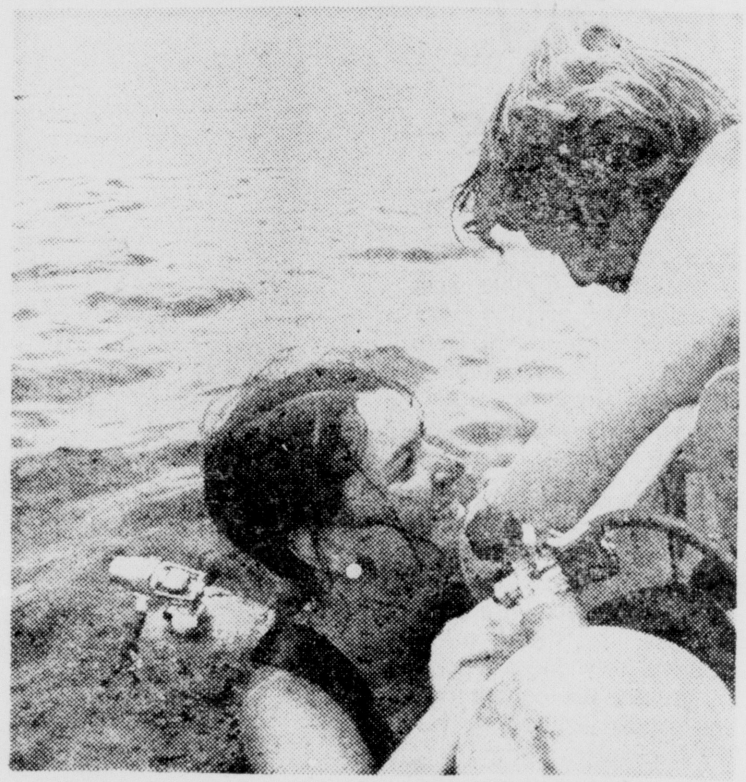
Simple cameras which provide a good introduction to marine photography, such as the Kodak Instamatic line, use foolproof film cartridges and, in more sophisticated models, have automatic electric-eye exposure control. Remember that the basic fixed-focus types may have great depth of field, but employ a relatively slow lens—about 1/50th of a second—which is better for still scenes than action.

In both power and sail, action is primary to good boat photography. Life aboard tends to look fairly sedentary in photos. Landings and departures, guest arrivals, sail drill, racing drill, racing starts and finishes, picnics and swimming parties are perfect subjects.

REMEMBER, when photographing other boats from your own deck, it's easier to stop action coming towards or going directly away from the camera than at right angles to the lens. Distant action is always more easily stopped than the same thing close up. Even the simplest cameras can photograph action by "panning"—following the moving subject with the lens as the shutter is tripped. You'll get a blurry background, but a sharp subject and a great impression of speed.

Clamp a lens shade on your camera and keep it there all day. Out on the water, the glare and glancing light have a far greater effect on what you think is proper exposure than they do ashore.

Since boats are at best unstable, use at least 1/125th of a second shutter speed. With fast films in bright sunlight, 1/250th of a second, and, at close focus, even 1/500th is indicated. Try to keep the horizon line level; it makes heeled sailboat and planing powerboat scenes even more dramatic.



ON OR OFF the water, the same general picture-taking rule holds true when people are involved as subjects: Your shots generally will be more interesting if taken close-up. If you can't get near, a long focus camera lens will help.

LET THE CREW become natural actors. Photograph them while they're working, playing, talking. Ocean racing and round - the - buoys competition provide excellent photo opportunities.

Good spots for photography on sailboats (unless there's a short-tacking duel in progress) are the transom and the high side of the deckhouse. On powerboats, use the flying bridge, the "back porch" and the bow pulpit.

On bright days, a yellow filter will highlight sea and clouds, and give otherwise hazy scenes dramatic definition. Remember to compensate by opening up to one full aperture stop when shooting through this filter. Take it off when you photograph people; it gives even the deepest tan instant anemia.

IN ALL CASES, consult your meter, whether built-in or separate. But bear in mind that brilliant sun and sea often require a half-stop less exposure than normal. This correction factor can vastly improve your photos. Don't be afraid to close way down and shoot into the sun. Backlighted marine photography can produce dazzling effects.

At times, bracketing the subject with a variety of exposures provides insurance against mistakes. A wide angle lens is helpful in close quarters.

Salt water is murder on delicate camera parts; the briefest wetting can put your camera out of action. Keep it in its case, with the strap around your neck. If you have more than one camera, a water-resistant bag is indispensable. Make the bag fast on deck when you're not shooting. Never, but never leave the bag adrift, unless the sight of all that expensive gear bouncing overboard won't give you heart failure.

FILM, TOO, suffers from high temperatures and humidity. Don't leave a loaded camera sitting in the sun, and don't keep exposed rolls of film on board longer than necessary.

There's a great variety of film on the market today. Familiarize yourself with several types in black-and-white and color, and stick to them for consistent results.

One fast black-and-white film, for example, is Kodak Tri-X in both 120 and 35 mm. With an ASA of 400, it has great flexibility. You can use it in natural light at dawn and dusk, shoot successfully with it on the darkest days, and stop the fastest action on bright ones. A good standard setting with this film on sunny days is 1/250th of a second at f/22.

IN COLOR, Kodak's Ektachrome-X for richness and most action situations is a good choice. With an ASA of 64, a standard setting in bright sunlight is 1/125 of a second at f/11; down south, however, and on exceptionally brilliant days up north, consult your meter for a setting of 1/125th of a second at f/16. High Speed Ektachrome, with an ASA of 125, gives you even more versatility in color action. Slower film, like Kodachrome II, has great richness and subtlety of tone.

A sky filter, which needs no correction, will eliminate an occasional over-blue effect in color photography.

Small Motorboats Up Safety, Power

Greater Sportfishing Emphasis Is Yet Another Trend In 1970

If continuity and widespread adaptation are marks of a trend, then trend-spotters viewing the 1970 fleet of small and medium sized power craft can count at least six trends:

Bigger power on smaller boats.

A stress on safety — through sink-proof hulls — that is virtually industrywide in all models this year.

Stern drive power on the increase.

Continued emphasis on sportfishing craft and the recreational fisherman market.

Across-the-board endorsement by builders of the split-cockpit layout in medium size (15-24 foot) runabouts.

STILL MORE signs of the Detroit influence in small boat styling.

At least a dozen builders of power craft are marketing boats which qualify as high-performance craft, small boats which go fast — 40 miles per hour and up. Generally, these are two-and four-passenger designs, sleek in appearance and with hulls shaped just for speed. They are powered by stern drives and, in some cases, jet-drive engines from 210 to 500 horsepower in single and twin installations.

As examples: Monza Marine's Monza 19, which can take a power plant of up to 400 horsepower; Arrow Marine, a 17½-footer with 500 horsepower jet propulsion; Chris-Craft's XK 19 runabout, a Jim Wynne-designed speedster whose 230 horsepower drive and deep-V hull combine for speeds in excess of 50 miles per hour; Enterprise Yacht's 27½ foot Super Sport 288, powered by twin 255s and a V-drive train. And, of course, those gleaming Donzi designs are back—the smallest of which (the Ski Sporter), at 16 feet overall, tops the 50 miles per hour mark with a single 165 Interceptor stern drive unit.

SPEED, EXPECTEDLY, is not cheap; the aforementioned craft carry price tags ranging from about $6,000 to a top of $18,000.

And, of course, they've influenced the design of other small power craft — those which might be termed junior high performance boats. They don't have a sternful of horsepower — but they still look fast. Sports car styling elements such as dished Gran Prix steering wheel, racing stripes, bucket seats, two-plus-two consoles, proliferate instrumentation, air scoops — these all contribute to the look of speed, real or illusory.

Count among these hot-looking designs Glastron's 14 foot Jet-flite, Carlson Contender, and Arrow's Super Sidewinder 16. All three are outboards but with hull shapes that should bring them near the 40 miles per hour criterion of high performance craft.

VIRTUALLY EVERY small and medium range power craft has built-in foam flotation this year. Foam is now distributed in side walls as well as boat bottoms, and the balance factor has been pretty thoroughly engineered.

Stern drive power? This year, it provides perhaps another indicator of a trend to serve the boating public's apparently growing appetite for speed; 210 horsepower seems the most popular power unit — in the 16-23 foot runabout class. But optional higher power is available in almost all instances.

This year, a trend which first surfaced a few seasons back is more marked than ever — the inclusion of the open fisherman-type craft in a builder's line. These are clean-lined boats with uncluttered cockpits, usually in the 20- to 24-foot range — a helmsman's console, located amidships or slightly aft, a pair of vee-seats forward, and that's usually it. Some designs of this type are easily capable of speeds over 35 miles per hour.

ONE POPULAR trend in the power fleet this year: widespread adaptation of the split cockpit layout among runabout models. These bowriders, as they are often called, do away with foredecks entirely and utilize the resulting space as forward seating area.

The design is especially effective in wide, or blunt-nosed bows, and increases the overall seating area considerably.

The most standard item among the smaller power fleet for 1970 is the standard equipment list. For most boats it reads this way:

"Deep-padded fold-down seats, full instrumentation, fuel gauge and tank, mechanical steering, positive flotation, bow and stern rails, bilge pump and blower (stern drive models), deck hardware, navigational lights. . ."

Convenience For Operator Is Key In New Outboards

New Refinements Are Certain To Add To Boating Pleasure

Changes, modifications, engineering refinements, most aimed at greater operator convenience, are seen on the 1970 line up of outboard motors.

For example, all new Mercury motors have new corrosion-proof, plastic water pumps, and jet prop exhaust for less maintenance, less noise.

THE JOHNSON'S have sturdier stern brackets, starter interlocks and better air scoops.

Molybdenum-filled piston rings reduce cylinder wall friction to a minimum in the new Chrysler outboards. This contributes to performance and reliability.

On Evinrude's 60 horsepower Triumph, additional power is wrung out through three changes: a third intake passage is added, new piston rings with angled construction are incorporated, and carburetion improvements contribute to easier breathing.

The four-cycle outboard from Fisher-Pierce is fine-tuned and honed by the manufacturer for even better fuel economy and smoother idling.

SMALL THINGS? Yes. But important to the skippers who buy and use outboards and want maximum performance and minimum grief during the boating season.

The big motors are bigger this year, too. Kiekhaefer Mercury now tops its line with a new 135 horsepower, six-cylinder motor. Johnson and Evinrude have machines of 115 horsepower, and Chrysler has a 120.

Despite improvements and new features, outboard prices remain highly attractive. Smallest motors in the one and a half to two horsepower class cost about $150. Fishing motors from 10 to 15 horsepower are priced about $450; and skiing motors in the 50 horsepower class are tagged at around $800. Top power machines for the hot outboard boats and cruisers list for from $1,300 to $1,600.

USE OF capacitor discharge electronic ignition is spreading from the largest outboards down to the smaller ones. Along with electronic ignition, surface gap spark plugs are finding increasing popularity in outboards of all sizes.

Electric starting is offered on outboards down to the 10 horsepower class, while long and short shafts are available on almost every size of kicker. Most of the motors are water-cooled, but several of the smallest fishing and auxiliary outboards are air-cooled.

Propeller options are wide this year. Most motor manufacturers offer props for racing, water skiing and cruising. In addition, the larger propeller manufacturers are offering special wheels for stock outboard motors in many materials, including low cost plastic.

PROVISION FOR battery charging receives new attention from the manufacturers. For example, nine-ampere flywheel alternators are standard equipment on the 115, 85 and 60 horsepower Evinrudes. A 10-ampere generator with automatic voltage regulation is part of the 40 horsepower Lark.

Keen engineering continues to push up horsepower yield per cubic inch of piston displacement. Mercury's new 40 horsepower motor, for example, displaces only 33.3 cubic inches. Only a few years ago it was almost unheard of for a production engine to produce as much as one horse per cube. In 1970 it's a reality surpassed.

It's those little engineering refinements and constant plugging on the part of outboard engine company's research departments that make these things possible.

IT MAY SEEM a bit early, but those warm late spring and summer days when sun bathing becomes a California pastime really aren't so far away. And what better place to enjoy the sunshine than in the privacy of your own boat? It's the ideal way to escape the crowded conditions of today's beaches.

Carry Extra Line Along On Boat Outings

Before leaving on your next boating outing, the Evinrude people suggest you make up a spare line or two and take it along.

A bow, stern, or anchor line may be lost or used for some other purpose, so extra line always come in handy.

To prevent unnecessary grief, make a check of all lines before going out in your boat. A little extra time spent in checking that line may save time and equipment. Lines are quite often neglected.

The Inboard Engines Proliferate, Diversify

There's A Wider Range With More Options For Buyers In 1970

The inboard engine offering for 1970 has been likened by one boatman to the expanding universe, "scattering ever outward, yet never decreasing in density. They seem to proliferate while they diversify!"

Conventional production engines currently span twice the range offered a few years ago and offer four times the number of options, features and transmissions.

Inboard marine engines for pleasure boats now range from eight to 525 horsepower, and from one to eight cylinders in both gasoline and diesel.

Each manufacturer offers a selection of power trains: bobtail, manual or hydraulic transmission, direct drive or reduction geared, V-drive, angle drive and outdrive. Yes, and there are turbine jet drives too.

CLOSED CIRCUIT, freshwater cooling is a popular option on most gasoline engines and is offered as standard on some. Most of the new diesels come through with fresh-water cooling as part of the standard package. The closed system offers faster warm-up, better control of temperature and much reduced internal corrosion.

Diesels have shed even more weight while increasing horsepower output per pound of weight. Smaller diesels for auxiliary sailboat use are blossoming. Fuel oil burners from five to 35 horsepower are now offered by several manufacturers for the raghoister wanting the safety and economy of diesel propulsion.

Diesels have adopted the outdrive, too. Or is it the other way around? The houseboat explosion has contributed to this development since they usually are designed for outdrive power. The result is the happy marriage of the diesel to the outdrive in a wide range of powers.

BIGGER BORES, shorter strokes and V-configurations have made some of the current diesels spittin' images of their gas burning cousins. Several of the high speed, light weight Vs look startingly like automobile motors. The gargantuan, ungainly diesel of yesteryear is gone.

The high performance two-cycle diesel has expanded its scope. Manufactured by Detroit Diesel for many years in a selection of powers and displacements, the type is now joined by Chrysler's Nissan.

Turbocharging is on the upswing for both gasoline and diesel engines, with particular emphasis on the latter.

WHILE WOMEN'S skirt hemlines go up, engine profiles go down, albeit perhaps not in the same ratio. Numerous new inboards are offered in slant or angled versions, and a few are horizontal. Lower engines allow lower cockpit decks, contributing to cruiser comfort and safety.

Engine cost on a horsepower basis remains a bright part of the boating picture. A typical 200 horsepower gasoline power plant complete with transmission and all accessories, can still be bought for under $2,000. Typical price for a 200 horsepower diesel is about $6,000. But diesel prices vary more widely for a given power than gas engine prices.

"Toned-down" and "cooled" versions of gas engines are marketed by two or three manufacturers. Such "de-souped" mills are aimed squarely at the power cruiser man who cruises extensively and hard—and who wants reliability above all. Lower compression, slower rotation, beefier parts, tougher valves, mark these work horses. Seamaster and Palmer are typical manufacturers.

ELECTRONIC ignition, popular on larger outboards, is appearing with increased frequency on inboards. Advantage is hotter spark that can fire fouled plugs, better idling, superior high speed performance, and increased breaker point life or even complete elimination of the points. On some new engines, a slotted disc replaces the points. On others, tiny rotating magnets do the work.

Attention to details on the 1970 inboard engines means starter motors are placed higher on the engines, away from bilge water and easy to service. Better drive arrangements and multiple V-belts are appearing on alternators and cooling water pumps. Exhaust manifolds are designed and placed to prevent back-flow of condensate into the cylinders.

At least two firms offer engine conversion kits in addition to complete marine engines. Kits for both automobile engines and truck diesels are available.

A SEPARATOR fiberglass inboard is a new and sporty addition to the Correct Craft fleet. The spiffy 16-footer seats six.

Plastic Bags Handy

Plastic bags are useful on board not only for keeping foodstuffs dry, but also for taking wet laundry or garbage ashore.

A Booklet Lists Films

A booklet listing nearly 400 boating films for showing to clubs, groups, schools, etc., is available from the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers.

The pocket-sized booklet lists films on boating adventure, cruising, boat construction, racing, fishing, water skiing, diving, navigation, swimming, sailing, marine engines, boat maintenance, education and weather lore. Each film is described briefly and rental costs are given. Many of the films, however, are available free. The distributor of each film is listed.

The directory, called "Boating Films", is published jointly by the NAEBM and the Boating Industry Association. For your free copy write to NAEBM, 537 Steamboat Road, Greenwich, Conn., 06830.

Boating Industry Optimistic For '70

Recreational Craft Sales Expected To Show Gains

The pleasure boating industry is expected to weather any federal anti-inflationary moves during 1970, possibly expanding its already record dollar volume, and at the very least holding its own in an era of tight money.

"I don't think the industry will enjoy the same rate of growth during 1970 that it has known in the past," said an industry spokesman recently, "but I am confident that the broad base we have built over the past decade will support any temporary shrinkage in available dollars."

Recreational boating recorded a new high in retail sales in 1969 of $3,292,000,000 worth of new and used boats, motors, accessories, safety equipment, fuel, insurance, docking, maintenance, services and club memberships. This represents a 5 per cent expansion of the market each year during the 1960s.

A NUMBER OF manufacturers reported record sales and earnings for fiscal years ending in 1969 among them Outboard Marine Corp., whose sales were up 47 million dollars from 1968 and net earnings rose $1,416,000, and Chris-Craft Industries Inc., which reported a sales increase of $13,294,000 and a rise in net profits of $948,000.

At the end of the model year from September, 1968, to August, 1969, the industry reported an increase in the combined dollar value of shipments of motors, trailers, and all boats of 14.9 per cent. Unit shipments in certain categories were down from the previous model year, however: outboard motors, down 1.3 per cent; inboard boats, down 8.6 per cent; sailboats, down 0.2 per cent; and canoes, down 2.9 per cent. Still, all product categories except canoes showed gains in dollar value of shipments, indicating a general rise in dollar value per unit augmented by a willingness on the part of the consumer to "buy bigger": bigger motors (motors of 45 horsepower and up commanded a 5 per cent greater share of the motor market) and bigger boats (the average length of outboard boats sold reached a 10-year high of 15.9 feet.)

Shipments of marine accessories for the model year were ahead 13.2 per cent in dollar value over the previous model year.

AT A GLANCE, estimates of the pleasure boating market during 1969, shaped up as follows:

BOATING HIGHLIGHTS OF 1969
43,230,000 Americans used the waterways more than once.
8,646,000 watercraft were used including —
615,000 inboard boats and auxiliary sailboats.
5,101,000 outboard boats
598,000 sailboats without inboard power
2,332,000 rowboats, canoes, and miscellaneous craft
707,000 inboard gasoline and diesel engines were in use
7,101,000 outboard motors were in use
3,660,000 boat trailers were in use

ESTIMATED SALES FOR 1969 INCLUDED:
310,000 outboard boats
510,000 outboard motors
49,000 inboard/outdrive boats
295,000 boat trailers
35,000 sailboats
26,000 canoes
2,000 houseboats
6,000 pontoon deck boats

There was continued merger and acquisition activity in the boating field during 1969, a trend that is expected to continue during the early 1970s.

ADVANCES IN technology and a growing desire on the part of boat owners to escape the scraping and painting chores have evoked a swing to more carefree materials. Where U.S. Coast Guard numbering statistics in 1960 showed 51.8 per cent of all numbered boats having wooden hulls, the percentage dropped to 34.7 by 1968 as aluminum and fiberglass reinforced plastics increased their shares of the market. The growing use of aluminum in boating generated a 93 per cent increase in the poundage of aluminum going into boats and engines in the decade just closed, reaching an estimated 122,000,000 pounds in 1969. The consumption of fiberglass reinforced plastics by boating reached an estimated 278,000,000 pounds last year, an increase of 209 per cent in 10 years.

A recent survey by the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers showed that fewer builders were using the full range of hull materials. In 1969, 87 builders were using aluminum, compared to 91 the year before; 530 were using fiberglass compared to 537 the year before; and the trend continued for all materials, including steel and rubber.

An industry source reported that while boating dealers averaged 15 per cent higher gross sales during 1969, their margins of profit were smaller than in previous years. The increased cost of doing business generated by higher wages, raises in interest rates on floor-planning monies, and other jumps in overhead expenses absorbed more than the increase in gross sales.

More And Better Marine Accessories

New Products Mean Added Boating Enjoyment

The evolving technology of the leisure sciences, with a smattering of space science, all but obliterate the great age of "iron men and wooden ships" for the modern boatmen.

The 1970 crop of marine electronics, hardware, coatings, cordage, and even clothing promises greater comfort, safety, and labor minimization.

BOATMEN WHO have squinted and strained in the bright sun to read their depth sounders will enjoy the digital readout depth indicators found on some of the 1970 models. There are no blips or flashing lights to decipher, just simple, easy-to-read dials with instant depth soundings in bold, familiar letters.

Sounding more like a piece of space equipment than a boat accessory, the Hadrian dead-reckoning computer from Brookes & Gatehouse is a fully automatic device that shows the boat's position at all times, subject to the navigator's making a correct assessment of the tidal set and leeway. It shows on its dial any distance accidentally made to port or starboard of the prescribed course.

For the sail enthusiast with a yen to really tune his sails, Palmer Johnson has introduced the Baron efficiency comparitor. This device interrelates amplified water speed and apparent wind speed (via an anemometer) to give the skipper a true picture of the trim efficiency of his sails.

THEN THERE is the wind-powered trickle charger from Allan Marine. Installed on the deck or wherever it can catch the breeze, the charger will maintain a battery's charge as long as there is a five-knot wind or more to spin the propeller. The charger is designed for 12-volt batteries.

Another labor saver is the Superwinch, electric boat trailer winch with remote control, stop/lock gearing, instant off switch, and 20 feet of steel ca-

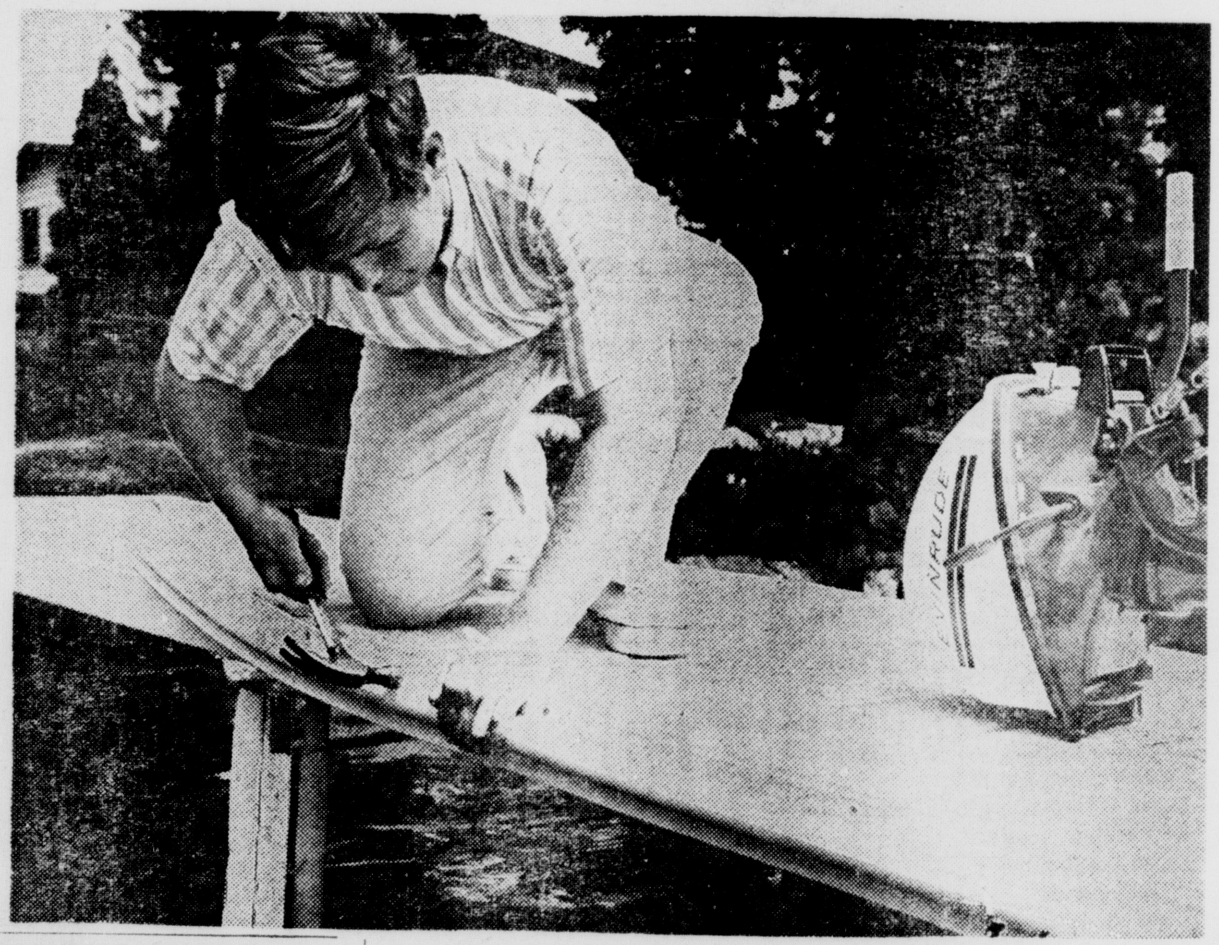
A STRONG FLUORESCENT polyethylene ski rope is a big boon to water sportsmen. The Sun-Glo, manufactured by Berkley, is virtually impossible to lose in the water. Boat operators can see it easily, reducing the danger of cross-overs and tangles.



LOW-COST PROTECTION for boat finishes that suffer so frequently from scuffing and marring when banged against dock edges is obtainable through Salisbury Dock-Gard edging, made of tough, heavy-duty white rubber with DuPont Nordel by Salisbury Rubber Products. It comes in two designs, standard and a special product that fits over edges.

ble. It is marketed by the company of the same name.

With anti-pollution the topic of the day, Raritan Engineering is manufacturing an electrochemical chlorinator for all force-flush marine toilets that reportedly destroys 99.96 per cent of all bacteria and pulverizes all waste.

TO RID CABINS of stale air, Beckson Manufacturing offers a new cabin ventilator, the Vent-O-Mate, that sucks out as much as 350 cubic feet per hour, in only a two-knot breeze without creating any draft in the cabin.

An anti-glare shield on the Ray-Line searchlights from Portable Light Co. is said to eliminate reflective deck glare by cutting beam spillage and concentrating the light rays directly ahead.

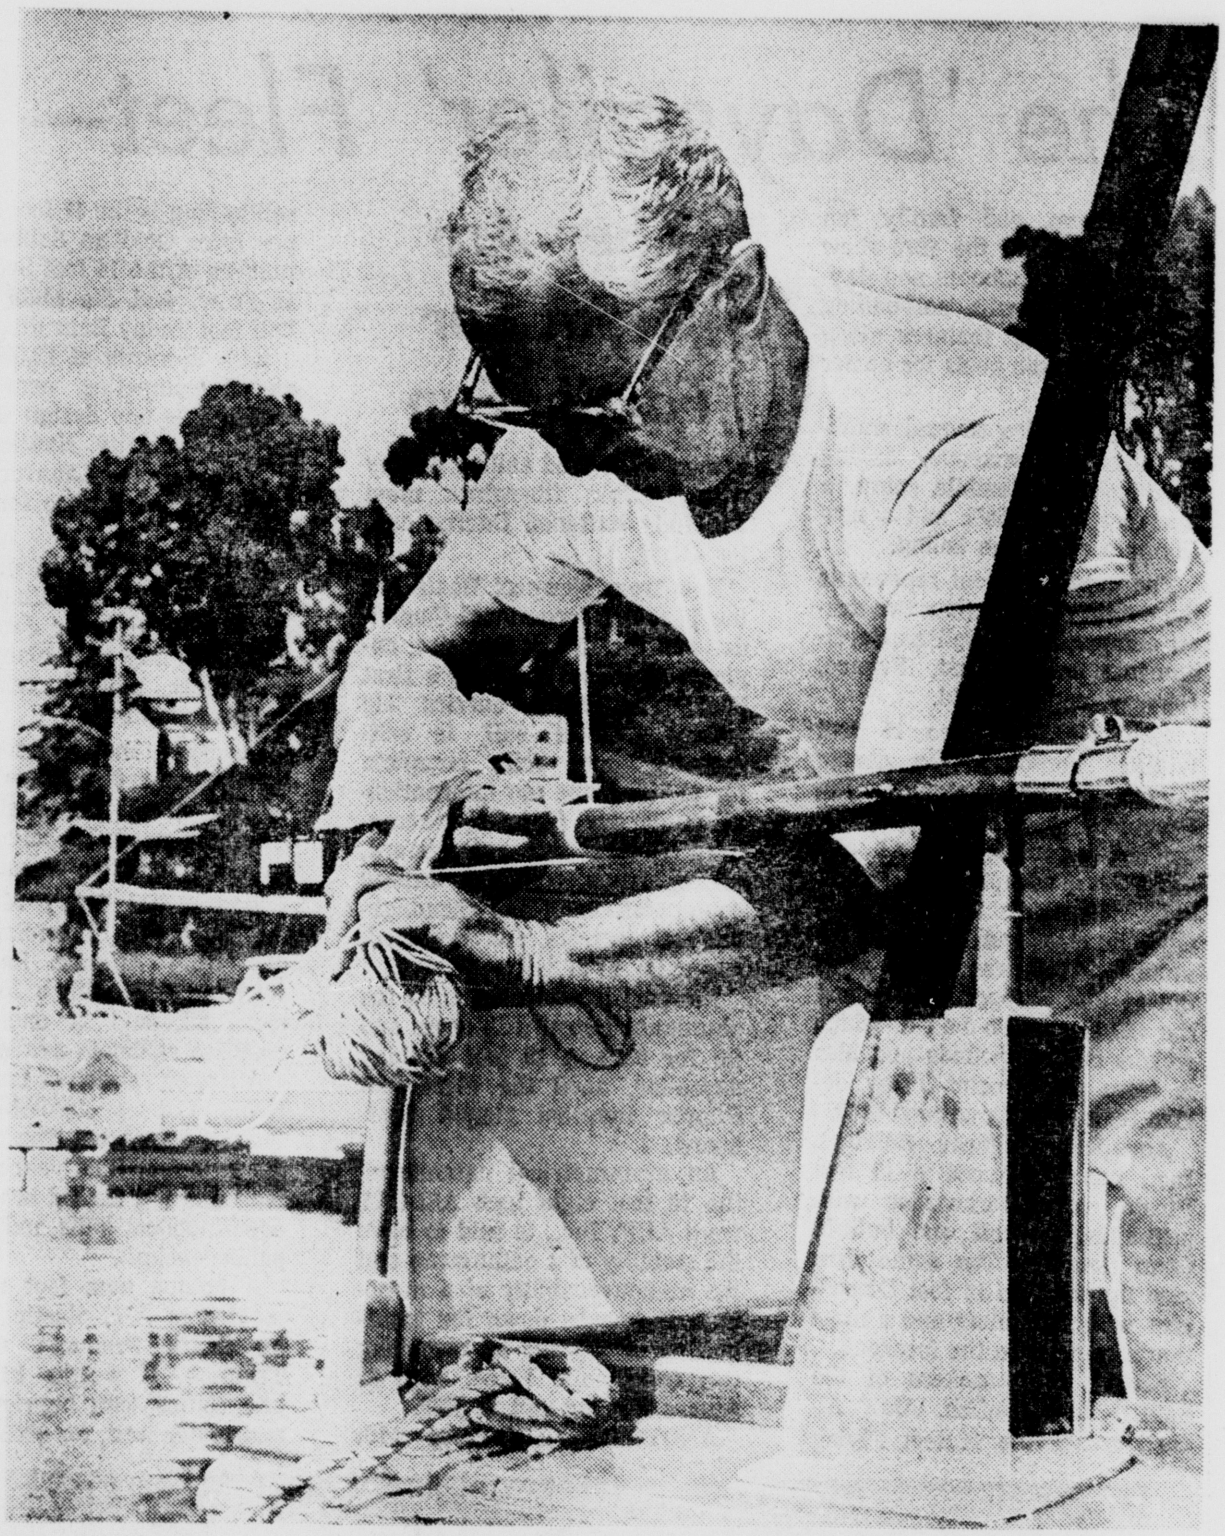
Marine coatings are also being improved for greater durability and protection as well as enhanced eye appeal. Baltimore Copper Paint Co. has a new Vinyltex "Tie-Coat" to assure better adhesion between the barrier coat and antifouling paint on aluminum and steel hulls.

BORDEN Chemical Co. is making its debut in the marine field with the Sparvar line of easy-to-apply aerosol paints, while Pettit Paint Co. is offering its new Trinidad 75, priced at over $60 a gallon, said to maintain a toxic efficiency for as long as 22 months in tropical waters. It contains up to 75 per cent cuprous oxide.

Woolsey has a new high gloss topside paint said to retain its color and finish for up to three times longer than more conventional topside paints. The secret is an exclusive silicone copolymer formula that gives a mirror-smooth finish.

Practical boating fashions has not been immune to change.

Gentex has come up with a sailing vest that allows complete freedom of movement and fits persons weighing 90 pounds or more. The firm states it is the only such vest to be granted the seal of the North American Yacht Racing Union, and designed to qualify for U.S. Coast Guard approval as a special purpose life saving device.



WITH ALL THE new products to ease the tasks of yachtsmen, the old skills of the seafarers still frequently prove profitable to the modern boater. Here, at the Lowrie Yacht Harbor, San Rafael, Harry Shiff, a Coast Guard Auxiliary flotilla commander, uses "turk's head knots" to attach some binding on his Terna. Knot-tying has long been an essential element of seamanship. (Independent-Journal photo)

HOME-MADE ANCHOR IS TOO RISKY

Too many pleasure boatmen ignore the importance of carrying a good anchor warns the Evenrude News Service.

Although an empty paint can filled with cement qualifies as an "anchor," these home-made specials do not have that extra margin of safety for the unusual situations.

If all anchors "look alike" to you, it's time to consult a qualified marine dealer. He'll be able to tell you which type is needed in the areas you plan to do your boating.

Anchors aren't all alike. Some are made for mud bottoms while others are more suited to rocky or sand bottoms.

Adequate anchor line is an other important phase of safety. The magic number is six. The line should be six times the depth of the water you're anchoring in. For example, if you're anchoring in 10 feet of water, the line should be 60 feet long.

The longer the line, the greater the holding power.

We built the Mainsail with sea-dogs in mind. With zigzag cut soles for sure gripping on slick decks, quick-drying, sturdy canvas uppers. But these Keds were just too handsome, too comfortable. Landlubbers wanted them, too. They find the non-skid soles are just as good for slippery places on land. So many Mainsails are stranded on land. Keep an eye on yours. The 'Daysailer' Fleet—

They Are Great For Family Fun

Excitement and family fun are promised by the 1970 show of one-design sailboats and daysailers, many with self-bailing and self-righting features along with retractable keels for easier portability.

There are also several smaller sized catamarans, sailing dinghies with flexibile spars, a nine-foot trimaran¼ and a new Olympic class, the Soling.

The daysailer fleet represents the output of more than two dozen companies as well as developments in England, France, Norway, and Scotland.

THE NEW Gemico 17 foot Wildfire combines the design talents of two notables, Ian Proctor and George O'Day. It has a retractable keel and self-bailing cockpit and lists at $1,975. Gemico's Soling 27 foot Olympic class keel boat sells for around $4,650 less sails, while the 14 foot Skipper dinghy and the CD-11 sailboard, which weighs only 50 pounds and also is from the Proctor-O'Day design team, sell for around $300.

Annapolis Sailboat Builders, Inc., has introduced a 15 foot Pirate, a centerboarder with selfbailing cockpit and built-in foam flotation. The same firm also markets an 18 foot Discoverer with selfbailing and a mast that's stepped on the foredeck.

FROM THE makers of the Sailfish and Sunfish, AMF Alcort, comes the 14 foot Flying Fish, a catrigged sailing dinghy with flexible fiberglass mast and fully battened Dacron sail, for $1,100.

New from Newport Boats are the 16 foot International Contender and the 15 foot Surprise, engineered to be a family's first boat. The latter carries 110 square feet of sail, is self-rescuing, and sells complete for $1,235, while the International Contender features streamlined rudder and centerboard, hiking straps, complete trapeze equipment, vang and Cunningham sail controls, and is priced, less sails, at $1,395.

Newport is also marketing the aluminum Petrel with main and jib for $899, a 19 foot Holiday daysailer, anod the eight foot Flipper marconi rigged catboard.

An asymmetrical catamaran, the 13 foot eight inch ASI-CAT from ADF, Inc., is said to have the stability of a catamaran and the maneuverability of a monohull. It knocks down for transporting or storage by removing two wing nuts. Price, with 85 square foot lug sail, is $650.

ANOTHER NEW sloop with self-bailing is the 17 foot Sandpiper from Goldfish Sailboat Co., makers of the 14 foot Sea Hawk II Scow, and the eight and a half foot Teddy Bear dinghy.

With upwards of 12,000 "420" sloops competing around the world, this one design is growing in popularity. Nautica Corp. markets the Lanaverve-built version from France for $1,200, less sails.

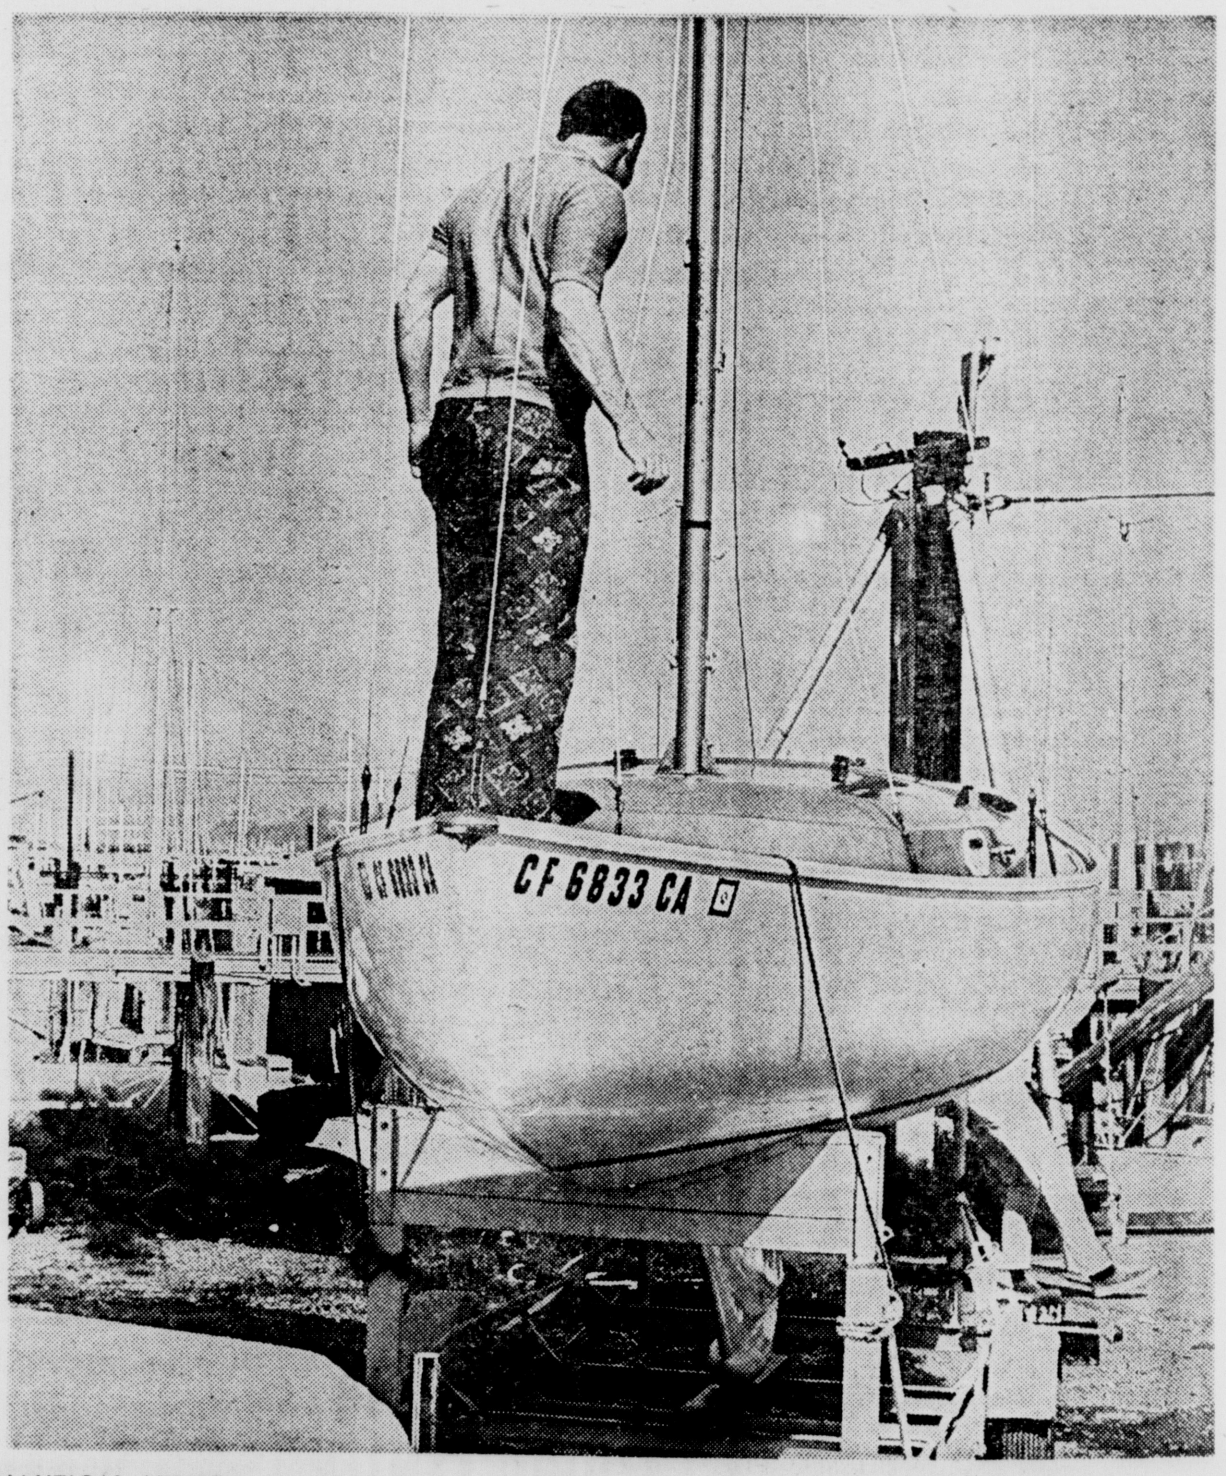
O'Day Co. has two new daysailers, the 21 foot Yingling by Norwegian designer Jan Linge, and the O'Day 15, a planing centerboarder that is self-bailing and self-righting.

Douglass and McLeod, Inc., has introduced its new C-Lark 14 foot sloop. It is designed to meet the needs of colleges and sailing instruction classes.

WEIGHING ONLY 65 pounds the seven foot Econo-Sailer dinghy from Atlantic Laminates selsl for $259, with a 35 square foot sail, and is one of the smallest sailboats available.

A longer version of last year's Hobie Cat is available from Coast Catamaran. The new model is 16 feet (last year's was 14 feet) and like its kid brother has asymmetrical hulls and a trampoline cockpit.

A unique nine foot trimaran molded of ABS plastic is made by Snark Products. Call the Triumph, it weighs 85 pounds and comes with lug-rigged sail and motor well, for $349.



NAUTICAL ATTIRE is as colorful today as the garb that is worn on shore. Here Bob Klawuhn brightens the waterfront at Sausalito Yacht Harbor with his bright wear as he prepares his boat for its first launching of the new season. (Independent-Journal photo)

One In Nine Families Own Craft

By HARRY CRAFT

A pleasure boat in the family is usually a healthy sign of "the good life."

But boats, except for the higher-priced luxury cruisers and sailers, can no longer be taken necessarily as status symbols. There are just too many of them around.

It is difficult to be smug or snobbish about owning a boat these days when one family in every 12 in California is registered as having something that floats on the water. In Marin County, which has water on three sides, the incidence of boat ownership is even higher — about one in nine families.

TRUE, MANY of these are the garden variety that can be hitched to the back of any family car and towed to bay, lakes and rivers. But they have served to make the attitude on boating and boat ownership "sophisticated." And turnover ratios are high in Marin, with many "graduates" moving into ownership of de luxe models each year.

As a sport, boating ranks among the foremost recreational pursuits. During the model year ended Aug. 31, 1969, Americans bought more than 500,000 outboard motors, 550,000 boats of all types and 250,000 boat trailers. The total value of these three products alone came to 1.2 billion dollars — and that was 14 per cent over the year before. The value of the countless other products and services related to boating cannot even be calculated with any accuracy, since so many different categories are involved.

A guess on the part of this writer as to what the pleasure boating industry means to Marin retail sales would be something like five million dollars annually. But its impact on the county's total business is much higher than that when boat rentals, storage, fuel, dock rentals, construction and taxes are considered.

THE LIST OF Marin commercial establishments getting most or a substantial part of their revenues from this industry has always been an impressive one. Our directory of services this year is not materially different from those in previous boating editions, but there have been a number of new additions (particularly among new boat dealers) since last year, a few changes in name and some firms have dropped out of business.

The Right Shoes

Leather-soled shoes slip very easily on boat decks, wet rocks and the pine needles and leaves on forest floors. Boating experts suggest outfitting everyone on your camping cruise with a good pair of boat shoes.

IT WAS NOT yet officially the 1970 boating season, which begins May 3. And the skies were a bit gray and the bay breezes nippy. Yet the waters of San Francisco Bay were already dotted with the sails of boaters unable to await the formal opening gun. The scene is the entrance to Sausalito's harbor, with Tiburon in the background. (Independent-Journal photo by Alfred M. Arn)

Want To Go Into Marina Business?

A supplement to "Marinas — Recommendations for Design, Construction & Maintenance," the keystone in the marina publications series available from the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, will be ready for distribution in May.

The most recent updating of this comprehensive text on planning and building marinas was made in 1961. The first edition of the book appeared in 1939, with a supplement appearing in 1947. The book was completely rewritten in 1961.

Author of the book Charles A. Chaney has designed hundreds of marinas across the country and has written several other books on the subject of marina design.

The present supplement will update the technical sections of the book to cover new materials and new regulations governing marina construction and equipment.

Other books in the marina series are as follows: "Accounting Manual for Marinas and Boatyards" — a guide to accounting systems for marinas.

"Boat Handling Equipment in the Modern Marina" — an evaluation of boat handling techniques and equipment.

"The Modern Marina" — a guide to those areas that affect marina development, such as location, traffic, financing, local politics, profit ratios, gross revenues, and others.

"Marina Operations and Service" — a look at the small craft facility through the eyes of the boatman.

"Study of Marina Revenues & Costs, Profit Ratios, Slip Rental Rates, And Some Boat Owners Impressions of Marina Services."

"Marina Architects, Consultants, Designers, Engineers" — a listing of professional services.

The entire set of publications is available for $22 from the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, 537 Steamboat Road, Greenwich, Conn., 06830.

Safety Booklet Covers Basics

"A Safety Primer for Pleasure Boat Operators" available from the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers is a guide to safe equipping and operation of small craft.

It covers most of the basics of small boat handling and is suited for use in instruction programs.

NAEBM is located at 537 Steamboat Road, Greenwich, Conn., 06830.

Boats Are Safer Than Cars, Planes

People who like their sport motorized are safer in a boat, according to an analysis of accident statistics conducted for the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers.

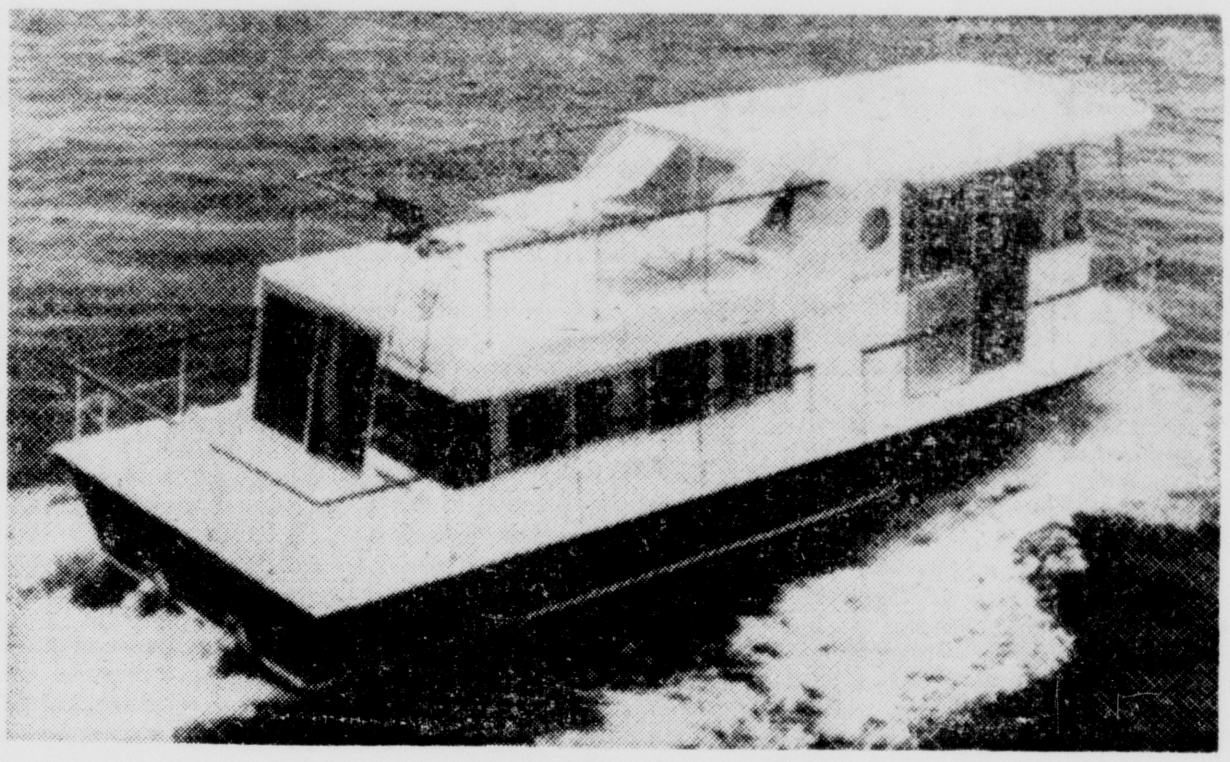
During the year 1968 the U.S. Coast Guard reported that there were 1,342 fatalities in boating related accidents. With 8,400,000 boats, this amounts to about 16 fatalities for every 100,000 boats in use or 28 per 100,000 registered motorboats.

On the same basis, the National Safety Council reported 1,228 deaths in general aviation (excluding commercial airlines) where there are 120,000 registered aircraft. The rate per 100,000 aircraft is 1,023.

Then there is the passenger car statistic where the number of licensed vehicles in 1968 totalled 82,821,000 and the number of traffic deaths reported by the National Safety Council reached 36,500. Here the rate per 100,000 vehicles is 44.1 or almost three times the rate for boating.

Even though recreational boating has traditionally a low accident and fatality rate compared to other motorized activity, the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers has been engaged in a strong boating safety program for years.

Recently, the NAEBM adopted a four-point program for improving boating safety: expanded development of safety standards for boats and boating equipment; expanded emphasis on education of boatmen at all levels, from new boatmen buying their first boat to experienced skippers; increased effort to seek compliance and recognition of existing safety standards; and continued pressure for using more funds from the Federal Land and Water Conservation Fund for boating enforcement at the local level.



THE 34-FOOT Aqua-Home from Chris-Craft sleeps six within her 12 foot 10 inch beam. The fiberglass hull is powered by a 200 horsepower V8 with Volvo stern drive, typical of the new houseboat mobility and comfort.

Houseboats Retain Their Popularity With Americans

As houseboat popularity continues to rise with no visible crest in sight, so do innovations in houseboat design.

With designers striving for more speed and stability, it is increasingly difficult to distinguish the performance houseboat hull from the high speed cruiser hull. The shapes, in short, have been happily married.

The new 38 foot Cargile Cutter is a case in point. Viewed from the bow it is a cruiser — with a narrow, deep-V entry. From any other angle it is clearly all houseboat. The result?

A blending of the smooth-riding habits of the deep-V forefoot with all the obvious comforts of a houseboat hull. The design is a distinct departure from the modified-V and bluff bows with which designers began experimenting a few years ago.

A SECOND example is Glaspar's new mini-houseboat, the 21 foot Cruiser Home, whose very name announces the wedding of high speed hull and houseboat comfort. In this case, a tri-hull shape has been used.

Elsewhere among the 1970 houseboat fleet, hulls of modified-V, cathedral, and variations of the tunnel design are present, all bidding for speed, stability, and comfort underway.

Another trend in the making appears to be the trailerable houseboat, whose principal feature is a narrower beam, usually about eight feet, which eliminates wide-load highway hazards. Three new models of this type are prominent — the Golden Viking, the Seacamper and a Viking Boat Co. entry, all 24 feet long.

OFTEN, THESE mini-houseboats double as camp trailers when on land.

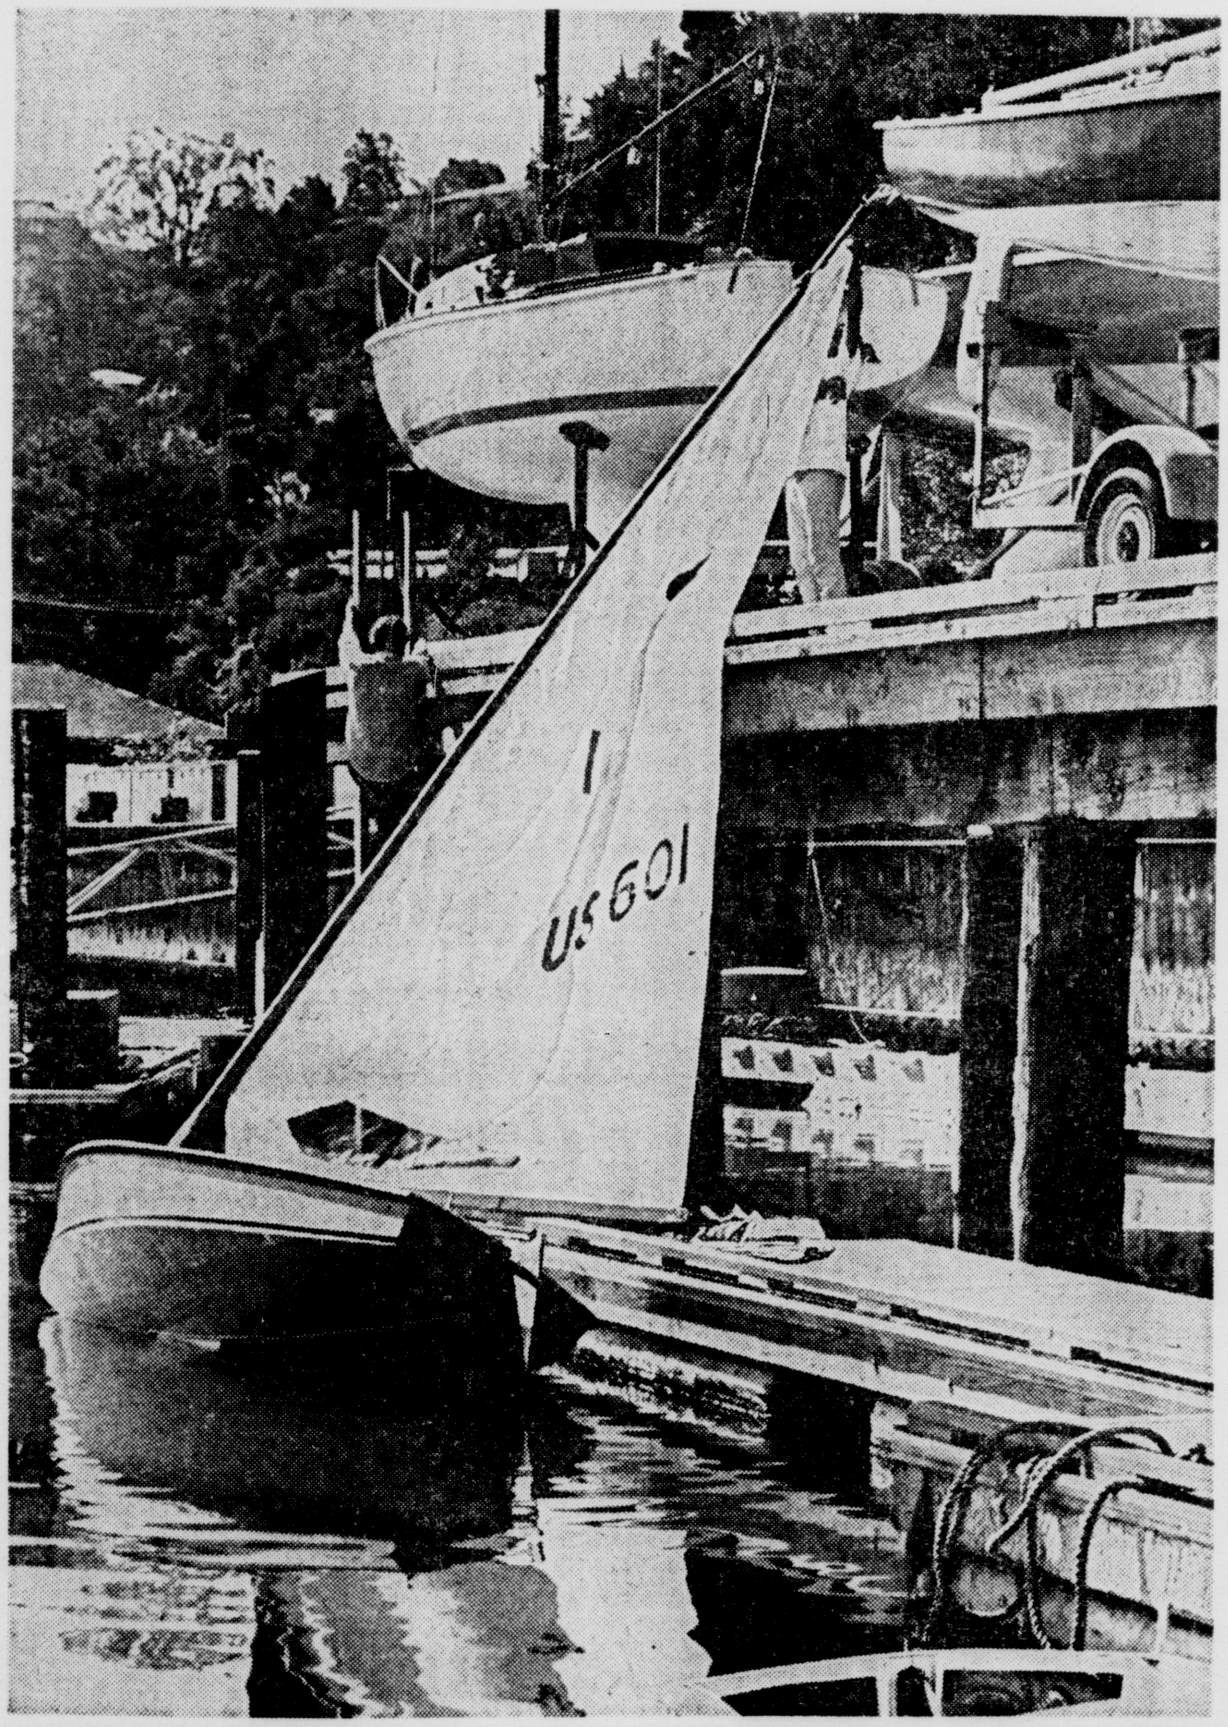
Larger houseboats are as present as ever. Two new models in the 1970 fleet are Cargile's 47 foot Leisureliner and Thunderbird Products' Drift-R-Cruz at 46 feet eight inches.

These luxury craft can be ordered with appointments and furnishings that include wet bars, stereo, air conditioning, and lavish carpeting.

The 1970 fleet is equipped with power to spare, too. Tollycraft's Royal 40 will take up to 300 horsepower in twin stern drive installation. Twin installations starting at 200 "horses" are fairly standard for houseboats in the 34 foot range—craft from Chris Craft, Trojan, and Nauta-Line (at 43 feet) are exemplary.

THESE FLOATING homes come in a wide range of prices, from a low of around $6,000 to over $50,000 depending on options—making a houseboat still an excellent investment for anyone in the market for a vacation home but unable to go for the luxury line in conventional cruisers, and resistant to owning an immovable cottage in the hills or on the shore.

Houseboating holds all the promise of a complete vacation home as well as mobility that is limited only by the depth of the water and the size of the fuel tank.



THIS JUST HAS to be the easy way to rig your sails. Busy at San Francisco Yacht Club Harbor in Tiburon are Roland Herman, on the ladder, and Charlie Newman, up top, readying craft for the new boating season. (Independent-Journal photo)

Two Major Boating Bills From 1969—

By RICHARD D. SNYDER

Secretary, National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers.

Out of the more than 100 major bills related to consumer protection introduced into the 91st session of the U. S. Congress during 1969, two major boating bills emerged, the Recreational Boating Safety Act, and the omnibus water pollution control bill.

The Boating Safety Act reached the floor of Congress late in the year, too late for action during 1969. Originally introduced in January 1969 as HR 1125, the bill placed responsibility for boating accidents on boats and associated equipment. It also gave the secretary of transportation wide power to issue regulations establishing safety standards and to require all users of such equipment to display evidence of compliance with the regulations issued under the act. Stiff penalties were proposed.

IN THE FACE of overwhelming negative reaction to the bill in testimony and statements before the Congressional committees, the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries instructed the U. S. Coast Guard to submit recommendations for a re-draft of the bill. This was accomplished in cooperation with representatives of industry, state administrators, and the boating public. The resulting bill proved more acceptable to the boating fraternity.

In its re-drafted form, the Recreational Boating Safety Act provided necessary safeguards to offset complete federal control, and protected the basic framework of the Motor Boat Act of 1940 and the Federal Boat Act of 1958, insuring continued recognition of joint jurisdictions and responsibilities of state and federal governments.

The new bill provided that changes in or additions to present laws must be made on the basis of demonstrated need. Safety standards for boats and equipment shall be issued only after the secretary considers the validity of existing boat safety standards, and only after he consults with the Boating Safety Advisory Council established in the bill.

OTHER KEY provisions of the proposal were the numbering of all motor boats regardless of horsepower; provisions to encourage greater state participation in boating safety efforts, including the allocation of federal funds to states for this purpose; and protection of boat owners from reckless and negligent operators.

This new safety bill probably will be a topic of discussion in boating circles for a number of years to come.

In the interim, the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, one of the two major trade associations in pleasure boating, adopted a comprehensive program to intensify industry's campaign for safe boating. The program provides for a re-examination of all published boating safety standards to determine their validity; establishment of a priority list of product performance standards and promulgation of any additional standards through the quasi-public standards-making body, the American Boat and Yacht Council; urging all manufactuerers to use the standards developed by ABYC; initiation of wide-spread use of product testing and certification by qualified private agencies; expansion of boating safety information programs; and close cooperation with the state boating law administrators to help them secure support to provide effective state boating safety programs.

Safety Law, Pollution Control Are The Major New Measures

IN THE WAKE of rising concern over the fouling of our waterways, Congress undertook during 1969 to pass a pollution control law. The proposals took two forms, a Senate and House version, both basically the same in their major provisons but differing in the matter of state control of pollution from boats on navigable waters.

The Senate version allowed states to establish anti-pollution requirements on all waters within their boundaries, while the House version provided for federal preemption of state requirements on navigable waters within the states.

The pleasure boating industry pressed for adoption of the pre-emptive clause as it appeared in the House bill. The action sought to prevent the establishment of a myriad of individually conflicting state anti-pollution laws that would cause confusion for the inter-state boatmen.

WITH THE passage of the anti-pollution bill, industry and the boating public must turn their attention to ways and means whereby the experience and needs of all in boating can be made available to those public officers who will be charged with administering this law.

To meet this goal, the NAEBM and the Boating Industry Association are sponsoring a symposium on water pollution from boats. Representatives from government, industry and the boating public will participate. Industry's position has been that proper equipment, designed to very specific performance standards is available, and perhaps, with modifications and industry's initiative, the problem of waste disposal from boats could be entirely eliminated.

Industry also will review the adequacy of existing standards of performance and safety for waste treatment and holding devices to determine how these standards can be improved and whether new ones are needed.

AT THE STATE level, there was continued movement toward earmarking more funds for recreational boating during 1969. Arizona, Florida, Indiana, Texas and Utah passed bills allocating revenue from boat registration to boating facilities development and boating law enforcement.

Equipment requirements were extended in a number of states to cover more boats. In many cases, the requirements match those of the Federal Boating Act. In two states, California and Connecticut, the boat rental operator or liveryman is now responsible for insuring compliance with the states' equipment requirements.

Fuel taxes jumped in 11 states last year, and three states moved to earmark more fuel tax revenues toward development of boating facilities and boat law enforcement. Nevada increased its allocation by $100,000 with the added revenue going to the Division of State Parks for facilities improvement. Pennsylvania set up procedures for the allocation of tax receipts to the State Fish Commission for use in facilities development and law enforcement. In Utah, motor boat fuel tax receipts are restricted for use in boating development, administration and enforcement.

OTHER STATE regulations of note include Connecticut's action to require youngsters under 16 years old to pass a State Boating Safety Course before operating boats over five horsepower on their own. Additional enforcement powers were granted to harbormasters in Maine, state conservation officers in Minnesota, and marine patrolmen in New Jersey.

Both the recent federal and state actions in boating regulation reflect the present trend to increase the safety and enjoyment of boating. As boating grows—its present growth rate is around 5 per cent annually — more and more legislation undoubtedly will be introduced at all levels of government. The boating fraternity, including government, industry, and the public, will have to protect its interests the same way every other segment of our nation watches its own interests.

However, boating has been able to not only maintain but to increase the overall mood of cooperation between government, industry and public.

WITH MORE than 85 Columbia 28s on San Francisco Bay, it is becoming an increasingly familiar sight. The complete selection of Columbia yachts can be seen at Sailboats Inc. at the north end of Bridgeway in Sausalito.

SAMUEL BARBER: Two Scenes from "Antony and Cleopatra"; "Knoxville: Summer of 1915" — Leontyne Price/New Philharmonic Orchestra/Thomas Schippers, conductor — RCA LSC-3062:

Faithful readers of this column know by now that my taste runs a bit tepid on vocal music. But once in a while something really hits me, and the latest by La Price is one of these.

Although the complete Barber opera "Antony and Cleopatra" was a dreadful flop, these two excerpts featuring the soaring voice of Miss Price are jewels. The piece de resistance, however, is the lyrical and poetic picture of approaching dusk in the old home town, using words of James Agee.

SCHARWENKA: "Concerto No. 1 in B Flat Minor"—Earl Wild, piano/Boston Symphony Orchestra/Eric Leinsdorf; BALAKIREFF: "Fantasy for Piano on A Life for the Tsar"; MEDTNER: "Improvisation, Opus 31, No. 1: D'ALBERT: "Scherzo"—Earl Wild, piano solo—RCA LSC-3080:

The rebirth of interest in the Romantic Era, especially as it was expressed in piano solos and concerti, is rapidly gaining momentum. Here is an earful of pianistic virtuosity, and in the bargain a mouthful, too—Xaver Scharwenka, to be exact.

This Polish composer created four piano concerti with wild piano parts and large orchestral forces. No. 1 has lush melodies and lots of energy and the reproduction is terrific. The solo encores sound more dated somehow, although their complexity is great.

"LARRY ADLER PLAYS WORKS FOR HARMONICA AND ORCHESTRA"—MILHAUD: "Suite"; ARNOLD: "Concerto"; BENJAMIN: "Concerto"; VAUGHAN WILLIAMS: "Romance"—with The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra-/Morton Gould—RCA LSC-3078:

Larry Adler probably has been the major influence in the elevation of the harmonica during the last 30 years or so from back street via music hall to symphony hall. These four compositions were all created especially for his talents. They are all delightful and unique—the most appealing to me being the earliest of the works, the 1943 Milhaud composition.

If you haven't heard classical harmonica before, this fine LP will be a very pleasant surprise.

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS: "Sinfonia Antartica (No. 7)"—Heather Harper, soprano/Ambrosian Singers/Sir Ralph Richardson, narrator/London Symphony Orchestra/Andre Previn —RCA LSC-3066:

Previn continues to make high scores with his series of unhackneyed orchestral performances.

This disc launches Previn's new series which will encompass all the symphonies by the British impressionistic composer. Written in 1951-52, the music is based on a film soundtrack Vaughan Williams created for "Scott of the Antarctic." It has plenty of programmatic bits, what with wind machines and wordless women's chorus to evoke the frozen wastes, but nevertheless communicates its central theme of heroic man striving against a hostile environment.

Sound is superb throughout.

KHACHATURIAN: "Symphony No. 3"; RIMSKY-KORSAKOFF: "Russian Easter Overture"—Leopold Stokowski conducting the Chicago Symphony—RCA LSC-3067:

First recording outside the Soviet Union of this massive (in sound, not length) one-movement symphony which includes pipe organ and 15 trumpets. It turns out to be a robust and exciting work, and naturally old Stoky draws every bit of drama out of the printed score. The timely inclusion of the Russian Easter Overture serves to second the motion that the Chicago Symphony still is hard to match for sheer gusto and excitement in this type of music.

PROKOFIEFF: "Symphony No. 2;" "Lieutenant Kije Suite"—Boston Symphony Orchestra/Erich Leinsdorf—RCA LSC-3061:

More Russian music, and one of the rarely-heard symphonies of Prokofieff. Written in Paris in the 1920s it is in the spirit of that milieu with a conscious effort to be different.

"A symphony of iron and steel" is what the composer intended, and that is what he got. But the beautiful Prokofieff lyric melodies are not completely forgotten.

LEONTYNE PRICE
Two jewels by a soaring voice

The umpteenth recording of "Lt. Kije" is more welcome than most of the others, for it includes vocal versions of two sections, scored for baritone (David Clatworthy) and orchestra. The "Romance" is quite lovely.

RAVEL: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; IBERT: "Capriccio"; "Suite Symphonique"; FRANCAIX: "Serenade"—The Chamber Symphony of Philadelphia/Anshel Brusilov — RCA LSC-3089:

This Frenchy grab-bag, aside from "Le Tombeau," will be unfamiliar to most listeners. Some of the works were recorded many years ago before stereo and have been unavailable.

The Ibert suite is a witty musical travelogue of Paris and its surroundings that should captivate anyone already into the whole Satie mystique. The wit of all this music is matched by an underlying irony that is so, so Parisian.

I understand the Chamber Symphony of Philadelphia is no more, and more's the pity since they have produced some fine albums in a rather neglected area of the repertoire.

TORU TAKEMITSU: "Asterism for Piano and Orchestra" (Yuji Takahashi, piano); "Requiem for Strings"; "Green"; The Dorian Horizon for 17 Strings—Toronto Symphony-/Seiji Ozawa—RCA LSC-3099:

Takemitsu is now considered the leading Japanese composer. His "November Steps" was a big hit in San Francisco not long ago, and he did the chilling musical scores for such Japanese films as "Woman of the Dunes" and "Face of Another."

These four recorded works show various aspects of his development. "Requiem" is almost conservative. The later works do very complex chromatic things with the string section of the orchestra, resulting in errie effects somewhat akin to but not copied from Penderecki.

"A NEW SOUND FROM THE JAPANESE BACH SCENE"—Featuring two kotos, shakuhachi, guitar, bass and drums—Victrola VICS-1458:

Well, Bach has been tried on everything from soup to nuts, so why not on traditional Japanese folk instruments? Why not, indeed? It works!

The arrangements (by Norio Maeda) are models of restraint and almost make old J. S. sound like he was Japanese to begin with. Selections include various well-known Bach themes such as the "Air for G String" and the "Little Fugue in G iMnor".

Talking about it makes it sound like the last word in gimmickry, but just listen and you'll be convinced!

Excellent stereo presence and balance too.

"AFRICAN RIPPLES"—Fats Waller—RCA Vintage LPV-562:

Yes, another Fats re-issue! RCA could put them out at the rate of one a month and I'd still snap them all up for wonderful, lampooning, happy-go-lucky jazzing-up of often corny and square popular tunes of the thirties.

There's never been anyone else in jazz like Waller. Whether he's tickling the ivories in a piano solo like the title tune, or throwing out an aside on a pop tune from a movie "I Love to Whistle"—"Wait a minute boys, I broke my whistle . . ' — Fats will make anyone get over their blues in a hurry.

Mendocino Remains An Unspoiled Oasis That Has Defied Modernity

Nothing changes much these days at Mendocino: the wind still picks at the shingles, the students bend over their potters' wheels, the painters' smocks and bib-overalls mingle at mail time in the Post Office.

Time was, a few years back, when doomsayers predicted success would ruin this Down East port, clinging for a century to its cliff above the Pacific.

THE PROPHETS are gone to greener pastures. City folks have added some paint and tiles to their $40,000 Grandma Moses hideaways, and there's a new place to eat. And a new saloon.

But Mendocino still centers on its general store, nobody has gambled on a neon drive-in, and the old churches and mansions still freeze, model-wise, for the casual dabbler in watercolors or acrylic.

Ten, or is it 12 years ago, a pride of threadbare artists from San Francisco transformed Mendocino from a rotting lumber port into the most talked-about art colony on the West Coast. Galleries sprang up like toadstools, scouts from the avant-garde tried to establish beachheads, and the native endured it in customary silence.

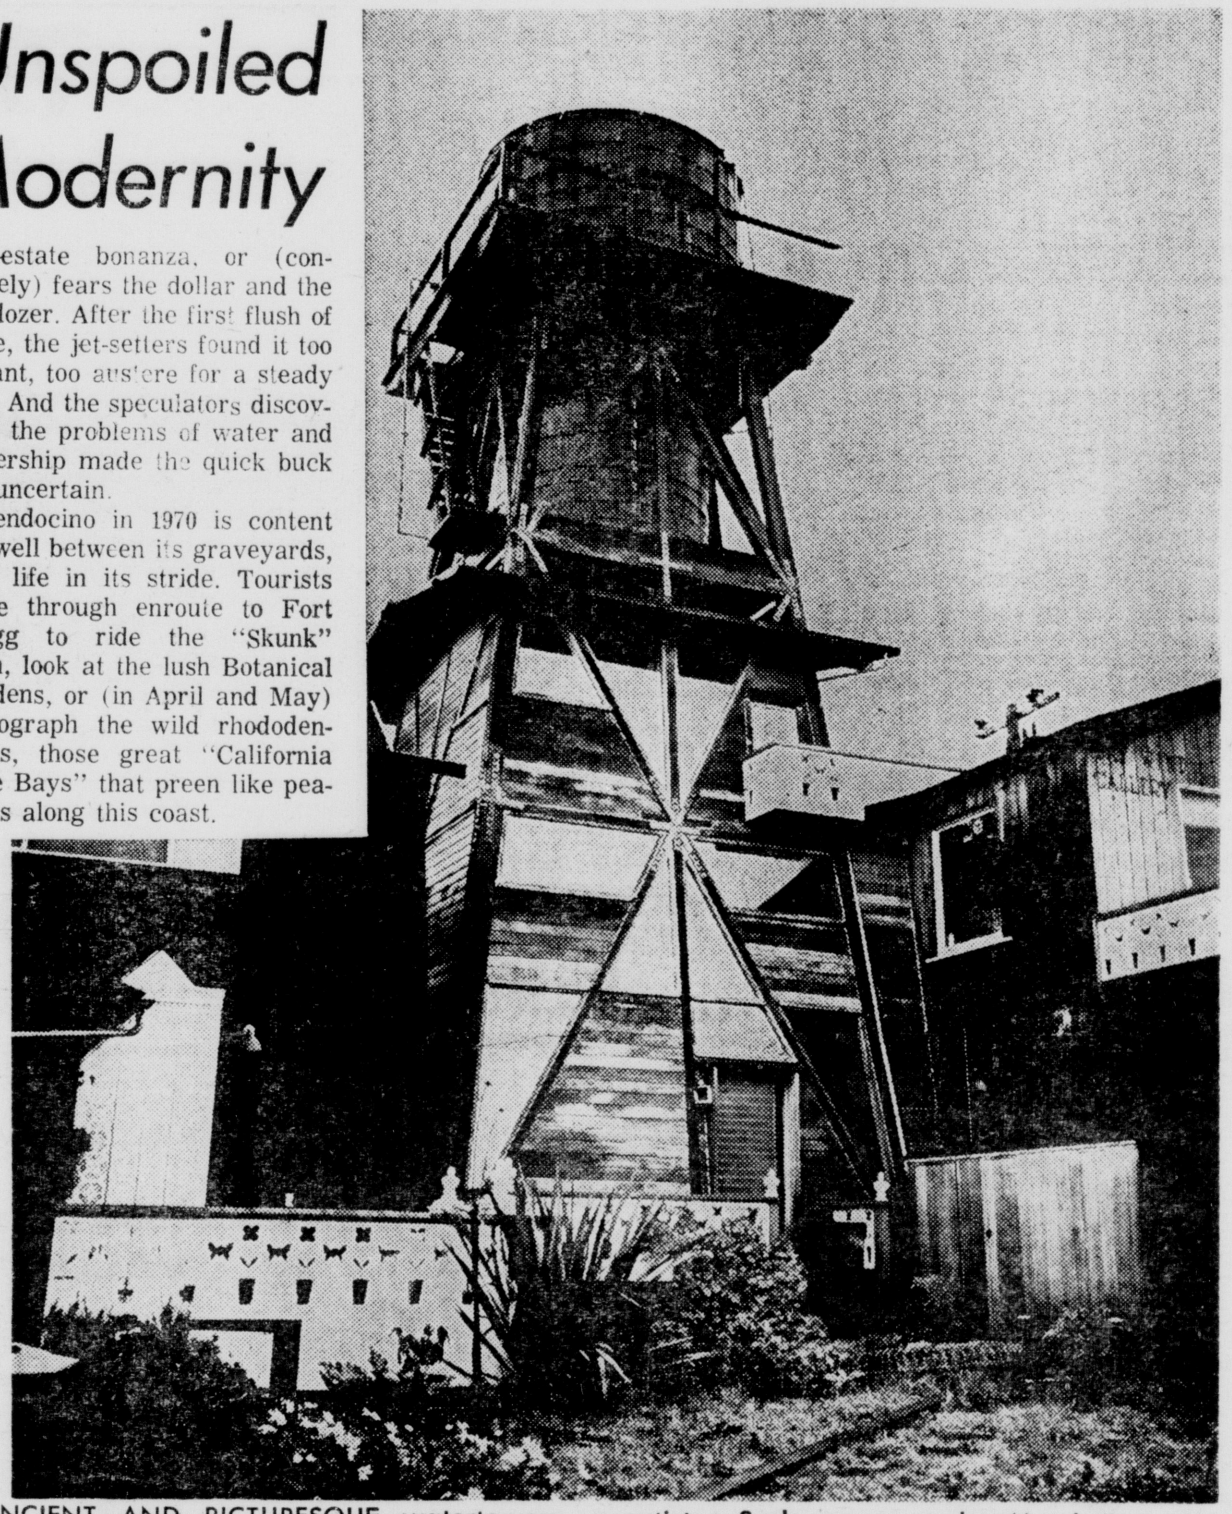
THE HIPPIES came and went. Mendocino is too hard-scrabble. Serious artists survive, and a center, or school, was financed and still flourishes. Local housewives and fisherfolk have learned to paint for fun and profit.

The serendipity-seekers discovered Mendocino a decade ago, and the hardy ones still come here to stay at the cozy inns, stroll on the cliffs, photograph the gulls and huddle round the fire.

Nowadays Mendocino is bypassed by a highway which deals tenderly with the old town. Wild roses and nasturtiums climb on the whitewashed barns. . .("We don't plant 'em, we fight 'em," says one localite when some visitor exclaims over the beauty of it all.)

BUT THE TOWN no longer dreams of an art boom, a real-estate bonanza, or (conversely) fears the dollar and the bulldozer. After the first flush of fame, the jet-setters found it too distant, too austere for a steady diet. And the speculators discovered the problems of water and ownership made the quick buck too uncertain.

Mendocino in 1970 is content to dwell between its graveyards, take life in its stride. Tourists come through enroute to Fort Bragg to ride the "Skunk" train, look at the lush Botanical Gardens, or (in April and May) photograph the wild rhododendrons, those great "California Rose Bays" that preen like peacocks along this coast.



ANCIENT AND PICTURESQUE watertowers that once stored that vital liquid for the Redwood Empire lumber port of Mendocino now serve as homes for newly-established artists. Such scenes make Mendocino, on State Highway 1, a prime tourist attraction for Californians and out-of-staters alike. (Photo courtesy of Redwood Empire Association)

When And Where You Will Need A Visa, And How You Can Get It

By MURRAY J. BROWN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Preparing for a trip abroad can involve more than just getting a passport and making sure of hotel accommodations and transportation.

It could also mean obtaining visas and travel or transit card.

Many countries in the Western Hemisphere and in west Europe no longer require visas for American tourists for visits up to three months. But others elsewhere around the world will not admit Americans without one.

THE VISAS, usually stamped in the passport, is official approval of the foreign government for entry and travel within the borders of the country. Some must be obtained in advance of departure while others are granted at border posts and other points of entry.

In the United States, visa applicants can be obtained from foreign embassies or consulates in Washington and other major cities where diplomatic missions are maintained. The completed application, passport and, if required, the fee and photographs, should be sent by registered mail. As a precaution against loss, include a self-addressed envelope and at least $1 for return by registered mail.

If more than one country is involved, you will have to repeat the process. Allow one week to 10 days in each case.

Entry requirements differ almost from country to country and can change overnight so check with your travel agency, airlines and steamship company.

BUT AT THIS writing, if your itinerary should include Upper Volta in Africa the visa will cost $12 and you will need two pictures. Mongolia in Asia charges $9.60 but you will have to go to London, Paris or Moscow to get the visa.

The Soviet Union imposes a $1 "processing" fee for a visa but the American visitor must have a prepaid itinerary arranged by an authorized travel agency through Intourist, the official Soviet tourist organization.

Communist Cuba, North Vietnam and North Korea are still off limits. The U.S. State Department will validate passports to Communist China for those with a "legitimate purpose" but the Peking regime has shown no signs of opening the Bamboo Curtain to American tourists.

NO VISAS are needed for Americans visiting Britain, France, Italy, West Germany among other countries this side of the Iron Curtain.

A visa is required for entry into Japan, but no fee is charged. Nationalist China also issues free visas to Americans visiting Taiwan but none are needed for Hong Kong, Singapore, Thailand or the Philippines.

No visa is necessary, either, for visits of up to seven days to South Vietnam. A transit visa, valid for 15 days, costs $2.75, however.

In Africa, a valid passport will get Americans into Morocco and Tunisia. But Ethiopia charges $3.20 for a visa and Kenya and Zambia $3.15 each each.

And for a stopoff in The

Some Countries Still Require A Visa Of The Tourists

Congo Republic (Kinshasa), an American will need a passport, $7 for a visa, three pictures, a police certificate, proof of financial responsibility and an onward transportation ticket.

FOR TRAVEL to Latin America and the Caribbean, U.S. citizens generally need a passport or other proof of nationality or a tourist or transit card. A few still insist on visas, but usually issue them without charge.

Tourist and transit cards can be obtained at consulates or other government agencies, airlines and steamship companies and sometimes at ports of entry. Some times a fee is charged, usually about $2, while others are free.

Argentina and Brazil ask neither a visa nor tourist card from American tourists, only a valid passport. A passport and tourist card, issued free, is needed for admission into Chile.

Other countries issuing free tourist cards include Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela. Without the tourist card, an American visitor to Venezuela could have to pay up to $18.45 in departure fees.

Three New Books On Exotic Cuisines

MIDDLE EASTERN COOKING by Harry G. Nickles; Time-Life, 206 pages, $7.95. THE COOKING OF JAPAN by Rafael Steinberg; Time-Life, 208 pages, $7.95. THE COOKING OF INDIA by Santa Rama Rau; Time-Life, 208 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Three more books in Time-Life's prestigious Foods of the World Series bring the total of volumes to 14 and cover some the world's most exotic culinary cultures.

Like their predecessors, these are books that are not only superb collections of ethnic recipes, but also encyclopedic studies of regional cuisines, enlivened by lavish and color-filled illustrations.

Most unusual of the three newcomers to the series is "Middle Eastern Cooking" by retired Holiday editor Harry G. Nickles, covering the foods and food traditions of nine lands—Greece (from whence came the author's ancestors), Turkey, Lebanon, Jordan, Israel, Syria, Iraq, Iran and Egypt.

Naturally, there is a rich variety of food tastes and techniques amony so many disperate peoples. Israel, alone, is a joining of immigrants from scores of lands, all of whom have contributed to that country's cuisine.

But Nichols also points out that there are also some shared qualities—the preference for lamb, mutton, kid "and even camel" over beef and pork; the widespread use of eggplant; the liking for coffee, sweets and spices; the ever-present dolma with its grape leaf wrappings; the yoghurt, rice, garlic, green peppers, and, yes, shish kabob.

Nichols has selected dishes that are different enough to revitalize jaded western tastebuds, and yet not so radically different as to be rejected automatically by westerners.

In "The Cooking of Japan," journalist Rafael Steinberg, long stationed in the Orient, stresses the Japanese devotion to cooking as "a total sensuous experience" with much ritual and great care in the preparation, the serving and the consuming.

The highly nutritious fish and soybean are the key ingredients. Tempura (deep frying) and sukiyaki (simmering) the vital techniques.

Steinberg admits that many westerners pull away from Japanese cooking and foods. "I have decided," he writes, "that this hesitancy is largely a matter of nomenclature. . .for the unfamiliar language can create difficulties with the names both of the ingredients and of the techniques." He then proceeds to dissipate those clouds in support of his claim that actually Japanese cuisine "should be every housewife's delight, for most of its dishes, far from being difficult, actually allow great freedom and rich opportunities for creativity in cooking."

In India, says author Sanka Rama Rau, it is the use of spices that plays the pivotal role in the creation of a distinctive national cuisine. She explores it fully and interestingly in her "The Cooking of India."

The currys, chutneys, rice dishes and all the other staples of the India diet are there in a variety that few westerners have encountered previously.

One of the more remarkable aspects of India's cooking is the flavorful use it makes of vegetables, thanks to Hindu religious requirements. And in India, Madame Rau points out, the effort is not to make a vegetarian meal taste like a pallid imitation of a non-vegetarian repast, but rather "quite manifestly and triumphantly vegetarian."

All these books featured the patented Time-Life picture essay idea, demonstrating beautifully in color the various traditions such as a geisha party in a great Japanese restaurant or an Easter week celebration in Greece or a formal dinner in Bedouin tent with a desert sheik.

All also include the separate, smaller, spiral-bound booklet in which the recipes in the larger book have been reprinted with additions, making for easy kitchen use.

Doubly fortunate is the owner of all 14 books in this splendid series, for she, or he, is blessed with both good eating and good reading.

A GROUP OF Iranian rug-washers enjoy a mid-day meal of spicy mutton stew called dizi in this photograph from the Time-Life Foods of the World book, "Middle Eastern Cooking" by Harry G. Nickles.

SOME NEW READING FOR THE JUNIORS

For Libraries

"Books For Elementary School Libraries: An Initial Collection" has been compiled and edited by Elizabeth Hodges and is available for $7.50 from American Library Association, Order Department, 50 East Huron Street, Chicago, Ill., 60611.

"Bird Life (for Young People)" by Helmut E. Adler of the American Museum of Natural History and others was originally published in 1962 and now has been repeated by Sterling Publishing Co. in a new, updated edition.

The most impressive addition to this well-regarded nature book is a gallery of 200 full-color illustrations by Eva Hulsmann of birds and bird families.

Newly discovered information on bird habits including their migrations have also been included.

This is not just a bird identification book, but rather a text aimed at answering the questions youngsters might well ask about birds. How do birds fly? What birds store their food? What is the purpose of their preening? Can birds see at night? What enables some birds to swim, while others cannot?

The illustrations and descriptions, however, qualify the book to serve as an identification manual on at least the elementary , beginning level.

It is an attractive book, and a readable, usable one. The price is $6.95, not exorbitant considering the artwork.

Some other new books for juniors:

"Seven American Stories" (Little, Brown, $6.95) is a collection of tales by Walter D. Edmonds, the much-read writer of "Drums Along the Mohawk" and other works set in early America. The anthology includes his "The Matchlock Gun" that won the 1942 Newbery Medal and such other hits as "Wilderness Clearing" and "Cadmus Henry." His books make rousing adventure reading, transporting young readers back into other eras. "For readers 8 to 80," says the jacket. But 10,11, and 12 seem about right to us.

"A Wind Named Anne" (Doubleday, $3.50) is another by a veteran writer of books emphasizing action and adventure for young boys. J. Allan Bosworth tells a fast-paced story of Kip James, a New England lad, with a problem of some looted lobster pots. And a more serious problem ahead in the form of a hurricane headed for his town. There's lots of local, regional color, as well as plenty of action.

"The Mexicans" (Little, Brown, $5.95) by Harold Coy, retired newspaper man now living in Mexico, is a history of a people about which most young Americans know very little. Coy goes all the way back to prehistory to tell how Mexico and Mexicans became what they are today. Coy's earlier book, "The Americans," received the 1959 Thomas Alva Edison Foundation Childrens Book Award, and indeed, he does write well and forcefully.

The hero of Syd Hoff's "The Little Knight" (McGraw-Hill, $4.50) is the kind we could use more of today. Sir Dudley, it seems, is a compulsive cleaner-upper, more interested in picking up litter than in winning tournaments and championing fair maidens, or slaying dragons. There's an ecology lesson in this fun-filled romp, supposedly in the past, but somehow so very applicable to today.

"All the Lassies" (Dial, $3.50) by Liesel Moak Skorpen with art by Bruce Martin Scott is a clever little book about an appealing boy with an overpowering desire to own a dog. Other pets fail to detour him from his objective. Both story and illustrations are charmingly done.

The hero of "Sebastian" (Funk & Wagnalls, $2.95) by Florence Parry Heide is an endearing little spider who is not at all spider-like. In fact, as a web-spinner, he is a flop. And he has no taste for flies. How Sebastian triumphs over his shortcomings makes for an unusually beguiling child's tale. Elizabeth Mary Fraser has done the illustrations with authenticity and humor. As an added bonus, there are a couple of spider songs, words and music, in the back of the book.

Rise Of Black Music From Underground To Dominance

By DON KEOWN

THE WORLD OF SOUL by Arnold Shaw; Cowles, 306 pages, $6.95.

While the process is still imperfect and incomplete, the music world has gone further toward integration than most fields — newspapering, for instance.

It is a trend that has gained impetus in more recent years from white discovery and appreciation of black music that was formerly mostly underground and restricted to a single race.

Indeed, that discovery has gone so far that black music labeled generally as Soul music has become the single most important element of our popular music catalogues.

In his "The World of Soul," white musicologist, composer and author Arnold Shaw tells how Soul music came into being, and how it captured the ears of a white public that had generally been uneasy with or disdainful of its predecessors.

Shaw devotes much of his book to the country blues, and to its successor, rhythm and blues.

A Mayo Williams song told us: "The blues ain't nothing but a woman crying for her man." And, adds Shaw, vice versa.

Howlin' Wolf put it this way: "Blues is problems, and singing about them doesn't make things easier, I think. It just takes your mind off it."

Said Albert King: "What most people don't understand is that it (the blues) has no color. It's just a musical language that man uses to express his inner self. . .You might call the blues a problem song."

Rhythm and blues, Shaw writes, is the more urbanized kin of the country blues. "To some extent the difference between the two musical forms can be found in the varying effects produced by acoustic and electrical guitar, and simple guitar accompaniment and driving combo accompaniment. (But) it is also a manifestation of the disparity in tempo and tension between life in rural Mississippi and racist Chicago of the postwar years."

Or as Albert King put it: "The old blues made sense in their day, but the problems today are different."

Shaw's text covering both the blues and rhythm and blues movements is rich in the names of the greats of black music, and his comments upon those musicians are unfailingly perceptive and stimulating.

And after the space devoted to those two branches of black music, it is something of a surprise to have him declare: "Not spirituals, not blues, not rhythm and blues, but gospel songs are the immediate blood relatives of Soul."

He quotes Mahalia Jackson: "Blues are the songs of despair. Gospel songs are the songs of hope. When you sing gospel, you have the feeling that there is a cure for what's wrong."

And Shaw adds that whereas Gospel singers "make a joyful sound unto the Lord, Soul singers make a stirring noise unto man. And the fervor of the Gospel becomes the frenzy of Soul."

This very humanistic quality in Soul might lead some observers to assert that the blues rate at least equal billing with gospel as a parent of Soul music.

Before taking up some of today's top Soul singers, Shaw states: "Possession is the word and state that separates the black singers previously considered in this volume — except for the gospeleers — from those who follow.

"Possession begins with the singer. When it is potent enough, it sweeps like a tidal wave...Rooted in the blues, soul singing is in a different bag than the blues. Admittedly, they both stem from the same tradition of personal expression. But the essence of the blues is the degree of control, reserve, detachment and distance that make it possible for the singer to face adversity and frustration with calm and courage. The essence of Soul is the degree of involvement, that emenates from the singer's feeling of rage and outrage at the adversities and frustrations of an abominable world."

In other words, the difference is much the same as that which separates the black generations — the older ones who felt compelled to bear their special burdens with courage and dignity, from the younger ones who with equal, or greater, bravery, shout out their grievances and their determination to throw them off. Something similar, but in its own racial context, also divides the white generations as well.

Shaw then goes on to analyze such major Soul figures as Nina Simone, James Brown, Ray Charles, Otis Redding, Jimi Hendrix and Aretha Franklin.

He is pleased that this very black music has bridged racial chasms to attract white admirers. "Pop music today is like a satellite drawn by the huge gravitational pull of black music," so that white and black strains are beginning to blend and mix.

"Expressive song of the future depends on the richness of that mixture," says Shaw, ". . .and the more integrated our society, economically as well as musically, the richer the mixture."

But he also sees some dangers: That some whites imitate and try to sound black, rather than adapt the best from the black music to the best of their own music. And that some blacks compromise their own musical heritage in striving for white acceptance and commercial success. And that as they experience that success on white terms, they will be less and less a part of the black society that has produced the very music that got them their beginnings up the ladder.

Adapting from each other's cultures, not imitation, is the answer to a fruitful closing of the music gap, Shaw believes.

Shaw's book might well be read in conjunction with Phyl Garland's "The Sound of Soul" reviewed here some weeks ago. Shaw is a thoroughly competent musicologist, technically skilled in analysis and expertise. And he writes with a proven record of genuine empathy for blacks. But Miss Garland is herself a black, and thus has a built-in advantage over Shaw in exploring some of the most subtle nuances of the music that has been one of the Negro's few unstolen and most cherished possessions.

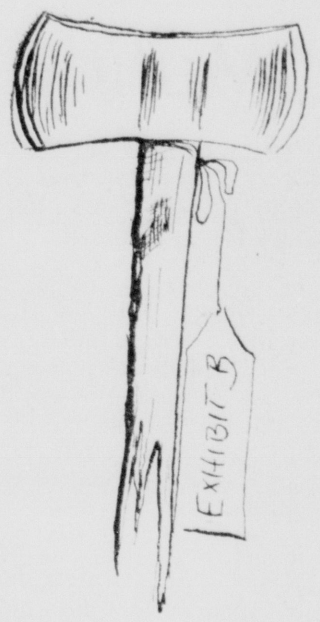
Sleuths & Suspense

THE FACE OF INNOCENCE by Elisabeth Ogilvie; McGraw-Hill, 260 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



As a teen-ager, Susan Linden had been palmed off by her domineering, opportunistic mother as the reincarnation of an Egyptian princess who expressed herself through paintings.

Susan fled that life to begin another as a suburban housewife and mother. Then the quiet and stability of that existence are threatened when she is confronted by her paintings and a man from out of the past.

Trapped because she has not told her husband of her earlier identity, Susan struggles desperately to safeguard her family and cling to her hard-won happiness. Ultimately, murder brings the menace into the open.

In her 14th novel, Miss Ogilvie has an imaginative plot which, unfortunately, she fails to present with sufficient conviction to be really effective. "The Face of Innocence" will appeal largely to tried-and-true Ogilvie fans who are considerable in number and mostly women.

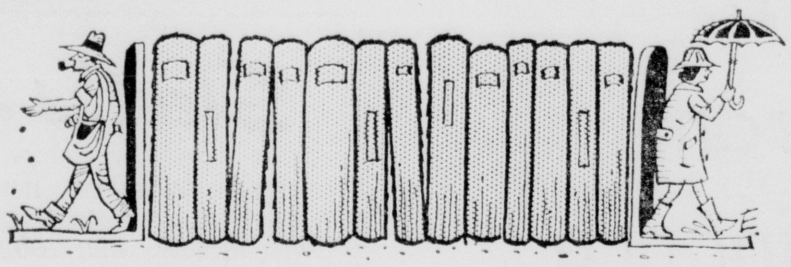
The Story Behind A Mutiny



THE UNLAWFUL CONCERT by Fred Gardner; Viking Press, 239 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Norm Howard.

The temptation to exercise authority without fulfilling its concomitant responsibilities is one of the problems of military life. The temptation crops up in civilian life too; but so far the American political system has found ways of coping with it in that sphere.

But in the Army there seems to be no way of ameliorating the abuse of authority that does not undermine the instant obedience that is required in combat. Military discipline, then, rests on regulations; military justice must depend on a kind of nobless oblige. This relative absence of codified restraints on authority is often the undoing of small men.

So it seems in the case of the Presidio Mutiny.

The exercise of some self-restraint, the avoidance of a tendency toward hysteria, on the part of authorities at the Presidio might have prevented the so-called mutiny from ever coming to the attention of the general public. Indeed, the demonstration itself might never have occurred had the repeated protests of the potential "mutineers" through proper channels been heeded.

The evidence that Fred Gardner provides in "The Unlawful Concert" leads toward one conclusion; that the Army so hopelessly maltreated the Presidio 27 that they had no avenue of expression left to them other than a demonstration. It was a long chance in any case. A wise commander might have kept the demonstration from erupting into the cause celebre that it eventually became. Labeling the demonstration a "mutiny" made it newsworthy.

But why was there a demonstration at all? Gardner seems to want us to believe that the unspeakable injustices of military life will drive the sanest of men to desperate behavior. This is not quite the case.

Gardner describes the mutineers as " . . . by and large, from the poorest, least fortunate strata of white America. Only five had graduated from high school. None but Rowland finished a year of college, and he finished exactly one."

Sociologists tell us that one of the attributes that distinguishes this American stratum from more fortunate ones is the former's relative inability to regard the future realistically—an obliviousness to consequences. There's the nub, then. Most young men endure what the Army dishes out because they have their eyes on the future. They are able to weigh the consequences of protest against their certain freedom in the not-so-distant future. They are able to choose endurance and so avoid the concentration of the negative aspects of Army life that the stockade represents.

The Presidio 27, however, were culturally unable to take that view. They reacted immediately and violently to the absurdities of the military. They ended up in the stockade. When life in the stockade became unbearable, their reaction took the fashionable form of a demonstration.

Seen in this light, the mutiny becomes not so much a conscious act of the middle-class intellectual left as it does spontaneous revolt of the oppressed.

Gardner suggests that as the subsequent trials progressed, the 27 became more conciously revolutionary—that they came to regard themselves as part of that middle-class intellectual left.

He makes no attempt to unravel the formative years of the various Army prosecutors and judges involved. Certainly, it seems, their actions and reactions were as compulsive as those of the defendants. One wonders what American strata produced these men, too. The reason that we do not find out is that this book is really a pamphlet rather than an account or an analysis.

Further light is shed by Fred Gardner's credentials. According to Viking, "Mr. Gardner was formerly an editor at Scientific American and at Ramparts magazine. He initiated the GI coffee-house movement and contributed to the screenplay of Zabriskie Point. . . Mr. Gardner was a defense witness in the recent Chicago 7 trial."

Black Experience In Double Exposure

I KNOW WHY THE CAGED BIRD SINGS by Maya Angelou; Random House, 281 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Elizabeth Rogers.

A confluence of talent and circumstance has enabled Maya Angelou to recreate the emotions of an exceptional child in a setting that will startle the average reader.

Her book is a culture medium for the growth of racial empathy. In writing it, she has done mankind a greater service than all the sociologists and anthropologists who try to provide the answer to one of today's most puzzling problems.

This is a selective autobiography, and as such is out of balance and betrays the amateur. It reads more like a novel than an autobiography, and makes the reader wish that Miss Angelou would try her hand at the more creative form. The use of poetic images, the unusual insight into character, her easy use of language, her recall — precise and sensitive — all belong especially to the novelist.

Maya Angelou's account of her childhood is like a double exposure of the black experience. Part of it, spent with her grandmother in a small southern town, carries overtones of slave days. Both blacks and whites are held by the attenuated but unbreakable bonds of former times. Like Bunyan's Christian, the blacks move through their daily lives like people struggling in the slough of Despond, carrying a burden almost too heavy to bear. Only religion gives them emotional release and hope for the future.

In constrast, the impact of ghetto life in the cities is like the hammering of a piledriver — shock after shock of strange and demoralizing experiences deaden the sensibilities and seduce the will. It is a tribute to the race of man that someone like Maya Angelou can survive with the core of her being intact, with the desire and power to communicate the meaning of her life to other people. That she is not alone, she points out to us in a terse statement of cause and effect.

"The Black female is assaulted in her tender years by all . . . common forces of nature at the same time that she is caught in the tripartite crossfire of masculine prejudice, white illogical hate and Black lack of power.

"The fact that the adult American Negro female emerges a formidable character is often met with amazement, distaste and even belligerence. It is seldom accepted as an inevitable outcome of the struggle won by survivors and deserves respect if not enthusiastic acceptance."

An Historical Novel That Has Been Richly Researched

THE TEMPTATION OF ANGELIQUE by Sergeanne Golon; G. P. Putnam's, 424 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Shirley Graves.

"The Temptation of Angelique" is the seventh in a series of novels tracing the adventures of the beautiful Angelique.

Of French nobility, the earlier chronicles of her life in 17th Century France told of her marriage to Joffrey de Peyrac, and her life at the Court of King Louis XIV after being separated from her husband by the trickery of their political enemies. One attempt to leave France resulted in capture by pirates and imprisonment in North Africa, from which she escaped only to be discovered by the King's agents and returned to France.

Condemned to death, she again escaped and this time succeeded, sailing to America to be reunited with Joffrey and their two teen-age sons.

Joffrey has prospered in the New World, establishing a seaport colony in Maine and controling many inland mining operations and outlying forts and settlements. When this book opens Angelique and Joffrey have survived their first winter at Wapassou, one of the forts, and are on their way to Goldsboro, the Count de Peyrac's colony.

Angelique is in for dangerous adventures in the New World, too, but these adventures and Joffrey's commercial endeavors are so expertly woven in to the actual history of the times that the reader will feel them to be a real part of history rather than fictional characters.

The book has a great deal to offer a serious history student as well as a lover of adventure stories in the historical-romance category and also the over-30 woman who may enjoy an "older" heroine (in her late 30s) who is so beautiful that she becomes a legend among the Indians and settlers. It is to be read thoroughly, all 424 pages, to get the benefit of the obviously great amount of research that made possible so much attention to detail.

Caught in the midst of political intrigue between English and French agents and mistrusted by both Puritans and Catholics, Angelique and Joffrey are again separated. She is tricked into taking a trip inland and, while Joffrey matches wits with their enemies at Goldsboro, Angelique narrowly misses death in the massacre of an English Puritan settlement. Heading for the coast with the few other survivors, she is captured by the notorious pirate Goldbeard who turns out to be the lovely Angelique's greatest danger in many ways.

The author's name, Sergeanne Golon, is the pen name of a husband and wife writing team, Ann and Serge Golon; their books are first published in their native France and translated by Margaret Barnett.

The Fern Is Favorite For Marin Landscapes

Garden Page

Ferns. The name conjures-up different thoughts: Tall stately tree ferns, airy and delicate fronds adding a coolness to the shade garden, beds of arching sword ferns, conversation-piece ferns in hanging baskets.

Ferns are favorites with Marinites with good reason. They are fun to garden with, and the range of textures and shades of green foliage add a distinctive dimension to the landscape.

TAKE HOLLY FERN as an example.

It's favorite because of its handsome dark green fronds with holly-like leaflets. Growing two to three feet in height, this fern is an excellent landscape shrub in limited sun or shady locations.

Light green Sword Fern is a hardy specimen, more sun tolerant than many others and may be used to fill-in larger areas. Its low-growing appearance decorates foundation planting beds, too.

The upright growth and softening effect of its fronds are truly desirable.

NURSERYMEN HAVE a selection of Tree Ferns to use for creating effects in the shade garden or patio. These boast tall stately trunks and arching fronds whose beauty is striking.

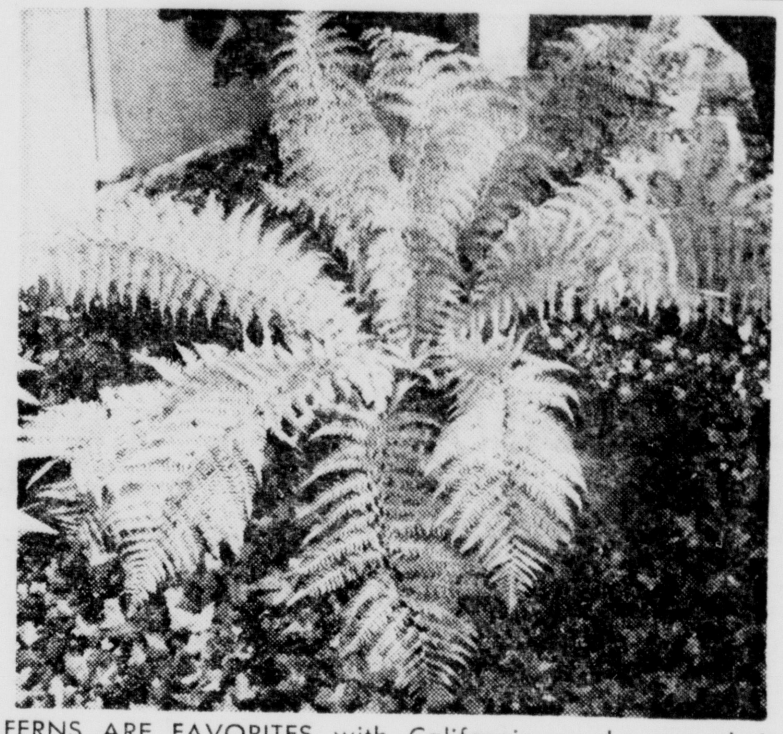
Tree Ferns do well in containers, also, and add charm and beauty to porch or patio when used this way.

The Maidenhair Fern is a versatile one—it is used in the landscape, as a groundcover, hanging basket or pot plant. It has small,firm leaflets and will take some morning sun in coastal locations.

Sprenger's Fern—one of the Asparagus Ferns—has tiny needles of an almost chartreuse shade. It's versatile, too, and whether in a hanging basket or in the ground, you'll enjoy this one, which takes more sun than most ferns.

THERE ARE popular landscape-type ferns as well as novelty ones. Your nursery will have those which flourish in our area.

Shopping may reveal such fun things as the Rabbit's Foot Fern or the Stag Horn Fern—each is all the name implies and it's an enjoyable experience to grow these on the patio—or indoors—as lovely conversation pieces.



FERNS ARE FAVORITES with Californians who use their wide range of textures and shadings of green foliage to add distinction to their landscapes. Typical of the family is the graceful Woodwardia Fern shown here, perfect in a rock garden, with colorful flowers or as the foundation planting in a shade garden. Geraniums Belong In Our Gardens

Hardly a garden in Marin does not boast of a geranium or two.

To the surprise of easterners, a great number of geraniums do well here.

There are tall, dwarf and trailing varieties with both colorful flowers and unusual foliage. The varieties are botanically known as Pelargoniums. Several species even have scented foliage.

LEMON GERANIUM (Pelargonium crispum) features lavender flowers and the foliage, when crushed, gives off a pleasing lemon scent.

Another unusual Pelargonium is the Nutmeg Geranium. It has scalloped gray-green leaves with a strong nutmeg scent and tiny white flowers.

Well-known in the Pelargonium family are Martha Washington—or Lady Washington—Geraniums. They have heart-shape leaves and flowers of scrumptious colors: Pink, red, lavender, white and purple. Darker markings add to the beauty of the flowers.

Both scented geraniums and Martha Washington Geraniums may be planted in the garden or grown in pots, enabling you to have portable color for porch or patio.

THE POPULAR Zonal Geraniums are the ones taken for granted for decades by Californians, who still rely on them for colorful accents throughout the garden. They bloom in dwarf and miniature forms in addition to the regular three foot size grower. Flowers are red, white, pink and salmon in many shades.

Ivy Geraniums serve many purposes: As a groundcover, border plantings and as hanging basket plants. The foliage is glossy and bright green, the flowers—in red, rose pink, pink, white and lavender—adorn the plants throughout summer.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Frequent pinching of new growth on fuchsias forces bushy side growth and added new wood to carry blooms.

✓ Spring is a most favorable time to seed new lawns. Lawns planted now will become established before summer's hot weather.

✓ Now that the danger of frost is over, plant your citrus and other evergreen fruit trees such as avocados.

✓ Spring-flowering deciduous shrubs such as weigela, forsythia, spirea and philadelphus should be pruned as they finish flowering.

✓ The National Lawn and Garden Week program seeks to improve the environment. Celebrate and help beautify your corner of America by planting annuals now, which will provide quick color, and add beauty and summer-long cheer to your garden and neighborhood. Asters, zinnias, marigolds, dwarf dahlias and petunias are just a few prolific bloomers to consider.

What To Do About A Stump

Cutting down a tree is simple with a lightweight chain saw — it is stump removal that stumps the home owner!

The tendency is to cut the tree as close to ground level as possible and hope it will rot away quickly.

But in spite of formulas for burning and potions that guarantee the stump will disappear promptly, it remains to cause aggravation every time the lawn is mowed.

The best way to remove a stump is to dig a trench around it, cutting all roots, undercutting as much as possible and then wrap a chain around the stump and pull it out with a tractor, a jeep or a winch fastened to an adjacent ree. To get a purchase on the trunk you must cut it high — the higher, the more leverage you get.

But the easiest way is to hide the stump with greenery. Soil and moisture hasten rot as fast as any preparation ever concocted. Using your light weight chain saw, you can carve out the inside of the trunk and cut niches in the sides of the stump.

Fill the cavities with planter mix for growth of such trailing vines as periwinkle (Vinca Major), nasturtium or lantana.

Weeping shrubs, basket fuchsia, prostrate rosemary or annuals as petunia and ivy geranium are good choices for the planter.

IN REMOVING a dead or dying tree, or one that has become a hazard, follow these four steps. First, cut the stump high at about three feet above ground level. Then, two, saw off the stump to a flat top at table height to make a planter. Three, use your lightweight chain saw to carve out the inside of the stump and to make niches in the trunk at intervals. Fill with peat moss and soil mixture. Four, vines such as nasturtium, periwinkle, ivy or lantana may be planted to cascade down to the ground. Weeping shrubs like fuchsias, prostrate rosemary or annuals such as petunias and geraniums will grow with little attention. The pockets will be ideal places for Hens or Chickens. "How Do I Choose A Good Drycleaner?"

As a newcomer to your community, choosing a drycleaner becomes a necessity. Your own good judgment will often help you make the proper selection. Your personal inspection of a drycleaning plant or even a call office often reveals good housekeeping habits that reflect quality drycleaning.

If you think of it before changing residence, ask your regular drycleaner. Perhaps he can suggest someone. Frequently drycleaners know the better plants in many cities.

Another suggestion is that you look for identification of a drycleaner with his local, state or national association. Drycleaners who belong to trade associations have the advantage of being kept up-to-date on drycleaning developments, new fabrics and finishes. They indicate that they take pride in their profession and support it. They probably take pride in their workmanship, too.

Follow these suggestions and you should find a reliable, expert drycleaner wherever you go.

Spring Is Improvement Project Time

By VIVIAN BROWN

Lumber yard and building supply catalogues are loaded with ideas that will give a house distinction and provide it with utilitarian advantages. A new entranceway, a lean-to for outdoor storage, and screened-in porch-to-patio rejuvenation are some ideas noted in these booklets.

And what a way for the do-it-yourselfer to spend spring—outdoors.

The do-it-yourselfer is re-emerging with level, plumb and saw in timid fashion. Many have been reluctant to resume home tasks as some lumberyards had been so uncooperative. The attitude was that the do-it-yourselfer didn't know what he was doing, and the lumber yard didn't want to get involved in his jerry-building.

THERE IS A new image. The do-it-yourselfer is being encouraged by these service outlets. Big housing has been slowed up, which is one reason for the new attitude. But, more than that, the do-it-yourselfer is recognized as an innovator, and a key to progress in the building trade. If he doesn't know that something has never been done, he may even try to do it. Builders do not like to experiment, especially in a tight-money market, when they might risk losses. They prefer to stick with their old formula.

An entrance way can set a house apart from the development house next door, but builders purchase a load of entrance ways, and save a few dollars, if they take one plan. This is true of many things that go into the house—fixtures, windows, and so on.

You can set a house apart in a look-alike area by converting an ordinary entrance way to an architectural one with pilasters, sidelights, archway, and so on. Go to the building supply yard with measurements and discuss your ideas.

Another outdoor project is an outdoor storage lean-to that may be attached to the side of the garage. The long side of the lean-to might have wide doors for storage of bulky garden tools. On either side of those doors, there may be smaller doors in the upper area where shelves can be put for storage of small items, such as small equipment, paint cans and so on. Doors opening on either side of the lower half of the short sides of the lean-to may be a convenient place for storing bulky items, lawn mowers, bicycles, and so on. The space above these doors is reached from the small doors on the long side of the lean-to.

A do-it-yourselfer would surely endear himself to his family with such a project. In some households, the man of the house harasses everyone, insisting that outdoor equipment be stored neatly in the garage or basement. If the family is active, it is an impossible task that cuts into the outdoor fun. But, the lean-to permits convenient maneuvering of stuff into it from the outside. There is a place for everything, without patting it into place.

ANOTHER family-appreciation project might be a screened-in porch conversion. It is especially timely, if you are at the point of screens renewal. One building supply catalogue illustrates a screened-in porch that becomes a covered patio. You merely put in sliding doors that go to the ground, opening the entire area on the side facing lawn, water or another pretty view. Brick, flagstone or other weather-permitted material may be used on the porch floor and carried out into the patio. An awning is another good extender.

If the architecture of the house is Colonial, you can preserve its traditional architectural stability by utilizing insulated glass sliding doors with wood pine frames. A ranch house or other contemporary-style dwelling may utilize the less-expensive aluminum framed sliding glass doors.

POTPOURRI OF OPENING DAY

Little Leaguers around Marin County kicked off their season today and in San Rafael, the would-be major leaguers first clustered in the Bank of America parking lot and then set off on a parade through town, a colorful mish mash of uniforms, smiles and dreams of a pennant. But while some of the rookies may have been excited with the season's opening, Patrick Malloy of the San Quentin Giants (right) yawns with the disdain of a 15-year major league veteran and perhaps wonders, "Won't this season ever end?"

Mao's China Orbits Red-Singing Satellite

World Ponders Effects

HONG KONG (UPI) — Communist China announced the launching of its first space satellite and said the 380-pound vehicle was broadcasting Peking's revolutionary anthem "The East is Red" as it spun around a world wondering about the military implications.

The Chinese, who invented the rocket almost 1,000 years ago and began testing nuclear bombs in 1964, thus became the fifth nation to create space satellites but American rockets technology, joining the United States, the Soviet Union, France and Japan, in the space race. Britain has launched satellite but American rockets have been used.

The United States reacted quickly to the Peking announcement, and said the progress of the satellite was being watched closely.

Dr. Thomas O. Paine, the head of the U.S. space agency, said the launching was a "dramatic demonstration" of the determination of Chinese

Bridge Directors Disagree On Need Of Transit Image

A $55,000 contract to give the Golden Gate Bridge District's planned transit system an image-building ran into strong opposition yesterday when it came before the board of directors for approval.

San Francisco Supervisor Ronald Pelosi, a member of the bridge board, said the cost of the contract proposed with Walter Landor and Associates was "outrageous."

But his move to have other firms solicited for their interest in the job was defeated, and action on the contract was tabled until the board's May 8 meeting.

The San Francisco industrial design firm was selected by Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring and recommended yesterday by the district's joint transportation and finance-auditing committee. Luehring noted that he had been instructed to get the "very best," and had selected the Landor firm after screening several firms.

Several directors noted that such firms will not bid competitively.

San Francisco Supervisor Peter Tamaras argued for hiring Landor. "We're trying to sell a multimillion-dollar

Two Scuffle In Attempt To Enter I-J

Two men who engaged in a brief shoving match with a security guard at the Independent-Journal last night ended the struggle by kicking out two windows in the plant, San Rafael police reported today.

A security guard told police that a man in his late 40s or early 50s came to the door of the newspaper about 10 p.m. and said he wanted to place an ad. The guard said he told the man to return during normal business hours, but the man kept his foot in the door and refused to allow the guard to close the door.

The guard told police a second man — described as a Negro about 23 years of age — then joined the first man and helped hold the door open. The guard and the two men scuffled briefly, police reported, with the guard finally succeeding in closing the door. The younger man then kicked out the glass in the door, police reported.

A few minutes later glass in the main revolving door of the newspaper was also kicked in, officers reported.

The guard told police the two men then joined a group of other persons getting aboard a bus which had brought them to a meeting at Carpenter's Hall

Span Board Speedily Becomes Ferry Owner

Immediate purchase of a $558,673 ferryboat to serve Sausalito commuters won formal approval yesterday by Golden Gate Bridge District directors in a 14-2 vote.

But doubt was raised whether the service could begin by the target date of July 1.

The district's attorney, Jerome B. White of San Francisco, citing the need for competitive bids to modify the vessel and for completion of terminal arrangments, said July 1 "as a target date is rediculous." No estimate was offered on how long it would take to clear these details.

Sausalito Mayor Robin Sweeny, warning that "changes" in the service may be needed if it worsens the city's already severe traffic congestion, won a unanimous board vote commiting the district to "go along" with what ever changes the city may ask after six months.

The district also plans a second terminal at Marinship, opening perhaps by Sept. 1. The first terminal will be downtown.

Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring attempted to report new cost estimates to modify the vessel, but directors, citing the late hour, pushed ahead with a vote without hearing his report.

The modifications include enclosing the second deck, strengthening the third deck, adding radar, and installing amenities such as a bar. Leuhring previously estimated the cost of the work at about $35,000, but his new estimate is up to $75,000 or $80,000, primarily to strengthen the top deck and add more comfortable seating.

The district's chief of ferryboat operators, Harlan Socten, told the Independent-Journal that the capacity will go from 500 to 597 passengers because of the strengthening of the top deck so it, too, can be used.

The modifications will come before the board at its May 8 meeting.

Both dissenting directors, Ben K. Lerer of San Francisco and L.E. Castner of Sonoma County, said they favored ferries, but first wanted more details on how the single vessel would operate.

"It's not a ferryboat — it's a railroad," Castner said of the speedy vote. The purchase was recommended last week by the district's "committee of the whole."

The ferryboat is the Point Loma, commissioned late last year in San Deigo. She is 111

BOLINAS-STINSON STRIFE

Many Children Benefit From Free-Style Study

By PAT ANGLE

(Last of three articles)

To veterans of the traditional "all right, class, open your books to page 34" educational system, a visit to Stinson Beach School is bound to be an eye-opening experience guaranteed to raise the spirits — or the blood pressure.

Gone are the familiar neat rows of desks, the hallowed (if forced) silence of the classroom and the lines of student papers, each with its inevitable gold star, marching across bulletin boards like little soldiers.

At first glance, it appears that "dear old Golden Rule days" have deteriorated into utter chaos. Parents who are graduates of traditional schools have been known to panic after only one visit to the school.

But it soon becomes apparent that exciting — though, to some, incomprehensible — things are happening at Stinson School — things as unheard of in schools of the past as closed-circuit television coverage of two men on the moon. A similar program is underway at Bolinas School.

On one recent school day, a group of students filmed credits for a documentary film they are making on the difference between life in the city and the country. The 20-minute black and white and color film was planned, filmed and edited by the students, who received technical advice from two professional film makers.

A fifth grade student read fluently from an adult book on guinea pig care to explain why a pregnant guinea pig in the small zoo she had started had to be kept in a separate cage until her babies are born. The same little girl, while cleaning a cage, proceeded to give a knowledgeable explanation of genetics, explaining "that is how we can tell what colors the babies will be."

Other students worked to

Mayors' Objections Pepper Ross Valley Flood Budget

A presentation of next year's budget for the Ross Valley Flood Control Zone was interrupted repeatedly yesterday by two mayors who objected to their cities having to contribute to flood control in unincoporated areas and to the proposed tax rate.

William L. Hess, assistant director of the county public works department, presented the $152,400 budget, which calls for continuing the zone tax rate at five cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

Mayors Neil R. Brixon of Larkspur and Edward W. Colthurst of Corte Madera kept voicing objections until Hess said heatedly: "You can interrupt me all you want, but you're not letting me finish one single statement I make."

Hess finally managed to complete a rundown of the budget, but the mayors were far from happy with it.

Brixon said that in 1964 the cities had been promised a tax

I-J Negotiation Session Held; Unions Talk General Stoppage

Representatives of the Independent-Journal and striking printers met yesterday in San Francisco over a new contract proposal submitted by the I-J at the union's request, but the session ended with no further sessions scheduled.

Representatives of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, which struck the I-J Jan. 7, assailed the proposal at the meeting's conclusion and said, "There is no basis for further negotiations at this time."

A statement charged that the newspaper proposed a cut in pay of more than $42 per week "for the vast majority of employees" and elimination of the apprenticeship training program.

However, Howard Looney, industrial relations consultant, representing the I-J at yesterday's session, said today that the union "must have engaged in some interesting calculations" to arrive at the salary-cut charge.

He said the paper proposes a different pay scale, based on skills, and a new job classification pattern. Linotype machine operators, for instance, would have a higher pay schedule than was in existence prior to the strike, he said.

He said yesterday's meeting was at the request of the union for a review by the newspaper of its position. "There was no

"Bogus"-Setting Type, Throwing It Away

The union insists that advertising supplied the I-J (already set by union printers) must, after publication, be set over again in type, proofread, corrected — then thrown away. For this, printers get full union wages. (So did those who set it in the first place). Under International Typographical Union laws "bogus" is a negotiable item. In practice, however, the S.F. Typographical Union 21 violates the laws of its parent body. While it continues to "claim" this item is negotiable, the union has never entertained or made a single proposal for its elimination even though the I-J offered generous added job security if the union would agree to eliminate this "bogus", uneconomic practice.

Chiang's Heir Continues U.S. Tour; Suspects Held

NEW YORK (UPI)—Two Formosan revolutionaries, members of a movement seeking independence for their countrymen, were held without bail today for the attempted assassination of Nationalist Chinese Vice Premier Chiang Ching-kuo, Chiang Kai-shek's son and heir apparent.

The 60-year-old Chiang, apparently unruffled by the gunshot attempt on his life as he walked through a revolving door of the Plaza Hotel Friday, flies to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., today. He had the blessings of Nationalist Chinese leaders on Formosa who decided after an emergency meeting the U.S. could provide adequate protection.

Peter Huang, 32, an Ithaca, N.Y., researcher for Cornell University and a member of the World United Formosans for Indepesdence in the United States which seeks the ouster of the Nationalist regime, was charged with attempted murder, possession of a dangerous weapon, resisting arrest and obstruction of governmental administration.

His alleged accomplice, Tzu-tai Cheng, 32, a New York architect and secretary-general of the independence movement, was held on similar charges except for possession of a weapon.

Both were held for a hearing Tuesday following their arraignment in Municipal Criminal Court Friday night.

The assassination attempt came from a shot fired by a .25 calibre Beretta automatic. The shot missed and punctured the glass door because police Det. James Zeide lunged for the gunman's wrist just as he fired and wrestled him to the pavement.

Nejedly Urges Reduction In Flood Of New Bills

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The legislators who introduced more bills this session than any of his Senate colleagues is proposing a crackdown on the number of bills to save time and money.

Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, is also urging chronically absent committee members be dropped and the rules committee changed to allow bills to be approved by fewer committee members.

"I don't think the present legislative system takes full advantge of the capabilities of the members of the Senate and Assembly, said Nejedly. The three-month period to allow bill introductions is "not particularly productive," he added.

"I think bill introductions should be limited to the first 45 days of the session."

Nejedly says he wants to end the customary last-minute deluge of bills. This year, 1,050 of the more than 2,500 Assembly bills come in during the last five days prior to April 3 deadline. In the Senate, 710 bills showered down in the final five days, more than the 698 bills introduced between Jan. 5 and the start of the Easter recess. Many measures are similar, some are exact duplicates.

"I think that ought to be cut down by a compulsory screening process of all bills," said Nejedly. He says bill drafting could be done between sessions.

Bill production costs annually exceed $600,000. Senate aides estimate it costs $14.71 to print a single page of each bill.

Sen. Nejedly says he is concerned also that the committee system is less efficient that it could be.

A major problem this year has been lagging attendance on the floor and in committee sessions.

Part of the problem lies in the fact 25 members of the 40-member Senate are running for election, 20 for re-election and five for other offices. As a result, it sometimes is difficult to muster quorums of committees.

Nejedly feels one answer would be allowing bills to be approved by committees by a majority vote of those present, rather than insisting on a majority of the full membership.

Yorty Belittles Reagan's Plans For Tax Reform

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty says that Governor Reagan's tax reform proposals "will have little direct effect on California cities."

During a day of campaigning in the Bay Area Friday, the Democratic gubernatorial hopeful told the Press Club that "most of Reagan's proposals call for significant increases in sales and income taxes."

"By utilizing this additional revenue solely for tax relief, and, in the process, building large and continuing funding commitments into the state budget, it will be virtually impossible for the Legislature to do anything with respect to the additional revenue needs of cities now or in the foreseeable future," he said.

Yorty said he was happy to see the governor change his mind on state withholding tax. "But the state has lost a half billion dollars because he didn't press for tax withholding four years ago," Yorty added.

The mayor proposed creation of a statewide Commission on Economic Development, an effort which must be given "new and dynamic direction."

Tank Plans Shift

LONDON (AP) — West Germany and Britain have reached a preliminary agreement to develop and build a new battle tank, and Germany has decided to bow out of a plan to cooperate with the United States in a similar project.

No-Ballot School Loan Plan Urged

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A measure to allow school districts to borrow money for new schools and sites without bond elections has been sent to the Senate by a 55-0 vote of the Assembly.

The bill by Assemblyman Jerry Lewis, R-Highland, would allow school districts to sign lease-purchase agreements and pay them off with override tax revenues.

Override taxes require approval of a simple majority of voters while school bonds, the normal means of financing new schools, take a two-thirds vote.

The Lewis measure, approved Friday, would allow override elections for lease-purchase financing only at general elections. The tax authorization would be good for up to 40 years.

That would be a significant change, Lewis said, but would not be as radical a shift as it appears to be.

"It is also very significant," he said, "that when these districts fail to pass bond issues with 62 or 63 per cent votes, it is usually in a special election with a small turnout."

A simple majority in a general election is a better indication of public will, Lewis said, and in many cases a greater "yes" vote would be needed.

"It is important to realize that every sizable school district in the state is using portable classrooms . . . Sometimes entire schools are built this way without any vote of the people," Lewis said.

He said he expected opposition from "the traditional conservatives" in the Senate but predicted final approval despite them.

"The main thrust of the bill," Lewis said, "is an effort to provide a flexible alternative to a ridiculous bond market. Today school districts have hundreds of millions of dollars of bonds approved by two-thirds votes which can't be sold."

He said Prop. 7, the June primary ballot measure to lift the five per cent ceiling on bond issues, would not solve the school construction problem if adopted because of the large number of outstanding bond issues.

MARIN FIRM GETS CANCER TEST NOD

Controversial Apricot Pits Drug Due Trials By A Sausalito Foundation

About 100 persons will be tested during the next six months with a controversial cancer drug found in apricot pits.

Andrew McNaughton, president of the tiny McNaughton Foundation of Sausalito, said Friday that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had approved use of the drug Laetrile, which has been labeled "dangerous" by the Canadian government and "unproved" by the American Cancer Society.

Authorities on both sides of the nation were cautious as to the drug's curative powers.

ONLY A 'TEST'

The FDA said in Washington its action did not represent any judgment on the drug's worth, but was "an experimental thing, nothing more than a test."

McNaughton said "we do not consider that the use of the word 'cure' is justified. But it certainly is our hope that it may turn out to be a useful drug in the prevention and treatment of cancer."

He said the FDA go-ahead means Laetrile "has moved from the stage where it is considered a controversial, worthless remedy, to where it is considered worth a trial in human patients.

LONG KNOWN

The drug, known chemically as amygdalin, has been known to medical science for more than a century. It is found in apricot pits and was used by Dr. Ernest T. Krebs Sr., founder of the John Beard Memorial Foundation of San Francisco as long ago as 1920. But although the drug has been used privately, the National Cancer Institute said the experiments would be the first clinical trials with government approval.

McNaughton conceded the medical "establishment" in the U.S. looks with disfavor on Laetrile.

"It is hard to say whether they think less of the drug or less of us," he said. "But that is changing very rapidly."

NO 'EVIDENCE'

The American Cancer Society said in 1966 it had found "no evidence that that treatment with Laetrile results in any objective benefit in the treatment of cancer in human beings." It classified Laetrile as among "unproved methods of cancer treatment."

Prior to this, the Food and Drug Directorate of Canada had moved to prevent distribution of the drug by the McNaughton Foundation of Montreal, contending it "was dangerous and did not meet the requirements of the new drug act."

The California Cancer Commission in a 1953 report said Laetrile "has been completely ineffective when used in large doses on cancer in laboratory animals."

HOW IT WORKS

The basis for the use of the drug in cancer treatment, McNaughton said, is a belief that it has molecules which, on contact with tumors, "break down and release cyanide and other chemicals which destroy the malignant cells without harming normal cells."

He said approval by the FDA after "very meticulous" investigation means that Laetrile "complies with regulations and human trials are justified."

Antismog Conference Spawns Spate Of Bills

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The report which came out of California's antismog summit conference last month has been put in the form of legislation which is likely to reach Gov. Reagan's desk within 60 to 90 days.

Principal feature of the report of the Air Resources Board is a plan to phase all lead compounds out of gasoline over the next seven years.

That timetable has been adopted unanimously by the Assembly air pollution subcommittee as an amendment to an antismog bill submitted the first day of the 1970 legislature.

The amended bill will be heard by the Assembly Transportation Committee May 14, but the hearing is likely to be a formality. A marathon 12-hour hearing by the committee two weeks ago was devoted almost entirely to the Air Resources Board report now in the bill.

If there is reluctance by members of the Transportation Committee to send the tough legislation to the full Assembly with a "Do pass" recommendation, it wasn't evident even during that hearing before an audience of the nation's biggest oil interests.

Lead compounds — used for over 40 years to reduce engine knock and increase gasoline octane ratings — emerged as the chief villain in auto exhausts in the two-day conference Reagan called of auto and oil industry executives.

Lead contributes 30 to 70 per cent of the visible smog produced by autos, various authorities said, and is among the greatest health hazards in smog. Furthermore, auto manufacturers said, the presence of lead in gasoline is one of the biggest obstacles to developing efficient catalysts to reduce auto smog.

Following the lead of General Motors President Edward N. Cole, the nation's major auto manufacturers all said they would produce cars to run on lower octanes, erasing the biggest obstacle to the manufacture of lead-free gasoline.

The phase-out proposal immediately cuts the maximum allowable lead content in gasoline from four grams to 2.5 grams. Premium grades now contain about 2.8 grams while regulars average about 2.4 grams.

All refiners would be required to market at least one lead-free grade of gasoline next year, and in three more years only one grade of leaded gasoline would be allowed. Final elimination of that grade would be required in 1977.

Major refiners have said they accept the proposal — it matches almost exactly a plan first suggested at the smog summit conference by Union Oil Co. President Fred Hartley — but small refiners say it could put them out of business.

The small refiners, who sell about 18 per cent of the gasoline in California, say they can be counted on to continue their opposition throughout the legislative process.

UNAWARE OF TROUBLE — Pope Paul VI receives kisses from a poor woman in a crowd in Cagliari, Sardinia, unaware that self-described anarchists were battling with police nearby, in protesting his visit to the poverty-stricken island. (UPI Telephoto)

Pope Flays Italian Press Over Sardinia Riot News

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI attacked newspapers today for emphasizing the violence marring his historic one-day trip to Sardinia. He said accounts distorted the real importance of the visit.

"The newspapers, even the ones that call themselves the great newspapers, absolutely perverted the news," he told several hundred persons attending a special general audience.

"They are no longer newspapers that inform, only newspapers that deform," he said.

It was the Pope's first public reaction to clashes Friday along a procession route he took near the end of the first papal visit to the island of Sardinia.

Vatican sources said earlier he was saddened by the violence that began when a group of self-described anarchists hurled rocks at the Papal motorcade. The Pope was not hit and the rocks smashed the windows of a police bus several dozen yards behind his open car.

The Pope apparently was unaware of the stoning which developed into a bloody battle between police and about 30 leftwing protestors.

Officials said 16 policemen were injured, one seriously, and 27 youths, including three girls were arrested in the incident Friday.

The fighting occured in a rundown area of prefabricated apartments called Sant'Elia. The pope chose to visit this area because it was expresentative of the many poor in backward Sardinia. Earlier he had celebrated an open-air mass in the harbor for thousands of persons to commemorate the arrival in Sardinia 600 years ago of a statue of the Madonna, believed by Roman Catholics to have miraculous powers.

The demonstrators, who had been living in pup tents on the beach at Sant'Elia, scored the Pope for living among riches while Sardinians starved.

They sat down in front of a police bus to demand return of a megaphone confiscated by police. The police waded into the group, punching, kicking and swinging heavy whistle chains. The protestors started fighting back and the battle moved toward a housing block where the Pope was visiting the bedridden mother of six children, Mrs. Graziella Murgia, 43.

Only seconds after the pope left her apartment, the rocks started flying. Cheers and applause turned to screams. Women dropped to their knees in prayer.

The massive police force in the area picked up the protestors one by one. Some were roughly treated.

At one stage, a plainclothesman pointed a pistol at a demonstrator and released the safety catch, but did not fire.

One protestor fought so violently that he was pitched into a squad car and several policemen sat on top of him for the ride to jail.

Some of the demonstrators were roughed up by members of the crowd. The attitude to them was mostly hostile. They were called Chinese because of their supposedly Maoist views.

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Explosions damaged the exteriors of three banks in the college community of East Lansing early today.

East Lansing is the home of Michigan State University.

Police said a peace symbol was found hanging near the First National doorway. The slogan "Free Bobby" was painted on walls near the other banks, police said, apparently in a reference to Black Panther leader Bobby Seale on trial in New Haven, Conn.

Meetings Sought

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mediator Benjamin Aaron sought to arrange separate meetings with strikers and administrators this weekend as a preliminary to possible joint sessions aimed at ending the two-week-old teachers' walkout that has sharply curtailed education in the Los Angeles School District.

But Aaron, a University of California at Los Angeles law professor and head of UCLA's Institute of Industrial Relations, was unable to predict Friday when the two sides might be brought together.

The strike in the nation's second largest school district was intensified Friday when more than 1,000 nonteaching personnel joined about half of the 25,400 teachers in a walkout that commenced April 13.

School officials said 10 schools in the South-Central part of the city were without custodial services, three cafeterias had to be closed and there were other service problems. They added, however, that elsewhere busing was normal as were trucking, rubbish collection and cafeteria operations.

Witnesses Dropped

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Federal Communications Commission examiner in the KRON-TV license renewal hearings has canceled appearances for 34 witnesses for the station.

The action by Chester F. Naumowitz Jr., came Friday at the end of the sixth week of hearings.

"It's basically the same message over and over again," Naumowitz said, noting he heard 16 pro-KRON witnesses Thursday.

Alioto Vs. Editors

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Look magazine editor has agreed through a deposition in Mayor Joseph L. Alioto's $12.5 million libel suit the magazine's article linking him to the Mafia could have hurt his reputation.

Editor Patricia Carbine said in a deposition read Friday by Alioto attorneys Darrell Salomon and Maxwell Blecher that "I believed the piece would raise questions about the mayor's reputation" at the time of publication.

Another Look executive, senior editor and West Coast editorial manager George B. Leonard of Mill Valley, testified through deposition that he was told a character reference had been done on the two authors of the article, Richard Carlson and Lance Brisson, with positive results.

He added he had never been "really consulted" about the story until a July 26, 1968, conference with the magazine's managing editor, Martin Goldman.

Chico State Strife

CHICO (AP) — Confrontations between students at Chico State College and police have led to 11 arrests, including two faculty members.

The issue is whether a city street running through the heart of the campus should be kept open for the weekend.

At the request of college authorities, Mayor Gordon Casamajor ordered the street closed Tuesday night but the city council ordered it reopened again Thursday.

In three separate incidents Friday, students tried to close the street, leading to the arrests. All 11 were booked for investigation of conspiracy to block a public street and four were booked for resisting arrest.

The two faculty members were Jack H. Zeilenga, 33, assistant professor of history, and Francis E. Burk, 27, professor of mathematics.

Childhood Ulcers

NEW YORK (AP) — Ulcers may be becoming an increasingly common childhood disease, particularly among children of upper socio-economic backgrounds, a Buffalo, N.Y., researcher says.

Dr. Harry A. Sultz describes the development in the current issue of the American Journal of Public Health. He based his findings on a survey covering 22 upstate New York hospitals from 1946 through 1961.

The sharpest increases in incidence were found among 15-year-old boys from the highest socio-economic class.

The researcher said interviews with mothers of some of the afflicted children suggested that, as in adults, ulcers in children may be rooted in emotional stress.

Trouble In Canada

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal's three-month-old postal workers' dispute erupted in violence again Friday. Vandals smashed post office windows, poured quick-drying cement into mail boxes and stole letters from others.

The labor dispute began Feb. 3 when G. La Palme Inc., lost its exclusive contract to carry the city's mail, putting 450 of its drivers out of work.

Office Bombed

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Terrorists hurled dynamite into the Istanbul office of the Israeli airline El Al before dawn today, shattering windows and those of neighboring apartments, police said. No one was injured.

The booking office of Pan American Airways in the Aegean port of Izmir was also attacked late Friday and windows were broken, the semiofficial Anatolia news agency reported.

Egypt Jets Raid Near Tel Aviv

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

A flight of Egyptian bombers penetrated to within 90 miles of Tel Aviv today, only the second time since the 1967 war they have hit so close to the Israeli capital. Cairo said they left their targets in flames.

Tel Aviv said Israeli interceptors caught the bombers after the raid and shot down two Soviet-made Ilyushin 28s, the first of their kind downed by Israel since the Middle East War. Cairo said only that one of its planes was hit.

An announcement from Egypt reported the targets as military objectives in two areas near El Arish, a Mediterranean coastal community half way between Tel Aviv and the Suez Canal on the Sinai Peninsula. It said "all targets were successfully set aflame."

Spokesmen for the Israeli Army said their bombs destroyed a cowbarn, an animal guarantine station and an ice factory, killing 30 sheep at the quarantine station. No civilian casualties were reported.

The fact that Ilyushins were used and that the raid occurred at 2 a.m. indicated a new tact by the Egyptians, whose previous air attacks have been virtually all in daylight by smaller, short-range jets.

Israel's air force answered the offensive in kind Friday with almost simultaneous raids against Syria, Egypt and Jordan—its three most militant Arab neighbors—the first such strikes since the 1967 war.

Cambodians Tow Away Viet Boats

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

In troubled Cambodia navy boats today began towing scores of Vietnamese houseboats and their occupants away from Phnom Penh and down the Bassac River.

There was no violence as the surprised Vietnamese were taken southward toward the junction with the Mekong River. But a Cambodian sailor would not say where the Vietnamese were being taken.

Fighting was reported in the town of Angtassom south of Phnom Penh for the third straight day. The neighboring provincial capital of Takeo, six miles to the southeast, was also believed to be under attack.

In Saigon about 100 disabled veterans shouting, "Down with Cambodia!" began a sit-in on the steps of the National Assembly building to protest reported massacres of Vietnamese civilians in Cambodia. Some 100 students occupied the former Cambodian Embassy in a similar protest.

South Korea indicated today it would consider providing military or other aid to the beleaguered Cambodian government if asked.

Cambodia has made a general request to friendly countries for military aid and has made a specific appeal to the United States.

In South Vietnam the enemy offensive launched April 1 has tapered off considerably, but informed military sources are expecting a resurgence of attacks by the beginning of May.

Official allied casualty summaries have reported 9,348 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed in the first three weeks of the offensive. In the same period, 380 American and 2,036 South Vietnamese troops were killed.

35 Children Vie In Spelling Bee

A 13-year-old Kentfield youth won first prize last night in the annual spelling bee for seventh and eighth grade parochial students in Marin sponsored by San Rafael Council 1292 of the Knights of Columbus.

Tony Trembley, an eighth grade student at St. Anselm's School in San Anselmo, won $25. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Trembley of 14 McAllister Avenue.

Second place and a $10 prize went to Carolyn Schlesselmann, also 13, a seventh grader at St. Patricks' School in Larkspur. Loretta Farley, 14, an eighth grader at St. Raphael's School in San Rafael, won third prize of $5.

The competition, which drew 35 students from nine schools, was held at St. Anselm's parish hall.

Sausalito's Flag Ordered On High

The flag at Martin Luther King School in Sausalito, which has flown at half-staff since last Wednesday as a protest to the Vietnam war, will be raised again, school officials decided yesterday.

Principal Sidney K. Walton and Vice Principal James T. Toliver issued a statement that said they would comply with a directive by Phillip W. Schneider, superintendent of the Sausalito School District, that the flag be raised.

The decision was announced after a 30-minute assembly at the school's gymnasium at which students, teachers and onlookers debated the pros and cons of raising the flag. Smaller group discussions then took place, after which the participants voted 134-109 to keep the flag at half-staff.

Citing the close vote as a "definite split in the sentiment of the students at this school," the black administrators said they were convinced that "those who oppose the overall direction of this school will use the flag issue to destroy what we have done."

The school's student council earlier had voted unanimously to raise the flag. It cited bomb threats at the school and the possibility that Walton might lose his job if the flag remained down.

Walton and Toliver said the decision to raise the flag was "contrary to our moral consicience" and accused those who fought its lowering of being "part of the structure which continues the process of killing people to solve the problems of mankind."

Students and teachers were allowed to address the gathering and about a dozen did. One student said he heard over an Oakland radio station that a man called the King office Thursday at 1 p.m. and threatened Walton and Toliver.

"This is a minuteman," the man reportedly said. "You have 24 hours to put the flag back up. We know where both of you live and you know we don't play."

Walton told the assembly that Virgil S. Hollis, county superintendent of schools, had been invited to chair the meeting but refused, saying that the meeting was "inappropriate" since Schneider already had instructed Walton to raise the flag.

Walton and Toliver said they thought the assembly and voting resulted in "tremendous educational benefits" for the students. "When they come to school Monday morning and look at the flag, regardless of its position on the flagpole," their statement concluded, "they will realize even more fully that people are dying in Vietnam."

MAYORS

rate of no more than 1.5 cents. "This flood control zone was set up for the maintenance of the main channel of Corte Madera Creek," he said and indicated he did not feel the cities should be forced to spend money on creek tributaries in unincorporated areas.

Merritt K. Robinson, president of the Sleepy Hollow Homeowners Association, said the unincorporated areas have no way of raising money to fight flooding, although cities have funds they can use.

The mayors complained that it wasn't fair to expect cities to pay for flood control outside their jurisdictions.

Hess countered that the flood control project should deal with problems of the whole district, rather than a piecemeal approach which separated city and county areas.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. proposed a compromise solution — the formation of a sub-zone for unincorporated areas which would allow them to be taxed separately for projects, so residents of towns and cities would not have to foot the bill for their problems.

Arrigoni's proposal would allow areas such as Kentfield to handle flood problems locally.

Mayor Frederick S. Allen of Ross complained that his town joined the flood control district on the condition that flooding problems on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and in Ross Commons would receive high priority, but said the community's problems have been ignored. He asked that money for the two areas be allocated in the new budget, but Hess said it would be impossible.

Arrigoni said that funds for Ross should not be budgeted, because there is a good chance that money can be obtained through the Army Corps of Engineers.

The meeting ended with no real agreement on the budget proposal.

Police Nab Suspected Speedy Thief

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Porsche-driving burglar, operating in Marin for the last five years, and always able to elude police in his speedy car, was arrested yesterday when San Francisco and Marin law officers broke down the door to his San Francisco apartment.

Inspector Robert Sisk of the Mill Valley Police Department said today that the suspect, Henry Garrison, 21, is responsible for more than 38 burglaries in Marin during the last five years.

Sausalito police and the county sheriff's office also were involved in the investigation, he said.

Garrison was booked in San Francisco on four counts of receiving stolen property and one count of possession of marijuana. No bail or a court appearance had been set today.

Garrison's girlfriend, Audrey Lee, 21, slammed the apartment door when she saw the officers yesterday. Police, armed with a search warrant, then broke down the door.

Some $60,000 in furs, jewelry, hi-fi equipment, guns and ammunition and other stolen property were recovered.

Wind Flips Auto

effort here," Tamaras said. To seek another firm would mean "we'd get second rate," he said.

District Engineer Robert E. Shields said that the firm would prepare a "handbook giving the best possible scheme" to coordinate the district's transit image as it gets into the transit business. Bus and ferry companies would be able to use the handbook as a guide for color and design features in their work for the district, he said.

Luerhing noted that Landor initially had proposed a $155,000 contract, but that the "scope of the work was boiled down."

Golden Gate District Bridge Directors also:

ATTORNEY — Set the annual retainer of their incoming attorney, Thomas M. Jenkins of San Carlos, at $17,500, the same paid the current attorney, Jerome B. White. Jenkins will start work July 1, when White retires as the district's attorney emeritus.

FERRY — Granted the district's ferry consultant, Philip F. Spaulding, a two-week extension to May 26 to complete plans for a ferry system to Marin. Spaulding asked for the delay to include new data on traffic projections.

AUDIT — Tabled the annual hiring of Arthur Young & Co. to audit district books after several directors objected a new firm should be considered to bring "new ideas" to the district's practices.

FLACK — Voted $1,000 to have a public relations firm prepare a scope, and invite proposals, on a public information program on the district's long-range transit plans.

MARIN — Adopted a formula setting Marin County's obligation to pay for the intracounty portion of the district's pending bus operation, the amount to be somewhere between $123,189 and about 260,000, depending on ridership.

SUBSIDY — Asked Marin County to continue subsidizing Marin Transit System, operator of the Southern Marin bus feeder service. The district's attorney ruled Thursday that the district could not consider the company's plea for a $12,000-a-month subsidy until the district was running its own transit system.

DETROIT — Approved sending members of the insurance committee to a Detroit meeting to explore pooling insurance coverage for major bridges throughout the nation. Bridges cannot get adequate coverage through conventional insurance.

PUBLIC — Adopted a policy allowing members of the public to address the board only with the unanimous consent of the directors.

COMMUTERS — Received a report from Luehring that over 1,600 of the 20,000 questionnaires given motorists last week had been returned, and that responses showed 60 per cent interested in car pools, 55 per cent in charter bus clubs, and 36 per cent in feeder bus service to a ferryboat.

MEETING — Reported the district's citizens committee would meet at 8 p.m. Thursday in Olney Hall, College of Marin, Kentfield, to work on the district's long-range transit plan.

really detailed discussion," Looney said.

"They didn't ask for any more meetings, and they said they'd be in touch with us. We are prepared to meet," he said.

Last night in San Rafael, Bay Area labor representatives met at Carpenters Hall to discuss strategy to end the strike and raised the possibility of a general Bay Area work stoppage.

A press release issued by the Marin Labor Council said the San Rafael meeting was attended by representatives from the Marin, Sonoma, Alameda, Contra Costa, San Francisco and Santa Clara labor councils, the Joint Council of Teamsters, and the Northern California International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

The statement said that the representatives passed a motion calling for a 25-man committee "to plan further action leading to Marin and Bay Area general work stoppages if it becomes necessary."

The committee will be appointed by Charles Weers, secretary of the Marin Labor Council, the statement said, and it was expected to meet early next week.

called by labor leaders to discuss the current strike against the I-J.

Police also reported today that a man identifying himself as a member of striking San Francisco Typographical Union 21 threatened the Marin Bay Lincoln Mercury dealership with damage if it continued to advertise in the newspaper.

"You'd better stop advertising in the I-J or put everything you got under cover because there will be more than just window damage," police said the caller told a secretary at the car dealership yesterday.

Bombs Mailed To Nixon, Draft Aide

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government agents have detected bombs mailed to President Nixon and Selective Service Director Curtis W. Tarr from "apparently the same source" in Seattle, the Post Office Department said Saturday.

A spokesman said Post Office inspectors are cooperating with the Secret Service and other government agencies in investigating the attempted bombings, but so far have no suspects. He said both bombs were believed to have come from the same source because of the similarity of the packages and types of bombs found in them.

leaders to push ahead with scientific achievements despite the country's many problems. Elsewhere in Washington, there was apprehension that Red China might be nearing the point where it could pose a military threat to the United States.

Diplomatic analysts in Hong Kong, without downgrading the military implications of the feat, said its biggest effect will be psychological and political.

These observers said it may do much to improve Red China's image as a major power abroad, and should help the leadership in Peking regain its domestic position, still weakened by the turmoil of the Cultural Revolution—or purge—which swept the mainland more than two years ago.

Radio Peking said the satellite—launched Friday night—weighed 173 kilograms or about 380.6 pounds. The news was obviously withheld until it was determined that the satellite was successfully spinning around the earth in its looping orbit.

The U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration confirmed that a new satellite was orbiting the earth. A spokesman said American equipment was tracking the vehicle.

feet long, cruises at 15 knots, and is very similar in design to the Harbor Emperor serving Tiburon.

The trip from downtown Sausalito to the Ferry Building would take 25 minutes, thus making possible almost hourly service seven days a week, Luehring said. With fares at 50 cents one-way, the ferry could break even after three months, he figured.

Terminals would bring the total capital investment to $702,000, plus the unexpected additional cost of the modifications. Temporary San Francisco terminal facilities will be available at the vacant heliport site at the Ferry Building, Luehring reported.

Marcus and a companion, Robert McKinstry, 19, of 40 Millside Lane, Mill Valley, were arrested after they sold thousands of LSD tablets to federal narcotics agents at the Seven Seas Restaurant.

McKinstry, who pleaded guilty to a similar charge April 3, is scheduled to appear in district court Tuesday for sentencing.

College Strife Costs Mount

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Trouble—some serious, some silly—continued at college campuses across the nation Friday. Friday.

Arson-caused fire destroyed the life work of several scholars at a Stanford University center Friday. The Stanford fire chief said an inflammable substance was thrown through the center's windows shortly after 125 anti-ROTC demonstrators were ejected from another building.

At the other extreme, police arrested 22 persons at the University of Dayton in Ohio after about 500 students participated in a rockthrowing demonstration "celebrating the end of the semester."

The damage at Stanford's center for advanced study in behavioral sciences was placed at nearly $100,000, but one of the persons whose work was damaged said, "You can't measure the damage in terms of dollars, but rather in terms of what a man has spent his whole life producing and thinking about."

Indian anthropologist M. R. Srinivas, whose mother died earlier this week, was among those who had their life work in the building. A colleague said, "What is lost it the irreplaceable product of a great scientist from India where his science is sorely needed.

About 100 students and faculty at the University of Hawaii occupied two ROTC buildings for the second night to press demands that ROTC be removed from the campus. University President Harlan Cleveland said he hoped to end the demonstration without calling in police but said he would resort to force if violence erupted.

In New York, helmeted police carrying nightsticks cleared the lobby and halls of Hunter College of campus militants who had shut down elevators, looted the cafeteria and kicked in the doors to the office of President Jacqueline G. Wexler.

At Pennsylvania State University, student government leaders called for a strike by the school's 48,000 students to protest a decision by trustees not to grant amnesty to 37 persons arrested earlier in campus demonstrations.

Tomales Bay Fill Request Before County Planners

A request to fill tideland property next to the Marshall Tavern on the east shore of Tomales Bay will go before the Marin County Planning Commission Monday.

The all-day meeting of the commission will start at 9 a.m. on the third floor of the Civic Center.

The fill is sought by Sven B. Berg, who owns 1.6 acres of tidelands at the site. Berg wants to install an eight-foot high retaining wall about 35 feet into the bay, and fill behind it to make space for summer homes.

County planner John Hau said he would recommend against the fill. If homes are to be built, they should be on pilings with just enough fill to provide for offstreet parking and septic systems, said Hau.

County planners will also consider a request for rezoning to put in a campsite for trailer campers in the Horshoe-Paradise Valley section of Bolinas.

Claude and Louise Powell own about 17 acres on the west side of Upper Road between Pine Gulch Road and Lauff Ranch Roady. They want the zoning changed from limited agricultural to resort-commercial.

The area is surrounded by one-family homes on large sites of three to five acres.

Painter Reports Bridge Plunge

An unidentified man apparently leaped to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge yesterday.

Bridge painter James Wilkins told the California Highway Patrol he heard something hit the water about 12:45 p.m. He said he saw the body of an adult man floating just below the bridge.

The Coast Guard unsuccessfully searched for the man's body, which apparently sank in just a few minutes. The body had not been found as of this morning, the highway patrol said.

Officers said they had no clues to the identity of the victim. No abandoned cars have been found, they said.

WHITE HOUSE FRACAS—Chicago Seven member Abbie Hoffman, suited and neatly shorn, claims he's a "bodyguard" for Jefferson Airplane singer Grace Slick, in a White House confrontation at which he and Miss Slick attempted to attend a tea given by Tricia Nixon. After a tussle with guards yesterday (below), Hoffman and friend left while he shouted obscenities.

Abbie Hoffman Bounced From White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To the startled looks of 300 kid-gloved ladies, Abbie Hoffman proved at the White House Friday that the shearing of his locks did not clip his style.

Shouting obscenities, Hoffman was muscled away from a White House gate when he tried to crash a ladies-only tea party being given by Tricia Nixon for fellow alumnae of Finch College.

Hoffman, one of the flamboyant Chicago Seven defendants, arrived with pop singer Grace Slick. He claimed to be her bodyguard and said he was armed.

"I wouldn't let Miss Slick go in there alone," he said. "I understand they lose a President every three years. It's a dangerous place."

His hair still short — by hippie standards — from barbering at the Cook County (Ill.) Jail, Hoffman wore a conservative suit, white shirt and tie.

But after his altercation at the gate, he scooted across the street to a waiting car, stripping off his coat and tie.

Miss Slick, dressed in a leather jacket and boots, a purple midi-length skirt and a see-through black crocret top with no bra, dashed behind him.

Tricia, receiving her guests in the Gold Room, was unperturbed. She said Hoffman would have been welcome.

"Except, of course, he's not a Finch Alumna," she said. "If he had been, we would have been glad to have him."

Miss Slick, then known aas Grace Wing, spent the 1957-58 academic year at the exclusive girl's school in New York City.

She is presently a member of the Jefferson Airplane rock group.

BOLINAS-STINSON STRIFE

Most, Not All, Students Doing Well

complete covers for a book put out by the youngsters containing stories, poems, essays and a play on subjects ranging from an unsuccessful inventor to how the rhinoceros got his horn.

A group of youngsters worked to complete a poem on pollution, while a couple of boys prepared a chart to show how a ton of garbage could be recycled into useful materials.

A few students put finishing touches on a student newspaper which they had asked to publish. Other students worked intently to complete workbook assignments, while others sat in the sun reading books.

The children are planning a project to collect aluminum cans and stockpile them at the school until a plant to recycle the cans is completed in Hayward next year.

But, in the midst of all the activity, two boys sat in a bored fashion in the shade of a tree, then spent about 15 minutes throwing rocks at the side of a hill.

While most of the students (chiefly fourth, fifth and sixth graders) worked happily and enthusiastically, the two youngsters appeared completely disenchanted with all the projects. Although they appeared to be a distinct minority that day, the pair are part of an as-yet unsolved problem at Stinson Beach School — children who find the new, unstructured, self-directed learning situation unpalatable and have not been able to adjust.

William Niman, a teacher at the school, an intense, personable young man whose long hair has drawn the epithet of "hippie" from a few parents, watched the boys with concerned eyes.

"They are a problem we are worried about too," he observed. "It's true that a few students are having difficulty with this approach, but look at how many students are completely turned off by traditional school and eventually drop out . . .

"A student must be educated to this kind of learning; that is why it is so important that this system start in kindergarten before a youngster's natural spirit and desire to learn has been stifled."

He pointed out the new system has only been operative in the district for seven months and admitted: "we still have problems to work out."

Both Niman and the school's head teacher, Nancy Sullivan, an articulate motherly-looking woman, are enthusiastic about what is happening in Stinson and Bolinas schools, though aware of the problems. "There is more going on here than I have ever experienced on an elementary level," Mrs. Sullivan, an eight-year teaching veteran, said.

The teachers admitted they have not given any conventional tests to the students this year — a major bone of contention with some parents who say they do not know how their youngsters are doing.

"We know the kids so well, we don't need to," Mrs. Sullivan said. "You can tell if a child is learning if he is enthusiastic about his work, if he is reading more advanced books, performing more difficult tasks.

However, she agreed that teachers "probably should and probably will" give tests next year. "That way you can prove to the community that learning is taking place," she said.

Many parents in both communities are more than anxious to find out.

"Look at the kids," Mrs. Sullivan said pointing out the window where about 20 students were engrossed (on their own) in various individual projects. "Youngsters want to do — they don't like to just sit; papers and pencils and charts are not the only way to learn."

Both teachers stressed that basic subjects like reading and math are not being slighted in the new program. "The morning is fairly structured and we study reading, writing and math," Mrs. Sullivan said. "Parents have a right to expect results from their children's going to school," she said.

"An individualized program should provide a good education for all children," she contined, "but we can't expect even close to perfection the first year."

"But this is the direction we have to move in," Mrs. Sullivan said. "And this isn't just our view — most of the great educators of today are saying the same thing."

While Niman said most of the parents whose children attend Stinson are "delighted with what is happening," he admitted some are fearful and hostile. "But it takes time to orient the entire community to a great change like this."

"We are teaching our children for more than classes at Tamalpais High School — although we expect them to be well-prepared for those too'," Niman said. "We are teaching them how to teach themselves, how to learn and discipline themselves; we are teaching them for life."

He contentedly surveyed his charges. "This is what a school should be," he said happily.

Fairfax Councilman Ends 72-Hour Term; Plans Commissioner Quits

Robert R. Souza was reseated last night on the Fairfax City Council and Albert E. Gately stepped down from the seat he had occupied only 72 hours.

Criticism of the election system which had produced a 40-vote discrepancy between the election night tally and a recount Thursday, champagne for off-again-on-again Councilman Souza, and the resignation of a city planning commissioner marked the meeting.

Commissioner Leo T. Cronin of 12 San Gabriel Court submitted his oral resignation to the council.

He said he had been on the commission for six years, and been an outspoken proponent of the Fairfax master plan and the rezoning needed to bring it about.

With the results of the election, he said, he felt he could no longer put his "best foot forward."

Gately, chairman of the planning commission, had strongly supported the master plan and the need for planning in general during the campaign. Both Souza and Lee Nelder, also elected April 14, said during the campaign that they had reservations about the master plan.

Mayor Frank J. Egger asked Cronin to submit his resignation in writing.

Before leaving the council last night, Gately, in a short speech, again stressed the need for planning.

He said if a step-by-step program to solve Fairfax's street and drainage problems is not developed, the city will one day find itself faced with "castastrophic conditions."

He urged the council to give serious attention to planning, saying, "We owe it to the citizens now and to the generations that will follow us."

Gately then moved that his seat be declared vacant. The council agreed unanimously, Gately stepped down, and Souza was sworn back into the council seat he has held for six years.

Egger re-opened nominations for the positions of mayor and mayor pro tem to which he and Councilman Cornelis Van Vliet were elected Tuesday. They were reelected last night by unanimous votes, except for Van Vliet's vote against himself.

Saying "in behalf of the many people who believed in him and never for a minute doubted his right to the seat he has," Roberta Laidly of 34 Meadow Way then presented Souza with a red, white and blue ribboned bottle of champagne topped with a small American flag.

E. Ross Parkerson of 70 Manor Road criticized the competence of election officials.

In the election night tally, Gately, third in the race for three seats, had led Souza by three votes. The recount gave Souza a seven-vote margin over Gately.

At one precinct alone — precinct 2020 which voted at Central School — the recount showed Gately with 19 less votes than the original count, Souza with nine less, Nelder with five less, and James K. Hennington, who finished sixth in the field of seven, with two more votes.

Parkerson also mentioned that the cost of the recount, because it proved Souza a winner, must be borne by the city.

Van Vliet said that it was the county, not the city, that appointed the election officials.

City Administrator Frances Lestanguet said she had already talked with Peter C. Meyer, county elections officer, and "he was very concerned about it."

She said she had asked Meyer to dismiss the two poll workers at Central School.

Councilman Francis J. O'Connell said some type of election machine or a better training program for election workers is needed.

"The mistakes are practically built in," Nelder said, "It's the system that has to be changed." He commended the five women who served on the recount board.

Marin Misses Draft Quota: None Go At All

Marin County set a record of sorts this month when none of the 12 men ordered to report for armed services duty was inducted.

Joy Kinzer, executive secretary of the Marin Selective Service board, said it was the first time Marin has batted zero after ordering men to the Oakland Induction Center.

A Selective Service official in Sacramento said his records showed that 15 men were selected, but explained there may be some duplication.

Ben Wilson, public information officer for Selective Service in Sacramento, gave this tally from his figures: seven failed to report, two failed to cooperate, two refused induction, one walked out of the center, two were found to be unqualified and one whose status is uncertain.

The two who failed to cooperate, the pair who refused induction and the one who walked out may account for the discrepancy between the Marin and state figures, Wilson said.

Officials declined to reveal the identify of the 12.

The county draft quota for May is 39 but will be held to two men with lottery numbers under 145, Mrs. Kinzer said.

Also on the agenda is a request by Cal-Fong Investment Co. to construct a development in the Alto Bowl with a density of 5.4 dwelling units per acre when the city's general plan calls for a density of 3.

$110,000 Decree In Divorce Order

The wife of former San Rafael publicist Peter L. Goldstein has won an uncontested dissolution of their marriage in Marin Superior Court.

Vivian B. Goldstein was granted a $100,000 trust fund for herself and their two children in a property settlement. She is also to receive a $10,000 down payment on a house to be selected by her.

In 1968 Goldstein received a settlement of $361,995 for serious injuries sustained in a two-car accident on Highway 101 on Oct. 19, 1965.

Joint Session For Rohnert Park

Park development plans and the hiring of a full-time recreation director will be considered Monday at 7:30 p.m. at a joint meeting of the Rohnert Park City Council and recreation commission.

The landscape architectural firm of Ribera and Sue will present preliminary plans for park development. The possibility of providing funds for a full-time recreation director to replace part-time director Thomas West in July will also be considered.

West, a college student, would remain employed to direct activities at the swimming pools, City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan has said.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Handling Temper Tantrums Easy—Just Let Them Cry

A young child usually cries when he is angry. Let him get it out of his system, because if he is well fed, free from physical pain, and has not been agitated by someone, no harm is done. Now and then in the midst of violent crying, the tyke will suddenly stop breathing for 30 or more seconds.

Mother is likely to push the panic button, especially if his face turns blue, the extremities twitch, and the youngster loses consciousness. There is no need for concern because breathing begins spontanenously—as soon as the child can no longer hold his breath or passes out. The best remedy is to ignore the emotional outburst.

AS THE CHILD grows older, he expresses anger by sullenness or irritability. Temper tantrums also represent resentment and are often associated with frustration. These bouts occur when junior does not get his own way, is deprived of an object, or is asked to do something he does not want to do. Parents who are overly protective and too solicitous unwittingly encourage the outbursts.

Reasoning is futile and punishment rarely successful. The tantrum should be met with calm firmness and indifference. These attacks of screaming and kicking are prone to occur at the age of resistance (from 18 to 24 months of age). And, they are less likely to occur when the parents recognize this state and avoid situations that are likely to produce the reaction. The child who is ill or tired usually is irritable.

MORE THAN a year ago, President Johnson's special assistant for consumer affairs told women at a luncheon to "scream, shout, carry on, and complain" when they do not get what they pay for. There is a growing tendency for government to treat us like children, but this is the first time we have been told to throw a tantrum when we do not get what we want.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

RESTLESS LIMBS

J. A. writes: Please write about nervousness in the lower legs and what causes it. Is there a cure? I am a very calm person otherwise.

REPLY

You may be suffering from the restless limbs syndrome that develops in some people when the legs are immobile. In this disorder there may be an aching, crawling, or restless sensation in the lower extremities. Relief is obtained on movement. Distress is usually worse when abed at night or after sitting for a long time with the legs in a dependent position. Aspirin is an effective remedy.

BAREHEADED

A. L. writes: One cold day I asked five boys (none wearing hats) if they felt a chill and they all answered in the affirmative. Now, I ask you, is it healthy for boys (or the rest of us) to go bareheaded in winter?

REPLY

You neglected to ask these lads whether they were healthy or how often they got sick. Considerable body heat is lost thru the bare head, and I am sure they'd feel warmer if they wore a hat.

BUERGER'S DISEASE

H. A. writes: Is Buerger's disease the same as hardening of the arteries of the legs?

REPLY

There is considerable evidence that Buerger's is a form of early arteriosclerosis. But regardless of definition, both conditions impair circulation to the legs. Our leaflet on Buerger's disease can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

AREA GRAYNESS

Mr. M. writes: I'm 67 years old and do not have a gray hair on my scalp. But the beard I am cultivating is coming out gray. Why?

REPLY

Depigmentation of the hair follows various patterns. Some persons are gray all over whereas others are gray only in certain areas. Many whitehaired women, for example, have a dark streak at the nape of the neck.

SUPPLEMENTARY THYROID

M.G. writes: Why are thyroid tablets needed after a person's goiter is removed?

REPLY

Because the small part of the gland that remains does not supply enough thyroid secretion to make the body work efficiently.

SPONGING FOR FEVER

Mrs. R.P. writes: Should a child who has a fever, be sponged in cold water?

REPLY

Yes, but only if the temperature goes sky high.

Today's Health Hint — Donating blood is a safe and simple procedure.

Ross Open House

Ross School will hold its open house in connection with Public Schools Week from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. next Thursday, not on Tuesday as incorrectly listed recently in the Independent-Journal calandar of schools week events.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

In This Situation, Better To Receive Than Hand Out

When an opponent has a choice of finesses, it's only natural to hope that he picks the wrong one. If he picks the finesse that works, do you scowl and break an ash tray or two? Or do you smile a nd congratulate him on his skill and flair for the game? I don't recommend either course.

IN DUMMY

Declarer won the first trick in dummy with the king of hearts, and East signaled encouragement with the ten of hearts. South returned a club from dummy and played the king from his hand.

West took the ace of clubs and led a heart to dummy's ace. Now declarer stared at the dummy and wondered which black finesse to take.

If East had the king of spades, declarer could take the trump finesse and could later afford to lose one heart and one diamond in addition to the club already lost. If East had the jack of clubs, South could take a finesse with the ten of clubs and discard dummy's losing heart on the queen of clubs.

SENSES PROBLEM

As South stared at the dummy, West sensed declarer's problem. Naturally, West rooted for declarer to try the trump finesse. But South finally led a club and boldly put in the ten of clubs.

The rest was easy, and West warmly congratulated South for his winning decision. Very noble, wasn't it?

JUST A COVER

Not at all. West was covering up. If West had refused the first club trick he'd have been receiving congratulations instead of handing them out.

Suppose South wins the second trick with the king of clubs. He must get to dummy to lead another club. South's only chance is to lead a diamond, but West steps up with the ace of diamonds to lead another heart. And now South is doomed.

ANSWER: Pass.

The hand is not worth an opening bid in any position. You might open a substandard hand in third position to suggest a favorable opening lead or to show a strong suit, but you have no such reason with this hand.

Sidewalk Sale Plans Studied

Further plans for a two-day sidewalk sale June 5-6 have been discussed by the San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce board, according to office secretary Esther Squire.

Sales people will be wearing farm clothes to carry out the "Country Fair Days" theme, she said.

San Anselmo Avenue will be closed from Tamalpais Avenue to Tunstead Avenue from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. June 6. Music and entertainment will be transported up and down the street on a flat bed truck from 1 to 3 p.m.

Selling Out The Public In Name Of Postal Reform

President Nixon handed the Congress a rather remarkable package in what he calls the "Postal Reorganization and Salary Adjustment Act of 1970."

The bill (House Resolution 17070) came on the heels of the walkout of postal employees, which stirred the lawmakers and the administration to take some action about complaints over inadequate salaries which they had been ignoring for a long time.

But the "Postal Reorganization and Salary Adjustment Act of 1970" goes far beyond meeting the salary demands. It exceeds them. And it does a lot of other things.

IT PROPOSES to recast the postal service along new lines; to increase postage rates sharply, with the biggest bite put on the private citizen who sends letters and cards to friends and business firms. And it proposes to introduce into the government service for the first time the principle of compulsory unionism.

Although the package was presented to Congress by the President, and is being pushed as the solution to making the Post Office Department self-supporting by Postmaster General Winton M. Blount, apparently much of it was written at neither White House nor Post Office Department, but at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations.

ITS PROVISIONS (probably apart from the rate increases, which were changed somewhat after the outcry over the first proposal for a four-cent hike in the letter rate) came out of a conference of Blount with George Meany, AFL-CIO president.

When the conference agreement was announced at the White House, it dealt only with the pay raise. And when a reporter asked what else was included, he was told by John D. Ehrlichman, counsel to the President:

"These things were not announced here. They were announced over at the AFL-CIO as the number of terms of this settlement agreement."

Somewhat flabbergasted, the reporter asked: "The AFL-CIO is announcing what the government is doing?"

And Ehrlichman replied: "That is the place where the announcement was made."

IT WAS INDEED. And in making it, Meany said with pride that the agreement would permit collective bargaining on "all matters subject to collective bargaining in the private sector." He called this "a major breakthrough" for all government employees.

The bill specifies that postal workers may refrain from union activity "except to the extent that such right may be affected by an agreement requiring membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment."

This means that every postal worker would have to join a union. About one-third of them are not now union members.

This would mean also a sizeable increase in the $1.3 million per month union dues received from postal workers. Further, it would open the door for compulsory unionism for all government employees, federal, state, and local.

THE BILL also would put control of the Post Office Department under a postmaster general appointed by nine "commissioners of postal costs and revenues" appointed by the President. And to advise this commission, it would set up a 13-member advisory council of whom four "would represent major mail users."

This last should assure that future rate changes will follow the pattern set by the bill, which calls for an immediate two-cent hike for every letter, a whopping 18-cent increase in the basic charge for parcel post, but only a cent a pound increase for "controlled circulation" throwaways and only six cents a pound for bulk mailings of advertising matter.

IT WOULD BE FAR, far cheaper to give the postal workers the 12 per cent pay boost they asked in the first place, and forget the rest of the package.

As for the reorganization making the Post Office Department self-supporting by 1978, as Nixon and Blount claim it would, the indications seem quite the opposite. A Post Office Department with compulsory unionism on the one hand and a governing board heavily weighted with "junk mail" users on the other could scarcely be expected to accomplish such a result.

In the name of giving a merited pay raise to postal workers, Meany, Blount and Nixon seem willing to sell the American public down the river.

Hummingbirds

Hummingbirds seem supernatural, rather magical, elfin creatures. The iridescence of their feathers, their magnificent up and down, side to side, backward and forward maneuverability, their tireless wings so swift in motion they are a blur to the eye, the fact they live on flower nectar, and their tiny size—all together give the impression of other worlds, of fey spirits.

Our few year 'round hummingbirds are being joined by fellows who winter in Guatemala and points south. They play chicken with each other in front of the azaleas and early-blooming fuchsias.

Bright bits out of Nature's imagination.

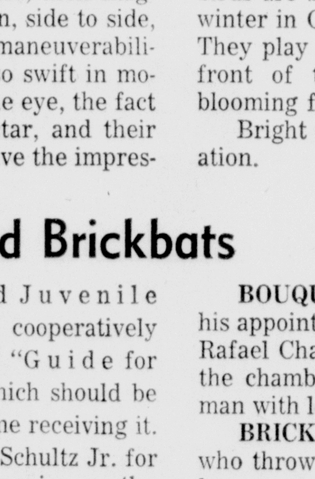
TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF



A kind and considerate doctor in Texas has come up with a way to extricate yourself from an automobile when you're caught in a sudden downpour. "Sometimes the doors get stuck at a time like this," the good doctor reminds us. "If that be the case, roll down the window. The water will pour in immediately. Wait until the compartment is full, take a deep breath—and swim out." Voila!

A tough old sergeant faced a new group of ill-assorted draftees with an anticipatory gleam in his eyes. "Remember, soldiers," he began, "this man's army is more democratic than it used to be. Today, no matter how distasteful an order to you may be, no matter how angrily I may bawl you out—you now have the right of every American citizen to have the last word."

The sergeant paused for a moment to let this unexpected bit of information make its impact. Then he added, "That last word is 'Yes, SIR.' "

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Infant's Death Deeply Disturbing

The details of the death of the Lampiris baby as given in the April 15 edition would bear serious thought by all those concerned about the future of our country. They were as follows:

1. The 5-month-old infant had been living for four days in a 6-by-6 tent with its parents and two other young men at a cold, windy campsight on the slopes of Mt. Tam.

2. The baby, when pronounced dead of asphyxiation at the hospital, was found to have several broken ribs and severe contusions on the face and body.

3. The baby had been released from a San Francisco hospital less than two weeks before, after having been treated for a broken rib and two black eyes. . .

4. The mother of the child, aged 17, claimed that the baby had been fine when she put him to bed in the tent the night of his death. She has no explanation for his death or injuries. . .

5. The two young parents had come to California from Wisconsin about two months prior to the baby's death and were living on welfare. They had been married only since last December.

Those infatuated with the cult of "hippyism," the new "morality," and the so-called welfare state will, I am sure, find an explanation for this incident that satisfies them. But what about the rest of us? Can we also ignore or explain away a social climate which spawns such completely amoral and utterly irresponsible young adults?. . .

. . . God help America if the trend continues! Isn't it about time those of us who are concerned get off our posteriors and demand an accounting. . .from every part of our society which seems to contribute in some way to it — laxness in law enforcement, maudlin and incompetent welfare officials, cold-blooded hospital authorities, schools which teach a great deal about individual human rights but little or nothing about the duties which accompany such rights or basic morality?. . .

Some Plain Words For Window Breaker

When I came into my shop this morning (April 20) and discovered my front window broken, needless to say my Irish was instantly called upon, plus when I found out my insurance didn't cover it and I would have to pay $350, my heart sank a little. That's a lot of money to a small business. Well anyway I want this letter published in the I-J because even though my financial spirits have greatly been dampened my fighting spirits haven't.

An open letter to the union goons or goon responsible for my plate glass display window being broken:

I would really like to know what type of a person are you. What do you look like? How do you dress? Are you a father? Do you go to church? Or do you even know right from wrong? Do you ever venture out during the daylight hours or just in the night to do your dirty work? Because I've got a few things to say to you.

First of all let me tell you that you creeps made your point. Second if I were a man I'd like to meet you in person and knock the hell out of you.

But most important let me tell you, people like you apes have been using these Nazi tactics for years and years and usually on the little guy, but if you think for one minute it will solve your problems, Buster I've got news for you!

Names In Editorial Draw Objection

"They nave no payed (sic) society twice."

In your editorial of April 17, regarding narcotic offenses and punishments, you presented public information, quite legally, however, far from the reality of the situation.

By printing the names of offenders you have contributed to the burden of these young persons who are searching for jobs or careers. Thus, you continue to reveal your poor relations to individuals and the family's (sic) for the sake of the mass, and the media, and I believe you are wrong.

Whereas, once such young people were assured that remaining in school and getting a diploma would secure a job, today's situation of "gaps" and such can only reveal to our youth that the use of a potentially "good," not to mention "powerful" media, is in fact failing the people. . .

LINES ON LIVING

Man, Not God, Is Dead As He Becomes Proxy

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

If the purpose of religion is to justify man to God and to "prepare the ways of the Lord and make straight His paths," then the purpose of psychology is to justify man to himself and prepare himself for those ways and straight paths. Religion, it has been wisely noted, deals with saving his soul, while psychology is preoccupied with saving his mind.

The dilemma of modern man, however, is not so much that life is a problem — man himself has become the problem. And the crisis of religion today is not that "God is dead," only that the image-God which we have hitherto worshipped is dead — the symbol is in a mess. Like life itself, we have compartmentalized, institutionalized and popularized God to a stifling formula. We have often buried Him, as we entomb life itself, under heaps of words and empty rites that bore us to death by their routine and rasping paganism. For how else can you explain the paradox that while life has become easier and more comfortable to live, it had become at the same time less durable and promising because for all our freedoms and our creative sciences, we are disjointed in our inner lives — enslaved to a computeriezd system in which the individual is just another zero in a dizzying numbers game?

WHAT IS HAPPENING, to contemporary man is not that life is less attractive than it used to be. On the contrary, it is far more exciting and exhilarating. Only that man himself has become a bore — to himself. He has luxury and abundance, but it's insipid and indigestible; he has more leisure time but spends it in an outer space, and not in the inner space of his own individual person, thus finding himself lost in orbit, weightless, soulless. He is forever preoccupied with public relations, craving to create an image for himself, instead of cultivating his private relations, toward creative imagination. Little wonder then that so many of our young "cop out" of a society which they consider to imprison the individual in institutionalized functions, rendering the whole person into a "type", a functionary, instead of a fully creative and unfolding individual!

The organization man in Lou Albee's description is a sad commentary on contemporary life. After being unemployed for nearly two years, with the exception of a few temporary jobs, the man said: "One good thing is that I have achieved a new identity. When people asked me to identify myself, I used to say that I was vice president of General Merchandise Co., and I though that was pretty important. Now I say I am John Smith."

JOHN SMITH, and many like him, living by proxy of his merchandising company, and apparently by proxy of his religious institution, has found most of his life jaded and listless. For he is living in a society that has institutionalized both man and God — dehumanizing his humanity and humanizing his God, to deadly proportions. In the process, he lost his identity until he became a mere shadow: a ghost of a man; and his God: a man's ghost.

Dubcek Socialism Continues To Be Dream Of Europeans

VIENNA — During a visit to this important listening post for all of eastern Europe, Frank Shakespeare, head of the United State Information Agency, summoned the chiefs of information from communist capitals. They came from Warsaw, Bucharest, Budapest, Sofia and Prague.

As the conference concluded Shakespeare put the following question to each of the USIA mission chiefs: If the people in the country where you're stationed could have a free choice of the form of society under which they would prefer to live, what would be their choice?"

WITHOUT EXCEPTION they replied, "Dubcek socialism." They were referring, of course, to the program of liberalization that Alexander Dubcek had undertaken to carry through in Czechoslovakia. Under the Dubcek program the essential features of a socialist economy would have been retained while press and public opinion would have been freed from dictatorial control.

Shakespeare, the hard-sell Madison Avenue success boy, is said to have suffered something resembling cultural shock from the unanimity of these replies. This couldn't be. What about private enterprise? Capitalism? And, if this was the end result, what was the value of American propaganda over the years?

As the Russian invasion of Prague proved in August of 1968, Dubcek's dream was an impossible dream. He was swept away by the ruthless force of Russian tanks and troops. The former first secretary of the Czech Communist Party is, in effect, in exile as Czech ambassador to Turkey.

Yet the specialists on Eastern Europe here in Vienna are in accord that the Dubcek dream has a powerful appeal.

A REALIST in these matters is Bruno Kreisky, the tough-minded leader of the Austrian Social Democrats, who has just had the audacity to form a minority socialist government. He was approached in May, 1968, by a Dubcek envoy from Prague, "You will never succeed," Kreisky said to the envoy. "The Russians will never allow you to liberalize, even though you retain the elements of a socialist economy."

Three months later Kreisky's prophecy was proved all too correct. The response here throughout virtually the entire political spectrum, including even some leaders of the Austrian Communist Party, was one of indignation.

Moscow entered a formal protest over the attacks in press, radio and television. The Russians resisted holding the second round of the strategic arms limitation talks in Vienna. It took a great deal of persuasion on the part of Gerard C. Smith, chief American delegate, to have the current session convened in the Austrian capital.

IN AUSTRIA, where the Marshall Plan really worked and where there is a continuing sense of the contribution of American aid in restoring the economy, the degree of anti-American feeling is probably less than in any other European country.

While it is most unlikely that the Russians would try to use force in neutral Austria, in that event Kreisky is convinced that the response would be a total nationwide strike, paralyzing every facility and bringing a halt to all forms of transportation. This would present an occupying force with great difficulties.

ART BUCHWALD

It's Great To Have An Expert On What We're Doing In Asia

WASHINGTON — There's this fellow at the National Press Club bar and he's always briefing me on what is going on in Southeast Asia.

"Did you hear that President Nixon is going to pull 150,000 more Americans out of Vietnam?"

"That's good," I said.

"Well it's not exactly good," the fellow replied, "because he didn't indicate when he was going to do it. He did say it would be within the next year."

"That's not bad."

"IT COULD BE BAD for the Democrats."

"How's that?"

"He might pull out 50 soldiers now and 149,950 just before the elections in November."

"I see," I said.

"No you don't. Although the President said he would pull out the 150,000 troops within the next year, he also said he would be influenced by what happened in Cambodia and Laos."

"That's good." I said.

"IT COULD BE BAD. If the war spreads into Cambodia and Laos, we might be obligated to stay out there."

"I should hope so. Hey, why are the Cambodians killing the Vietnamese civilians?"

"Because they hate them."

"But doesn't that make it very embarrassing for us, since Cambodia is asking for U.S. military aid?"

"It doesn't help."

"I would think if we gave Cambodia military aid and they used it to kill Vietnamese civilians, the South Vietnamese wouldn't be too happy about it."

"THEY AREN'T dancing in the streets of Saigon. But killing civilians is the price you have to pay for freedom in Southeast Asia."

"What can the Americans do to stop the Cambodians from killing the civilians?"

"The best thing we can do is bomb the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos."

"I was going to ask you about Laos. What the hell are we doing there?"

"We weren't doing anything until Senator Symington's committee shot off their big mouths. Our story now is we're preventing the Viet Cong from using Laos to get the upper hand in Cambodia."

"That's good."

"THE ONLY TROUBLE is that the Royal Laotian Army is not very well trained at the moment and so we have to use Meo tribesmen as mercenaries."

"That's interesting. If the Meo tribesmen fight for Laos, won't the other Laotians be miffed?"

"Not if it helps South Vietnam."

"I almost forgot about South Vietnam."

"YOU SEE, things are much brighter now that the South Vietnamese can knock out the Communists' staging areas in Cambodia, which until recently were off limits to them."

"That's good."

"It's good only if Pnom Penh doesn't fall."

"Pnom Penh?"

"That's the capital of Cambodia."

"What's to prevent Pnom Penh from falling?"

The man seemed disgusted with my ignorance. "Two Royal Army battalions from Thailand, stupid."

Schultz Should Be Restored To Post

Tuesday was indeed a sad day in the political life of Marin County. An outstanding public servant was unceremoniously replaced on the Marin County Planning Commission. No legitimate reason for his replacement could possible be found.

The behind-the-scenes efforts of a few hard-core, selfish, single-purpose individuals were apparently successful in applying sufficient political pressure to force the removal of Mr. Niels Schultz Jr.

With 14 years of unselfish, devoted service in helping to keep Marin a lovely place in which to live, Niels Schultz has gained the respect of all concerned Marinites. Perhaps those few individuals who caused his removal could not control his vote. There can be no other legitimate reason for the pressures they must have exerted on an elected public official . . . .

Marin County cannot afford to lose the services of this dedicated man. The vast majority of Marinites cannot be cheated by the political mania of a few. For the good of all Marin, the board of supervisors can and should find a way to reappoint Mr. Schultz to the planning commission. I have confidence that they, in their wisdom, will do so post haste.

California Water Plan Faces Environment Challenge

By JACK V. FOX
U.P. International

The nation's sudden environmental awareness is setting up a historic confrontation in California where the world's vastest water project is threatened on grounds it will attract millions more people and turn the state's southern section into one giant smog-ridden Los Angeles.

The idea of abandoning the $3 billion California Water Project at this late date, with 90 per cent complete or under construction, appears at first glance preposterous. The chances are it will never happen.

But it is coming under growing attack from articulate politicians and conservationist groups who are chewing away at certain sections of the giant water transport scheme and hitting the whole concept with the argument that the present rate of growth is dangerous and that southern California needs Air, not water.

The project is describable only in superlatives.

It eventually would bring enough water 700 miles from the northern Sierra Nevada to central and Southern California each year to cover the state of Rhode Island to a depth of six feet.

One concrete aqueduct will be 444 miles long. This man-made "river" is 200 feet wide, 35 feet deep and stretches a greater distance than the Rhine.

The key Oroville Dam, already in operation is the world's highest earthfill dam at 770 feet and has a mass 10 times greater than Egypt's six biggest pyramids. The pumping stations which will lift 110 million gallons an hour 1,926 feet over the Tehachapi Mountains is hailed as one of the world's engineering marvels.

Authorized by the legislature 10 years ago and approved by popular vote that same year with a go-ahead for floating huge bond issues, the complex is now two-thirds operational although the Southern California leg taking more than half the flow will not be open until 1971.

Thirty-one water agencies have signed contracts and some have already paid the state $120 million in anticipation of water supplies. Bonds totalling $1 billion have been marketed with a built-in pledge of amortization through revenue from the customers.

A U.S. Supreme Court decision in 1963 sharply reduced the amount of water that Southern California, and particularly Los Angeles, has been receiving from the Colorado River on the Arizona border 300 miles away. That supply is expected to be cut in half by the middle 1970s.

Projections are that southern California's population will jump from its 11.3 million to 14.6 million in 1980, 17.5 million in 1990 and 20.5 million by the year 2,000.

Seventy per cent of California's water is in the north. Seventy per cent of the people are in the south.

The project enthusiasts say it will make the desert bloom, create vast new agricultural fields, furnish water for new cities to lessen the concentration in Los Angeles.

Abandonment or sharp curtailment of the project now would have "catastrophic consequences," they say. Gov. Ronald Reagan has pledged that his administration will "do all in its power to see that the California Water Project is completed on schedule."

The opponents concede the consequences of a shutdown would be extreme. But they argue that completion of the Southern California section — which will take by 1980 a total of 2.497 million of the overall flow of 4.230 million acre feet —should be delayed pending a study of overall environmental effects.

Their prime argument is that the area, smog-ridden, crowded, choked with automobiles, its land rapidly disappearing in cookie cutter rows of tract housing developments, needs more people about as much as India.

SEN. JOHN NEJEDLY

They also contend the planners have not furnished protection against the ecological damage that could result in northern California, particularly in the vast Delta at the confluence of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers and the increased pollution in the San ing the major flow of the two rivers southward.

The champion of the anti-project forces is a 45-year-old congressman named Jerome Waldie, a Democrat from a Francisco Bay area by divert- northern district who was once majority leader in the state assembly. Waldie is an aggressive lawmaker as marked by his attempt this session of Congress to unseat 78-year-old House Speaker John McCormack on grounds he was too old for the post.

Waldie recently invaded the stronghold of the enemy, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and the Metropolitan Water District, and spoke some words which left many sputtering and challenging his motives.

"What is the resource that Los Angeles really needs most?" Waldie asked. "Is it really water? Or is it air? It is obvious that it is air."

"I don't believe there is anything good about this megapolis increasing its growth. Surely, if you don't have enough air now, what is the sense in bringing in water to attract more people?

"I don't believe the average resident is hung up on the delights of seeing new subdivisions in the desert when he drives to work."

Centering in on the effects of cutting down the flow to the Golden Gate of the two great rivers is State Sen. John A. Nejedly who comes from the same district as Waldie and who says frankly that if he had his way he would have California say to the people of the rest of the states:

"We don't want you! It's a free country but we don't want you."

Nejedly says the project presupposes the promise that there has to be population growth in California.

"It is a continuation of the mood of the 1930s and 1940s that any project anyone conceived of was desirable," Nejedly says. "Build for the sake of building. Man is a better planner than God. Take water from here and put it there and don't take into account that we do not have an inexhaustible supply of environment."

Another opponent is the 90,000-member, prestigious Sierra Club which has called for a halt on the project pending reevaluation of the plan which it says was "narrowly conceived and unresponsive to the new goals and values society is fast adopting to insure its own survival."

Says Sierra President Phillip Berry:

"One Los Angeles is enough for the world. To build people in concentrations like that and to carve up open space like that is flatly immoral.

"Figuratively speaking, there are men down there at the other end of the pipeline with bags of cement. There is still a lot of open space to build on in Southern California. They'll build on it and one third will be concrete streets and highways."

The prime job of defending what up until last year had seemed to be a program going smoothly and accepted as a boon to the nation's biggest state has gone to William R. Gianelli, director of the California Department of Water Resources.

Gianelli's hair would stand on end were it not so closely cropped at accusations that his department, which planned, supervised and will operate the water project, did not take into account as one of its priorities how it would affect and enhance the total environment.

Gianelli says the real trouble is that Northern and Southern California are divided in attitudes until there is a "Mason-Dixon line" across the state on the "gut issue" of water.

"Every time mention is made of using surplus floodwaters in Northern California for any other portions of this state, the hue and cry goes up about the Rape of the North," he says.

"I have yet to hear a hue and cry from Southern California about the Rape of Long Beach when a Northern Californian sends his child to schools that are being financed by the tideland oil funds from the south.

"Have we fogotten what the word neighbor means? IF so, then perhaps we had better draw a real line across the state right now and let northern California flood itself out of economic existence rather than offer a drop of water to Southern California.

"Don't ever get so swept off your feet by this movement to protect or enhance our environment that you forget people are environment, too. One man's environment may be an air-conditioned room, a sirloin steak and a Brooks Brothers suit. Another man's environment may be the wide open spaces, a brace of birds and blue jeans.

"Every man has his individual right to the environment he prefers and nobody —no government —can take that right away from him or tell him where to live and how to do it."

Kerry Mulligan, appointed by Reagan as chairman of the State Water Resources Quality Control Agency, agrees.

"Unless we are going to start playing God, I don't see how we can tell people where they are to live," Mulligan says.

The anti-project forces have zeroed in on specific objectives. One is to turn down the proposed 43-mile "Peripheral Canal" which would channel water directly from the Sacramento River around the Delta area to the site of pumps sending it southward.

It is a highly complex and untested undertaking, involving questions of salinity, danger to fish and other wildlife, regulating the flow of water so it does not erode levees, maintaining sufficient flow of water to wash out the sewage from the San Francisco area.

. . . water project?

Gianelli says the canal is the best means of insuring the ecology of the Delta. It would provide nine outlets from the canal into the picturesque net of 50 islands below sea level which in some respects resemble the Florida Everglades.

Gianelli contends that Waldie's real motive is to get a "free ride" from the river waters instead of forcing industry and municipal polluters to clean up their mess.

Waldie contends that since the Water Resources Department has contracted to sell its water to customers in the south, the Delta and the San Francisco area will be the first to have the tap shut off when shortages develop. Gianelli replies that the project is restricted by statute to send only surplus water to southern users.

The "antis" have already won a significant battle by persuading Reagan to postpone building of another dam complex on the Eel River on the rugged northern coastal area of the state which had been part of the overall plan.

A crunch will come June 2 when voters are called upon to approve Proposition 7 authorizing the state to increase the interest ceiling on its bonds from the present 5 per cent to 7 per cent and even above that — with legislature approval —to sell them on national money markets.

If Proposition 7 is voted down, the water project backers warn, the money will have to be found elsewhere and it may be necessary to raise California's sales tax from 5 to 7 cents. Any defaulting on bonds would do irreparable harm to California's hitherto excellent credit rating.

It is a highly emotional issue. Says Waldie:

"There are two tragic signals warning the nation of the results of our battle with nature —the death of Lake Erie and the almost complete contamination of the air of the Los Angeles basin."

Doyle F. Boen, president of the California Water Resources Association, says proposals to halt the project amount to "killer conservation."

"We hear too much of this kind of double talk and loose criticism based on the faulty reasoning that old values must be changed," he says. "It is one thing to demand abolishment of smog or water pollution; quite another to tamper with vital water supplies for people."

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York may have phrased it best.

"Behind the complex predictions and obscure language, beyond words like ecology, environment and pollution there is a simple question: Do you want to live or die?"

The mayor was addressing a New York crowd on Earth Day — a day set aside by Americans to consider the problems of global environment threatened by pollution.

All over America Wednesday people marched, gathered and demonstrated for a cleaner earth unifying to a degree such ordinary diverse elements as conservatives and militants housewifes and hippies, businessmen and professionals.

There was a "dead orange parade" in Miami, a "survival march" in California, a "festival of death" in Boston and, at Southeast Missouri State University, a mock funeral to "symbolically bury the earth under a pile of trash."

In New York City a long-haired man held up a handful of evil-smelling fish and said, "This is what pollution does to fish. It's fish today, people tomorrow."

Ohio University students pasted stickers saying "this is a polluter" on cars in Athens, Ohio, while in Omaha, Neb., there was a run on gas masks because students wanted them to protest dirty air.

Inevitably there was some rowdyism. Radical students stormed the stage where Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken was speaking at Michigan State University. State police moved him to safety.

Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Henry Jackson, D-Wash., underwent heckling during speeches at Yale University and Seattle.

But generally participation in the day's activities was enthusiastic despite opposition by some radical groups that termed them a distraction from larger and more immediate issues.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

SAIGON — A total of 14 American aircraft were reported shot down in two days by Communist gunners over South Vietnam and Laos. Military sources said South Vietnamese soldiers had been stationed on Cambodian soil near the border to bolster outnumbered Cambodian units facing Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon ordered an end to any more occupational deferments from the draft and halted deferments for fathers except in extreme hardship cases. Nixon also asked Congress to open the way for him to stop all future student deferments.

TRINIDAD — Troops loyal to the government fought to suppress a mutiny inspired by black power elements. By Friday rebels said they were in full control of an arsenal and were holding several loyalist officers hostage pending the outcome of negotiations with the government.

BOGOTA — Former Colombian Dictator Gustavo Rojas Pinilla called for a revolution following his defeat for the presidency by the government candidate Misael Pastrana Borrero. But the country appeared to be returning to normalcy under the watchful eye of police enforcing a dush-to-dawn curfew.

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. — Television entertainer Herb Shriner and his wife were killed when their car went off a Florida highway and slammed into a tree.

LATIN KIDNAP FAD

Revolutionaries' Ploy Turns Deadly

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shortly after C. Burke Elbrick, the United States ambassador to Brazil was released by leftist kidnapers in exchange for 15 political prisoners last September, he said of political abductions:

"It's something you can expect to spread in the same way plane hijackings have spread."

The months since then have shown Elbrick knew exactly what he was talking about. Six diplomats have been kidnaped since then in Latin American countries. Three of the victims have been Americans, one Japanese, one Paraguayan, and one West German, one was the Guatemalan foreign minister kidnaped in his own country.

The recent rash of kidnapings was started in Rio DeJaneiro Sept. 4, when four gunmen ambushed Elbrick's limousine and drove off with the 61-year-old ambassador in a station wagon. The kidnapers left behind a manifesto saying Elbrick was "the symbol of exploitation" and announced he would be executed if the government did not release 15 political prisoners within the next 48 hours.

The 15 prisoners were allowed safe passage to Mexico, where most said they would continue their travels to Cuba, and Elbrick was released.

Kidnapers struck again at the height of the Guatemalan presidential election campaign, when four young men with machine guns pulled Foreign Minister Alberto Fuentes-Mohr from his car on Feb. 27. The government agreed to turn an imprisoned leftist student over to the Mexican Embassy for safe passage out of the country, and Fuentes was released unharmed.

A week later, on March 6, six gunmen of the Rebel Armed Forces — the same group that was responsible for the kidnaping of Fuentes— blocked a road through the southern section of Guatemala City and intercepted the United States labor attache, Sean M. Holly. Holly was freed after the government released three prisoners.

Leftists in Brazil took the limelight again March 11, when five kidnapers—four of them armed with machine guns—pulled the Japanese consul-general from his car in Sao Paulo, just a block from his home, and took him away in his car. The government agreed to release five prisoners, and the diplomat, Nobuo Okuchi, was freed.

March 26, leftist kidnapers freed the U. S. air attache in the Dominican Republic, Lt. Col. Donald J. Crowley, after holding him in captivity for two days. The government in Santo Domingo had to agree to release 19 prisoners in order to guarantee the safety of the American.

Kidnapers in Argentina have not fared so well. Waldemar Sanchez, a Paraguayan consul in Buenos Aires to meet Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner, was captured March 24 by kidnapers who posed as potential buyers interested in a car the embassy was offering for sale.

They demanded two prisoners in exchange for his freedom, but the Argentine government refused, saying one of those demanded was not in custody and the other did not want to be freed. The kidnapers charged that the missing prisoner was either dead or so badly tortured that the government could not free him, but they released the Paraguayan anyway, "for humanitarian reasons."

Police clame rightists for the attempted kidnaping of a Russian diplomat in Buenos Aires March 29. An alert police guard fired nine bullets into the fleeing escape car, preventing four men from abducting Yuri Pivovorov, the 40-year-old assistant chief of the Soviet Embassy's commercial office.

March 31, kidnapers struck again in Guatemala, snatching West German ambassador Count Karl Von Spreti. Officials expected the kidnapers to demand the release of five members of the terrorist Rebel Armed Forces in exchange for Von Spreti's freedom.

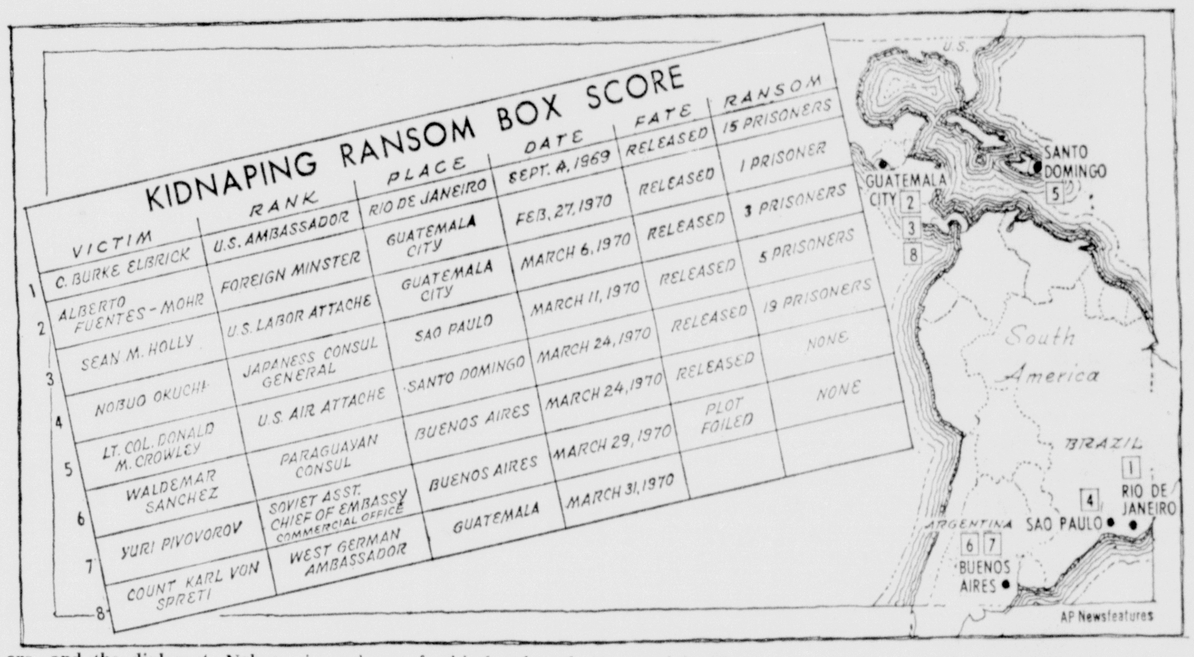
But the body of the diplomat was found April 5, a bullet in his head. That same day, four gunmen tried to kidnap U. S. counsul Curtis Cutte in Porto Alegre, Brazil, but Cutter escaped after being shot in a wild street fight.

Some American diplomats in Latin America have said they feel the United States should publicize a policy of "no ransom" in order to stop the trend.

"It's high time we let the extremists know their political blackmail will not work and that we told our host governments there is to be no ransom," an American diplomat in La Paz, Bolivia said recently.

But another diplomat in Lima, Peru, said: "We'd probably lose a couple of guys dead and buried before we convinced anyone we really meant no more ransom."

Defying the demands of political kidnapers has more than a slight risk. In 1968, the U. S. ambassador to Guatemala, John Gordon Mein, was slain in a barrage of machine gun fire as he tried to flee from would-be kidnapers.



VOTER'S MOOD CAREFULLY WATCHED

Next British Election May Come As Early As June, Or October

By YORKE HENDERSON
(London Express News Service)

LONDON—Before next spring Britain must choose another government. It is then that the present Socialist administration's five-year term of office ends.

All the betting here is that the general election will be held much sooner than that. October is the favored date, although the odds on June are shortening.

October is traditionally a good month for an incumbent British government. The voters are relaxed after their summer holidays, and less likely to want a change of administration just for the hell of it; the weather is likely to be good (another contribution to popular placidity); the financial budget which could increase the voters' tax burden or frustrate their hope of concessions lies half a year in the future.

June is being touted because the Socialist administration's fortunes are better now than they've been for a long time; the relatively healthy balance of payments can be used as evidence of Socialist good government - an advantage which could be swept away by industrial wage demands before the fall; and the opinion polls of late have shown a shortening of the Conservatives' popularity lead.

If the results of local government elections about to be held confirm a growth in Socialist popularity, then Prime Minister Harold Wilson may well decide to take his chances on a June election.

In case he does, it's as well to know now what the British general election is about, how it works and what the main issues will be.

First, the purpose of a general election: Simply, it is to choose a national government for the ensuing five years.

Next, how it works: This is simple, too. The British have only one elected house — the House of Commons. True, Parliament consists of two houses; but the second - what the commons traditionally refer to as "another place", like Victorians talking about a lavatory - is the House of Lords whose members are either hereditary aristocrats or non-hereditary "life peers" appointed by the government of the day. In political terms, the House of Lords is all but impotent.

All legislation goes through the Lords, but the most they can do is delay its implementation for a very limited period.

The Commons is the power house of British politics, and the political party which gets most members (M.P.) into it forms the government. That party needn't even have an overall majority. Theoretically it could be outnumbered by the opposing parties together.

In fact few British prime ministers would choose to govern without an overall majority. To do so would mean putting an absurdely disproportionate influence in the hands of some small unrepresentative party which by sheer chance controlled the balance of power.

There are two major parties in Britain, Conservative and Labor (or Socialist). It is a mistake to draw parallels between them and America's two parties, for no other reason than that both are further to the left, by U. S. standards than, say, the liberal wing of the Democratic Party. The Conservatives, for instance, accept as a fact of life the state-ownership of the power industries, the railroads and the principal domestic and international airlines (BEA and BOAC).

The Liberal Party, once dominant in British politics is a very poor third. At present it has only 13 of the 630 members in the House of Commons.

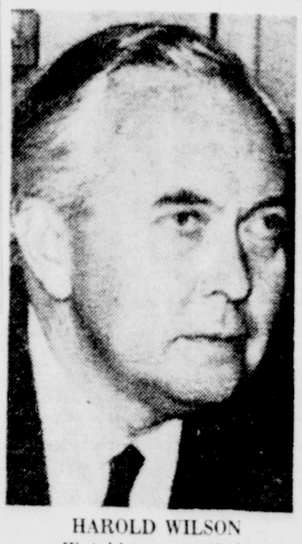
The Communists haven't had a man in the House of Commons for many years and show no signs of staging a comeback. (A conservative American, it must be said though, might experience some difficulty in distinguishing between Communists and some elements of the far left in the Labor Party).

Nationalists, both Welsh and Scots, have managed to get a member each into the Commons, but despite fears to the contrary, they've turned out to be the thick end of the wedge.

Effectively, then a British general election, like an American presidential one, is a two party affair—Conservatives versus Socialists.

But the British have much less say than the American in choosing their chief executive. The successful party does that when it elects its leader. For instance, the prime minister who emerges from the coming general election will be either the present tenant of 10 Downing Street, Harold Wilson, or Edward Heath, who as well as leading the Conservative party is also Leader of the Opposition, an official and salaried post in Britain.

Behind The News



HAROLD WILSON
Watching vote winds

Voting is a straightforward business. The country is divided into constituencies based very roughly on area and population. Each constituency returns one member to the Commons. All the voter has to do is choose the man he prefers from the individual candidates put up by each party in his constituency. In a great many constituencies the choice is limited — Conservative or Socialist.

Crank candidates are discouraged by the requirement of a $600 deposit which is forfeited if the candidate doesn't receive at least an eighth of the votes cast.

Unexpected Slugging Keeps Giants Afloat

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some unexpected slugging has kept his San Francisco Giants buoyant in the National League western division. Today will determine whether the perennial second-place club receives a much-needed pitching boost.

Manager Clyde King sent ace right-hander Juan Marichal to the mound against the Montrael Expos, hopeful the ailing star would resume his winning ways. He was sidelined since the start of the season with an allergic reaction to penicillin.

Gaylord Perry, 2-2, allowed only three runs Friday night, but the Giants needed 10 runs in their last two at bats for a 12-3 romp over the Expos.

"If I can get six good innings from Juan, I'll be satisfied," says King. "I don't think he'll be able to go nine, but we'll see." Marichal faced a club the Giants have beaten 12 times in 13 games.

DIETZ STARS

Catcher Dick Dietz wielded a hot bat Friday night, driving in five runs on a four-for-four performance that boosted his batting average to a hefty .447. The output included Dietz' fifth home run in a seventh-inning rally that saw six runs.

Perry, who allowed seven hits, entered the bottom of the seventh in a 2-2 tie. But he started the winning rally with a one-out double off reliever Dan McGinn, 0-1.

Bobby Bonds walked on four pitches and Ron Hunt walloped his second homer of the season on his 36th at bat. Hunt collected only three homers in 478 trips to the place last season.

Willie Mays' walk and Ken Henderson's single prefaced Dietz' three-run homer.

Perry's single triggered the four-run ninth off Carroll Sembera. Three runs scored on wild pitches, while Bonds and Willie Mays belted doubles.

BIG HITTERS

The Giants' 11-hit attack left five regulars with averages above .300. Dietz heads the list, followed by Henderson (.438), Hunt (.361), rookie Alan Gallagher (.323) and Bonds (.317).

Those five have picked up the slack for National League MVP Willie McCovey, slumping at .176, and Mays, who was hitless in 15 trips prior to his double. Gallagher is 0-for-18.

"The encouraging thing," says King, "is that we're not depending on just a couple of guys. When Marichal hits his stride and McCovey starts hitting, we'll be all right."

Lightfingered Latecomers Pace Knicks Over Lakers

NEW YORK (AP) — The hot hand belonged to Los Angeles' Jerry West, the cold shoulder to New York's Willis Reed . . . until a pair of lightfingered latecomers eased the pressure off the Knickerbockers' backs and dropped it back into the Lakers' laps.

Cazzie Russell and Walt Frazier, who had squirmed on the bench as New York blew a 20-point lead to the West-led Lakers, ignited a fourth quarter rcounter-attack that gave the Knicks a 124-112 victory in the opener of the National Basketball Association's championship playoff series Friday night.

Reed poured in 37 points, despite a first-half shoulder injury, as the Knicks got the jump in the best-of-7 set, which resumes Monday night at Madison Square Garden. Super-sub Mike Riordan, picking up the slack when Frazier got into foul trouble, added 19.

But it was Russell and Frazier, held to a combined total of two points through the first 39½ minutes, who turned the tide after West scored 16 of his 33 points in a third quarter spurt that sent the Lakers, trailing 50-30 at one point, to a 98-95 edge early in the final session.

"The Man Upstairs just seems to be on my side," said Russell, who followed Frazier's first field goal since the opening quarter with his first basket of the game, putting the Knicks

Traditionalist Feeney Breaks A Tradition

Chub Feeney is a traditionalist and conservative. His Ivy League background (Dartmouth) cultivated his conservatism, which is as much a part of him as his shadow. He couldn't shed his conservatism any more than he could shake his shadow on a sunny day.

Still, Feeney is a realist. There was ample evidence of his realism on many occasions when he was vice president of the Giants. Sometimes realistic situations put a strain on a conservative's defense of tradition.

In the four months he has been president of the National League, Feeney has demonstrated both realistic and conservative approaches to problems.

Feeney realistically sanctioned a souped up baseball in the National League to put more action in the game even though his conservative nature had to tell him the game was perfect as it was.

Won't Admit It's A Rabbit Ball

Neither the baseball commissioner nor Feeney has admitted a jackrabbit ball already has been used this season in at least several games that developed into sensational slugfests, featuring tape measure home runs and grand slams by batters who never previously hit a slammer.

Perhaps Bowie Kuhn, the commissioner, Feeney and Joe Cronin, president of the American League, feel that such an admission would cause old timers to scoff. Maybe it would. But old timers already know that something is going on.

More importantly, from the viewpoint of baseball's brass, the occasional baseball fan is coming out to see just what is going on. It's true that it was Bat Day last Sunday in Crosley Field but that alone couldn't account for the crowd that turned out, 31,569, largest Crosley Field gathering since 1966.

One Reason For Big Turnout

Feeney's realistic approval of the jackrabbit ball must be given some credit for the Crosley Field turnout.

Now, here is an example of his conservatism that makes him a strict constructionist of baseball's official rules. For years, due to his long practical experience in baseball, plus a lawyer's degree he picked up at Fordham after graduation from Dartmouth, Feeney was a member of the rules committee.

The rules say that umpires should call a balk on a pitcher who, while his pivot foot touches the pitching rubber, fails to step directly toward first base before making a pickoff attempt of a runner.

For years umpires have been permitting pitchers to make halfsteps—midway between first base and home plate. Umpires even have given veteran pitchers the benefit of the doubt when their step winds up on the home plate side of an imaginary line between home and first.

That's out this season. National League umpires called a dozen balks in the first two weeks of 1970 campaign. They wouldn't have done that unless Feeney ordered a strict interpretation of the rules.

Redwood Rallies To Retain Lead

The Redwood High School Giants gave away five runs in the first inning yesterday and then unloaded four home runs to defeat Drake, 9-6 at Larkspur and remain undefeated atop the Marin County Athletic League.

Second place San Marin Mustangs and Terra Linda Trojans both won to stay half game off the pace. The Mustangs downed San Rafael, 8-3, and the Trojans shutout Tamalpais 7-0, behind the two hit pitching of Dave Stone.

Marin Catholic won its second straight game after losing its first four of the season, 6-5 over Novato.

GIANT HOMERS

Fourth inning homes by Jerry Piro and Tom Wickert broke the game open for Redwood, now 6 and 0 in league play. Pete Cooney and John Boro clouted homers earlier as the Giants played catchup ball after allowing five runs in the first inning, when they used three pitchers.

At Novato, hot hitting third baseman Ken Gnoss hit a two-run homer in the first inning and doubled to start a three-run rally in the third as host San Marin defeated San Rafael. He is now hitting .522 with three home runs and 13 runs batted in through six games.

All the runs off winning pitcher Steve Francis were unearned. At Terra Linda, Bob Daniele tripled with the bases loaded in the second inning to give Stone all the runs he needed as Terra Linda knocked over Tam. Catcher Rick Payne got on via an error, Stone singled and Bill Barry walked to set the stage for Daniele's blast to center. Stone struck out nine and allowed only two singes.

WINNING RALLY

At Kentfield, host Marin Catholic came up with five runs in the bottom of the sixth to edge Novato, scoring on a two run hit by Mike Parnow, run producing singles by Steve Sherry and Bill Donnellan, and Larry Piatti's ground ball to score Mike O'Brien with the winning run.

Novato almost pulled it out in the last inning when Dave Judnick belted a three run homer to pull the Hornets to within a run.

MARIN PREP TRACK AND FIELD

San Rafael Captures The Big Meet

San Rafael High School all but locked up the Marin County Athletic League track and field championship yesterday with a 75-52 victory over the Tamalpais Indians at San Rafael.

The undefeated bulldogs were led by triple winner Bob Peterson, who ran the 100 yard dash in 10 seconds flat, the best time of the season in the league. He also took the 220 and the long jump.

Tam's Vian Collier bettered the Marin County season's best time in the mile with a 4:28 his fastest clocking ever.

The Indians, undefeated until yesterday, were thought by most to be the only challenge for San Rafael, which is now 5 and 0, with two meets remaining.

In the freshman class, where both teams had been unbeaten, Tam won, 64 - 49.

Marin Catholic pulled a mild upset with a 76 - 55 win over Drake. Mark Lewis won the low hurdles and the high jump for the Wildcats, while Joe Tierney took the 100 and 200 for Drake.

MONZA, Italy (AP)—Mexican Pedro Rodriguez and Leo Kinnunen of Finland, in a Gulf-Porsche sports car, won the 1,000-kilometer Monza auto race today. The event counts toward the world championship for prototypes and sports car manufacturers.

The Mexican and the Finn led the 621-mile race for the last 298 miles, bearing off the strong challenge of three Italian Ferrari 521-s cars

The victory strengthened Porsche's lead in the world maker standings.

The winning Porsche, entered by J. W. Automotive Engineering Ltd., covered the 174 laps in four hours, 18 minutes, 1.7 seconds for an average of 144.4 miles per hour.

The second place Ferrari was clocked in 4:19:27.6.

The official Ferrari 512-s driven by the Italian team of Ignazio Giunti and Nino Vaccarella placed second, more than one minute behind. Two other official Ferrari 512-s entries placed third and fourth. Third was the team of John Surtees of Britain and Peter Schetty of Switzerland. Chris Amon of New Zealand and Italian Arturo Merzario were fourth.

Frank Beard's Remarkable Round

By BOB GREEN

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Frank Beard had just fired an eight-under-par 64, including a string of six consecutive birdies, but refused to be jarred out of his conservative, easy-going role.

"You know me," he said, "I never have anything to say." Beard's remarkable round — he needed only 24 putts—put him into the second round lead in the $150,000 Tournament of Champions Friday.

Was he thinking about the all-time PGA record of eight consecutive birdies when he had his string going?

"No, not really. You just hit it and go find it and hit it again."

Was it his best putting round?

"I don't know. I don't keep records on that sort of thing so I really don't know."

Has he ever had six birdies in a row?

'DON'T KNOW'

"Again, I don't know. I've had five before, I'm sure. I don't know about six."

How would he characterize his round?

"I played well. You have to to shoot 64. But it was kind of ragged at times."

Ragged or not, the 134 total — 10 under par on the 7,114-yard La Costa Country Club course — left him with a three shot lead going into today's third round. (Tomorrow's final round will be televised by ABC at 1 p.m.)

British Open Champion Tony Jacklin had a 68 for 137 and Australian Bruce Crampton was in third place with a 69 for 138.

South African Gary Player, the defending champion and first round leader, never really got it going and drifted back with a 72 for 140. He was tied at that figure with Jack Nicklaus and Masters Champion Billy Casper, each with a 69.

Lee Trevino and Dale Douglas had 72s for 141 and Arnold Palmer took a 72 for 142.

IT'S UNUSUAL

Beard, the 1969 leading money winner, said it's unusual for him to play this well this early in the season.

"For one thing, bad weather bothers me," he said. "If there is one mile per hour of wind or it's one degree below 72, I don't like it."

"For another, the better you play the more you relax, and the more you relax the better you play. I guess you should be able to relax at the start of the season, but that's not easy to do until you have your goals for the year in sight."

Beard started his birdie string on the eighth with a 20 footer, then chipped in from 18 feet on the next. He holed one "from 40 or 50 feet" on the next, rifled a seven iron to within four feet on the next, had a two-putt birdie on the par five 12th and wedged to within six feet on the next.

His only bogey came on the 16th, when he was in a trap. But he had three other birdies, including the difficult 18th, had three one-putt pars and missed other birdies from 6 and 1½ feet.

BOWLING

Ziegler Is Junior Master

Wayne Ziegler, Marin's hottest young bowler, has one more title to add to his growing list of achievements.

The 17-year-old Redwood High School senior averaged 194 and ran through match play undefeated last weekend to win the Marin County Junior Masters title at Country Club Bowl, San Rafael. He saved the best for last, rolling a 220 final game.

In Class B portion of action, Ed Emmons, 17, from Hamilton Air Force Base, was the champion.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Cincinnati Ace Finally Beaten

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Not content to leave the hitting to the hitters, National League pitchers took matters in their own hands Friday with positive results on three separate fronts.

St. Louis managed just three hits against Cincinnati's rookie flash, Wayne Simpson, but one of them was a sixth inning single by hurler George Culver that touched off a two-run rally and helped the Cards to a 3-1 victory over the Reds.

San Francisco broke an eighth inning tie against Montreal with a pair of three-run homers by Ron Hunt and Dick Dietz but the hit that started the rally was a double by, of course, pitcher Gaylord Perry. The Giants went on to win the game 12-3.

In Chicago, pitcher Ken Holtzman ripped a tie-breaking, two-run double and the streaking Cubs won their eighth straight, knocking off Houston 6-3.

DODGERS WIN

Elsewhere in the National League Friday night, Pittsburgh shut out Atlanta 9-0, Philadelphia edged San Diego 5-4 and Los Angeles edged New York 1-0 in 15 innings.

In the American League, Detroit dropped Minnesota 8-6, Washington trimmed California 5-3, Cleveland defeated Chicago 4-1 and Baltimore knocked off Kansas City 7-5. Rain postponed Milwaukee at Boston and Oakland at New York.

Lou Brock opened the Cards-Reds game with a leadoff homer—only the second run in four starts off Simpson. Then the Reds' rookie shut the door on the Cards until the sixth when Culver, who had been matching zeroes with the youngster, opened with a single. Errors by Tony Perez and Dave Conception sank Simpson, allowing two runs to score and that was all Culver needed.

Perez jolted his ninth homer of the year and two other hits, raising his average to 500. The nine homers broke the National League record for the month of April. The old mark of eight was shared by Lee Walls, Willie McCovey and Wally Moon.

Holtzman had held the Astros hitless until the sixth inning before Houston broke through for a pair of runs. But the Cubs bounced right back in the bottom half with hits by Billy Williams, Johnny Callison and J.C. Martin producing two runs before Holtzman's two-out double brought two more across.

Callison iced it with a two-run homer in the seventh as Chicago built its longest winning streak since 1953 when the Cubs strung 10 victories together.

NASH STARS

Jim Nash scattered five hits and the Braves halted a six-game losing streak by blanking Pittsburgh. Tony Gonzalez drove in three runs and Rico Carty extended his hitting streak to 15 games for Atlanta.

Reliever Dick Selma choked off an eighth inning San Diego rally and saved the Phillies' victory over the Padres. Selma fanned Dave Campbell and Ollie Brown and got Ed Spiezio on a bouncer, leaving two runners stranded in the eighth and then mowed the Padres down in order in the ninth. Deron Johnson drove in two runs with a single and homer for Philadelphia.

Tom Haller's 15th inning single drove in the only run of the game as the Dodgers outlasted the Mets. Wes Parker, who had opened the inning with a single and moved up on a ground out, scampered home with the game-winner.

Perry's, Turtles Win

Perry's Delicatessen walloped Suburban Auto 10-4 and the Two Turtles nipped Brandon Tires 6-5 in San Rafael Adult Softball League games last night at Albert Park.

MARIN SWIMMING

Terra Linda, Tam Showdown Is Near

Terra Linda Trojans and Tamalpais Indians high school swimming teams blasted weaker opponents yesterday on their way to a season ending championship confrontation next Tuesday.

The Trojans got double wins from Rick Demont and Tom Guthrie as they overwhelmed San Rafael, 75-19, winning every event in the process at San Rafael. Freshman Keith Strange set a school record in the 100-yard breast stroke with a 1 minute, 6 second clocking.

At Mill Valley, host Tam was more merciful, defeating Drake, 74-21. Lowry McFerrin had two wins for the Indians, who are tied for the league lead with Terra Linda. Both teams are 11 and 2 in the won-lost column.

Roger Rechsteiner, Dave Behrens and Mike Smith scored double wins to lead Novato to a crushing 74-18 win over cross-town rival San Marin.

Novato's Johnn Summerfield, the league's premier diver, racked up 262 points to remain undefeated for the season.

ahead 99-98, and then hit three more two-pointers down the stretch.

"It took a little time for the adrenalin to flow tonight," added Cazzie, who was 0-for-3 from the floor in the first half.

"This is my first world championship series. I wouldn't say I was jittery, but I guess I was trying too hard in the first half. I know I wasn't as warm as I was then I came back in."

FOUL TROUBLE

Frazier, sacrificing his offensive game in an effort to defend against West, was yanked after picking up his fourth foul with just 51 seconds gone in the third quarter. But he scored another key basket—off his own steal—during the Knicks' deciding burst and helped limited the Lakers to 20 fourth quarter points.

"I felt terrible sitting there on the bench while they came back to take the lead,, he said. "I felt I had let the team down. I knew I had to get in there and stabilize the defense, and try to get the team moving again."

Reed went over and around the hulking Wilt Chamberlain, still slowed by the after-effects of knee surgery, for 25 first half points.

16 FOR 30

"I just played my game and mover around to wherever I could get the shot," said the 6-foot-10 All-Star pivotman, who shot 7-for-9 in the first quarter and 16-for-30 over-all. "But I was wondering how long it was going to last."

Reed, who had collided with the Lakers' Happy Hairston while stuffing a shot in the second quarter, began to miss after intermission when his left shoulder tightened up. "I was still getting the good shots," he said, "but I couldn't get the ball over the perimeter of the basket."

Marin Seeks Way To Avert Suicide

A recently formed committee of the Marin Association for Mental Health is making a preliminary study of setting up a suicide prevention service in Marin.

The 20-member committee, headed by Dr. D. S. Maher of Terra Linda, is now looking into suicide prevention services in other cities, according to Mrs. Nevada Christian, mental health association executive director.

The need for the Marin sureau is evident, Mrs. Christian explained, with 45 recorded suicides here last year. This figure was given to the association by Keith C. Craig of the Marin County Coroner's Office and a member of the new committee.

The actual number may run higher, Mrs. Christian said, because this figure does not include Marin persons committing suicide outside of the county.

A suicide prevention service is available on a 24-hour basis at the Community Mental Health Center at Marin General Hospital, Mrs. Christian said, but many people do not know of its existance.

Also, she added, many potential suicides would rather speak to a layman than to medical personnel.

Many calls received by the San Francisco suicide prevention service are from Marin residents, Mrs. Christian added. That bureau is also staffed by many volunteer workers from Marin, she said.

After the committee finishes its study, ways of funding the new service will be looked into, Mrs. Christian said.

Volunteers are needed to work on the committee and may obtain information from the association office at 1368 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

The committee will hold a public meeting May 20 at 4 p.m. at the association office.

Hickel Backs Trans Pipeline

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel, told a joint session of the Alaskan Legislature yesterday construction of a trans-Alaska oil pipeline will not damage the environment.

"The construction authorizations will be given only after a thorough engineering and design analysis," Hickel said in a speech. "And I can guarantee that we will not approve and design based on the old and faulty concept of 'Build now, Repair later.'"

Conservationists who heard Hickel's announcement approving the pipeline's right of way Thursday were openly skeptical that the Interior Department had resolved questions about possible damage to the land and wildlife.

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Lawmaking is getting more complicated in Texas.

There Are Worse Things Than Mothers To Have In Your House

DEAR HELEN:

I loved this poem and want to share it with your readers. If anyone knows the author, please tell us. — V.C.

Mothers Are People

Mothers are people who cook things
Like breakfast or lunch or a snack;
Dexterious people who hook things
Which button or zip up the back.
Mothers are people who blow things
Balloons and kisses and noses;
Green-thumbish people who grow things
Like ivy and poppies and roses.
Mothers are people who send things
Like letters and strawberry tarts;
Magical people who mend things,
Like blue jeans and elbows and hearts.
Mothers are people who find things
Like mittens and homework and germs;
Fussbudget people who mind things
Like cusswords and snowballs and worms.
Mothers are people who sweep things
Like porches and cobwebs and rugs;
Softhearted people who keep things
Like artwork, report cards and hugs.
Mothers are people who nurse things,
A boy or girl or a spouse.
And, all in all, there are worse things
Than mothers to have in your house.

AUTHOR UNKNOWN

DEAR HELEN:

Something really wonderful happened to me last night and I'd like to share it. An old boy friend called and wanted to talk to me.

You see, two years ago, he refused to marry me for the simple reason he didn't love me, though I was to have his baby.

I hated him for a long time because I hated myself. Then I found out I wasn't so bad. Stupid maybe, but not bad. What I'm trying to say is that as soon as I lost this hate for myself, stopped feeling sorry for me, I found literally hundreds of people who have problems that made mine look silly. I love again. I love human beings because that's what we all are. That phone call last night brought it all into focus. I'm able to forgive.

I'm so glad I'm alive that I sometimes want to walk down the street and say to the first person I meet, "Hey, You're Great. Aren't you glad to be alive too?"

But I suppose people would think I was crazy or something. — FOR PEACE AND LOVE.

DEAR FOR:

No, I don't believe people would think you are crazy or something. You'd be surprised how one person's aliveness makes others around her glad that they're alive.

Your letter did that for me. Keep on sharing your wealth, Honey. — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

QUANT'S NEW LOOK

Inventor of the mini, designer Mary Quant has forsaken the style but not the way-out fashion concept. In a recent showing in London, she introduced knickerbockers with knee high laced boots. The model, left, wears a brown and white tricot shirt over panne velvet knickers, topped with a wrap-over satin jacket with tie belt. Right, a printed panne velvet shirt and knickers are topped with a wide-brimmed hat.

SEW SIMPLE

New Fabric Looks Like Silk, Is Washable But Expensive

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I do quite a bit of my own sewing, especially my better clothes, and I'm wondering why the new fabric called Qiana is not available to home sewers? I have seen this fabric advertised as being used by the designers. Also, please tell us the content and the advantages of this new type of fabric.

MRS. C. P.

DEAR MRS. C. P.:

Qiana is a very refined nylon that has been in the development stages over 20 years and finally appeared in limited supply about two years ago. Naturally, the old law of supply and demand controlled the price, and it was too costly to be used by anyone other than the expensive costume room clothes designers.

Today, it is available in limited amount at better fabric shops. The availability should reduce the cost in the near future.

The advantages of Qiana are many, especially for women who travel frequently or those who lead such a busy life they have little time for taking care of their clothes. This fabric looks like silk, feels like silk and yet has many advantages silk does not have.

It will not water spot and is washable, provided everything you use in construction and trimmings on the garment is also washable. Because of the nature of the fabric and the wrinkle resistancy, the seams will not look perfectly smooth, but almost have a soft, puffy look. This is part of the look of silk, and you shouldn't object to this.

I shall never forget the first time I saw Qiana in a fashion show. I was told the gowns were over $250, but they were washable. It was rather amusing to imagine a woman who could spend this amount of money washing out her little dress at night.

If I ever spent this for a dress, I think I would sit up all night and look at it. But, perhaps we all need to be re-educated to new thinking when it comes to new fabrics.

MRS. RICHARD Tuttle, Fremont, Ind., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing hint:

"If you are making slacks or skirts out of the new knits and wish to use the elastic top instead of a waistband, I find the elastic from a discarded or ruined pair of panty hose works perfectly. It is usually a neutral color and can be used with any color fabric since it is hidden anyway. The greatest asset is that if you are using it for the same person who wore the hose, it should be the correct size."

DEAR EUNICE,

I have two small children and have never had the time to sew very much but would like to plan ahead and make a chiffon dress for a summer formal. What kind of seams are best for chiffon?

MRS. A. Y.

DEAR MRS. A.Y.:

Please stop with the first sentence. If you haven't done much sewing, forget chiffon; this is for the experts only.

You may achieve a very lovely, soft effect similar to chiffon if you choose voile, lawn, organdy, organza or very sheer Swiss cottons. These fabrics have more body, won't slide around and are just as popular today.

Unless you are underlining this fabric, you will want to make the smallest seams possible. Usually a French seam is best. Make your 3/8 inch seam by placing the two wrong sides of the fabric together. Trim seam allowance evenly to about 1/8 inch. Then with the two right sides together, stitch about 1/4 inch from the seam. This will completely encase the two raw edges and you will have a narrow seam that will not be noticeable.

DEAR EUNICE,

My daughter bought a dress at a big savings and it ended up too short. Friends have suggested I add a band of black velvet to the bottom of the hem. Now I'm beginning to wonder how this should be put on. If I use it on the straight grain [illegible] ure it w[illegible]

[illegible] E. M[illegible]

DE[illegible] I:

[illegible] th

on the bias grain. It is much easier to conform with the fabric of the dress.

Cut a piece twice the width of the finished band, plus two seam allowances. Carefully pin one edge of the velvet to your dress (right sides together). Be sure not to stretch either the dress fabric or the velvet band. Machine stitch, removing the pins as you come to them.

Now, fold the free edge of the velvet to the inside of the dress and carefully turn over the edge and pin in place. Your machine stitching will be your guide. May I caution you that it is very easy to pull this edge. You will know something is wrong if you see diagonal folds appear from the right side. When you are certain it will look perfect and smooth, carefully hand whip the inside folded edge to the inside of your dress.

Entertaining Means You Care So Don't Tell The Mistakes

By BARBARA HOSMER

It's show business and that's the fun of entertaining, says Nan Birmingham, who as the wife of author Stephen Birmingham often plays hostess to many of the celebrated "beautiful people."

A drama graduate of Stanford, she was show biz herself entertaining the audience as the finale to the A.M. lecture series yesterday morning at the Tamalpais Theatre in San Anselmo with hostess anecdotes that kept the ladies laughing.

Braced by an elbow on the lectern, Mrs. Birmingham clothed the points of her talk in best raconteur manner—

"The afternoon the turkey fell—it was Thanksgiving—and the thing was, before it fell it blew up. . .My mother-in-law had offered to get up early and help. 'What are you going to do with the rest of that stuffing? It's no good unless all the turkey juice is going through it. You hold the turkey and I'll stuff it all in,' she told me.

"Now she graduated from Wellesley in 1924 in chemistry. But I learned at Hamlin's from the chemistry teacher that when you get into the bathtub the water goes up. I knew when all the stuffing got into the turkey something was going to happen. It did. One side blew out.

"I told my husband, we'll just cover it up with parsley. We picked it up and the whole turkey went poosh—stark naked right out of the skin.

"So I said to my sister-in-law, 'Susan, get the turkey and we'll just back it into the skin.' Of course the wings were a little hard. . .Then we pulled the curtains, doused the candles and took the turkey in. Everybody said it was the best one since last Thanksgiving.

"THAT WAS when I decided there are three basic entertaining rules. First, don't ever tell—anything. Some women frown as they serve the roast, 'my butcher let me down,' or 'I wish you could have seen the roast last week'—I wish I could have too. It makes me want to say to the hostess, 'why didn't you invite me then?"

"Second, always keep on hand lots of parsley—it covers a multitude of sins.

"A friend said to me, 'what do you do when you're unmolding the aspic and it goes whoosh down the disposal?' I say then just serve parsley.

"Third, learn to carve very fast."

Entertaining is show biz, says Mrs. Birmingham, because the hostess is the producer, casting director, costumer and all.

"Decide what the style of this party is going to be, what people are going to wear, where it will be—on the terrace for the first course?—and who are you inviting? That can make or break a party."

SHE RECOUNTED the time she was entertaining a Hungarian woman friend from Mexico—

"When you're entertaining a woman like Irina it's a good idea to have an extra man—or she'll take yours. She's like having the Gabors all in one woman. She's so sexy she doesn't look quite clean. Then friends said they couldn't come because the head of the Swedish branch of their business was in New York and they had to take him out. I said, 'You mean he's here alone?' and a count, too. 'Wouldn't he rather have a home-cooked meal? Bring him.' So at dinner there was this dark, oozing gypsy of an Irina talking in seven languages to this distinguished, tall, correct Scandinavian Count stuffed shirt. But Irina seemed to be doing pretty well for herself."

NAN BIRMINGHAM

The upshot was that the count turned up missing for four days.

"I decided that was pretty good casting."

BE CAREFUL about serving a fancy dish whose vogue is over, the hostess warned. "If you haven't already done a fondue, don't go out and buy a set now. That's about over.

"And when people call you up and say, 'come on over for dinner—I won't go to any trouble' — I feel like saying, 'then I won't go.' When you take the trouble to think through entertaining and you are saying to people, 'I'm giving you my time, energy and imagination,' then you are saying, 'I care about you.' I think that's what entertaining is all about," said the noted hostess.

FDA Advises Less Estrogen In Pill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration yesterday advised physicians to prescribe oral contraceptives with the lowest content of estrogen, a hormone.

The FDA letter to doctors and pharmacists followed application of British findings that oral contraceptives with higher estrogen levels were involved in two to three times as many blood clotting incidents as lower dose formulations.

The government has already established that women using the pill are six times more likely to suffer serious blood clots than nonusers. Approximately one woman in 33,000 using the pill will die each year because of leg, lung or brain clots, the FDA said.

"Accumulated evidence," said FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards, "has suggested that there is a sufficiently clear relationship between the presence of estrogen and the incidence of thromoembolic disorders, (blood clotting) that patients for whom the pill is necessary get the least possible amount of the estrogen that is effective."

About half of the 8.5 million women using oral contraceptives in the United States are taking preparations with higher estrogen levels, the FDA has estimated.

Lose-dose compounds contain approximately 50 micrograms of estrogen, the others run between 60 and 100 micrograms of the female hormone. A microgam is one one-millionth of a gram.

Oral contraceptives are a combination of estrogen and another female hormone, progresterone.

All of the so-called sequential preparations contain either 80 or 100 micrograms of estrogen. With the sequentials, a woman takes estrogen only during most of her menstral cycle and a combination of estrogen and progesterone during the rest.

The other major type of preparation, the combination pill, contains estrogen and progesterone for use at all times during the cycle.

The FDA said it had examined the British data as well as other experiments from this country and Denmark and Sweden.

British medical authorities warned women last Dec. 10 to abandon the higher dose pill preparations.

A DAY AT the Races" will be held by members of the Petaluma Woman's Club Tuesday. They will take a chartered bus to Golden Gate Fields in Albany, where they will have luncheon in the Turf Club and view the races from their tables.

The bus is scheduled to leave the clubhouse at 10:30 a.m. and return at 7:30 p.m.

The portion of the cost of the trip to be returned by the racetrack will be used for charity, club officials said.

MRS. ALICE KOON of Lomita, state chairman of the Memorial Cancer Dressing Stations of the Order of Eastern Star, paid a visit to the San Rafael Cancer Dressing Station Wednesday, where she told of the work being done by the 126 stations in California. Dressings are made and given free of charge to persons who need them. Materials for making the dressings are provided by gifts and memorials made to the Order of Eastern Star for that purpose.

Mrs. Koon was interested in the varieties of dressings made by the San Rafael group, which is mainly made up of Eastern Star members from San Rafael, Fairfax and Mill Valley chapters, helped along by several who have no affiliation with the order. Workers are of various ages. One, Mary Ann Hand, is in her late eighties. During vacation periods girls from Jobs Daughters and Rainbow Girls give helping hands. Sometimes grandmothers bring visiting grandchildren who can help in various ways. The San Rafael station has a man as a member—Fred Redden—who helps prepare the work room in the San Rafael Masonic Lodge Building, cut cellucotton and pack materials. Most of the dressings prepared by the San Rafael station are distributed through the Marin County Cancer Society, often at the request of doctors.

Accompanying Mrs. Koon were Mmes. Mary Schwelke, Northern California vice-chairman; June Chrysler, co-ordinator of the Cancer Dressings program, both of Sacramento; and Ernestine Winters, chairman of the Oakland Cancer Dressing Station. They were entertained for lunch at the Mill Valley home of Mrs. Marjorie Reinecke, chairman of the San Rafael Cancer Dressing Station, who was assisted by Mmes. Marie and Edith Kramer.

TAMAL REBEKAH Lodge 393 of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will hold a luncheon and bazaar Tuesday at 11 a.m. at the Odd Fellows Temple in San Rafael.

Chairmen of the luncheon and bazaar are Mrs. Ada Earwood and Mrs. Marie Westlund, assisted by members of Tamal Rebekah Lodge and the Tamakwa Sewing Club.

Aprons, pillow cases, tea towels and other hand-made items made by members of the Tamakwa Sewing Club will be among the many items for sale. There will be a white elephant table as well as the hand-made items. Baked goods will be available.

"STYLES INTERNATIONALE," salad bowl luncheon and fashion show will be presented by St. Raphael's Mothers Guild Tuesday at noon in St. Raphael's Auditorium.

The luncheon and fashions will reflect an international mood. Members of the guild will prepare dishes with a foreign flavor. Breasts of chicken, imported cheeses and wine will be served to augment the salads.

Fashions, modeled by guild members and their children, will feature non-crushable, easy care clothes that will see the wearer well turned out whether she travels to Omaha or Osaka.

The decor follows the international theme with a Japanese tea garden from which the models will step, through the auditorium decorated with various national flags and into the foyer in which our green oasis, earth, represented by a huge globe, will stand. At the tables, guests will find miniature transportation for a trip around the world, in the form of a basket with balloon power to take it aloft.

Chairmen are Mmes. John Lichtenwalner and Arnold T. Bertolli. Directors of the fashion show are Mmes. A.C. Latno Jr. and Edmund Steacy. Mrs. Emil Boracchia is reservations chairman.

MRS. CHARLES Meacham of Mill Valley will be initiated into Mu Phi Epsilon, international professional music sorority, at a ceremony tomorrow at San Francisco State College, conducted by the Epsilon Omega Chapter.

THE MILL Valley Branch of the American Association of University Women will have the opportunity to hear a first-hand report on Southeast Asia by a longtime career diplomat, John P. Coffey, at its annual spring luncheon Tuesday.

It will be held at Sabella's restaurant in Mill Valley with cocktails at 11:30 a.m. preceding the 12:15 p.m. luncheon.

Coffey, who has been with the state department since 1941, is chief of the Consular Section of the United States Embassy in Singapore. He will be returning to his post from a home leave in Washington, D.C.

Officers will also be installed at the luncheon meeting. Reelected for the 1970-71 year were Mmes. Elgar Hill, president; Robert Alexander, first vice president and program chairman; and James Leonard, recording secretary.

New officers to be installed are Mmes. William Knox, second president and membership chairman; John H. Larson, corresponding secretary; Quinn Millar, treasurer; and William Wallace, membership treasurer.

MRS. ALLEN P. Lovejoy of San Rafael, recently named Volunteer of the Year by the Volunteer Bureau of Marin, has resigned her position as a Director of Central Marin's League of Women Voters in order to support the campaign of a partisan candidate in the coming elections.

The league's president, Mrs. James Good of San Rafael, says "Mrs. Lovejoy's resignation conforms to League policy."

The League of Women Voters encourages participation in politics and in civic organizations for all its members. But, according to Mrs. Good, "League officers and directors are restricted in political activity in order to preserve the League's policy of nonpartisanship and objectivity."

Mrs. Dorothy G. Krieger Elected New President Of Novato BPW Club

Mrs. Dorothy G. Krieger of Novato has been elected president of the Novato Business and Professional Women's Club.

During her two years as a member, she has served as vice president and program coordinator.

"Progressive Pace" is the theme chosen for 1970. The club also has a scholarship award program.

Mrs. Krieger was born in Winnipeg, Canada, but was reared in Minneapolis, Minn. She was graduated from the University of Minnesota and Scofield's Secretarial School in San Francisco. She has also taken various courses at College of Marin.

She and her husband, Ray, now retired, have one son, Robert A. Krieger of Santa Rosa, and a seven-year-old granddaughter, Shelly Lynn Krieger. Bowling, knitting, bridge and swimming are the interests of Mrs. Krieger.

She is executive secretary for the Plumbing, Heating, Cooling Contractors Association of Marin, Sonoma, Mendocino Counties, Inc., and is also a member of the women's auxiliary of that organization.

Students Find Nickel Still Has Some Value

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI)—Ever wonder what the value of the nickel is today?

In these days of rising living costs almost everyone has begun to worry about the purchase power of a dollar. It caused a Texas Tech University journalism professor to wonder just what the nickel will buy. He assigned a feature writing class the project of investing a nickel to purchase something—and then to write about it.

True enough the nickel is like the old gray mare—ain't what it used to be. But, as teacher Tanner Laine hoped, the students were able to use their imagination and come up with several values of the small coin.

A nickel can get earmuffs, chopsticks, napkin rings, spoons, bubble gum, old phonograph records, nails, a cigar and a live turtle. Possibly the most valuable things from a nickel today are happiness and experience.

One student used a nickel to purchase an ice cream cone for a little, ragged boy. She turned in a slip, 'One Ice Cream cone-One Happy Boy."

Another offered a nickel for a thought, and learned that no longer could you get a person's thoughts for a penny — today they are a nickel.

One student bought a postcard, but was instructed it would have been worth more had it been used to write home for a $10 moneygram.

One young man shopped a discount store until he came up with 79 nails. These he turned over to a little boy, helped him drag up scrap lumebr and build a castle. He reported his five cents purchased the imagination of a small boy—the biggest thing of all.

The Hofmann Company

From Bismark, N.D., to London, clergymen 'tuning in' to religious rock 'n' roll.
(Independent-Journal drawing by Jack Lucey)

ROCK 'N' ROLL

'Turned On' To Religion

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Hey, man, it's a mixed up thing now —rock 'n' roll 'n' religion.

The rock thumpings always have carried a hint of the gospel beat, but now it's coming on loud and strong, breaking out in the lyrics.

It's usually not in traditionally pious terminology, and some of it may not make much theological sense, but it nevertheless registers a religious inclination.

Variety, the show-business publication says pop music is "returning to one of its earliest roots, the gospel-spiritual influence."

Current albums and turntable shows for the young reverberate with the "soul" sounds by various rock and folk groups and individual baladeers.

Some of the titles include: "Jesus is Just All Right," sung by the Byrds; "I Guess the Lord Must Be in New York City," sung by Harry Nilsson; "Superstar," a number about Jesus sung by Murray Head and a backup group; "Resurrection," by a group called Aum and which starts out, "God is Back in Town."

In the country-Western category, there are such recent numbers as Lawrence Reynolds' "Jesus is a Soul, Man," Bobby Bare's "God Bless America Again," Linda Ronstadt's "We Need a Lot More Jesus," and the Chaparral Brothers' "Jesus Love You, Rosemary."

A trade magazine, Entertainment World, predicts the religious themes are likely to become more prominent. Noting that "rock 'n' roll has a solid foundation in gospel music" in rudimentary orgins, the magazine adds:

"Since this is a period when rock musicians are exploring their musical roots, it is not surprising that religion is finding its way into their music."

However, the magazine says the trend has encountered some resistance among radio and television broadcasters, who occasionally have shunned using some of the discs for fear they might offend conventional piety.

Some of the songs convey a keen element of doubt and questioning—which actually is a classically authentic note in religious searching.

For instance, "Superstar" includes lines such as "Every time I look at you I don't understand ... Jesus Christ, Jesus Christ, Who are you? .... Jesus Christ, Superstar, Do you think you're what they say you are?"

MISGIVINGS FADE

Misgivings of some stations about it faded after several clergymen backed its use, including a Bismarck, N.D. Catholic priest, Rev. John Owens, who played it on his radio show, "Padre's Platters."

It "should be a cause of some welcome introspection," he says.

Also, the Anglican dean of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, Very Rev. Martin Sullivan, says some people "may be shocked by this record" but they should think again. He calls it "a desperate cry ... and a very proper one at that."

Numerous other hits lately have had a religious questing ingredient in them, as well as sheer fervor, including "Oh Happy Day," started by a California Pentecostal group.

The song, "Mrs. Robinson," has a line in it, "Jesus loves you more than you will know," and Frankie Laine's recent anti-swearing record, "Dammit Isn't God's Last Name," came as a follow up to his widely used plea to the Lord, "You Gave Me a Mountain."

The Cowsills, an Ohio group, has a rising, mystical number out called "The Prophecy of Daniel and John the Divine," taken from prophecies of Daniel and the New Testament Apocalypse or Revelation about destructive forces in the world.

LONG-TIME HIT

Then there's the long-time hit, "Turn, Turn, Turn," sung by Pete Seeger and taken from the Book of Ecclesiastes, and the Beatles' "Ballad of John and Yoko," which Beatle John Lennon calls "a gospel song."

"I'm a big Christ fan—the song is my prayer," he says.

Rev. John Sheerin, editor of the Catholic World, commenting on the religious notes in pop songs, says its okay for the beat and the mood but it gives only a "misty shadowy picture of Jesus that has scant resemblance to the Jesus of history and Christian belief."

It's in line with the interested in Eastern mysticism current in youth circles today, he says, with its appeal mainly in the chants and rhythms rather than the meanings. It offers a "purely romanticized image" of Jesus, he adds, but fails to "face up to 'the fact of Jesus"—which is essential to genuine faith.

National Presbyterian Church Doors Opened

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

Another great religious edifice is ready to join the National Cathedral (Episcopal) and the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception (Roman Catholic) on the "must-see" list for visitors to Washington, D. C.

It's called the National Presbyterian Church and Center. Although formal dedication ceremonies won't take place until next month, it's already open to visitors.

NATIONAL CENTER

As the name suggests, it will serve as a national center of the United Presbyterian Church, one of America's largest Protestant denominations. It also will sponsor seminars, conferences and studies aimed at bridging some of the gaps which beset communication in American society between people of different races, creeds, nationalities and generations.

The huge neo-gothic church—a cathedral in all but name—is the fulfillment of a dream long cherished by Time-Life publisher Henry Luce. Luce was an ardent Presbyterian and it dismayed him that his denomination had no church in the nation's capital large enough to accommodate the 1959 state funeral of Presbyterian elder John Foster Dulles, the secertary of state.

Luce felt that the Presbyterians should have a suitably impressive national church in Washington for the funeral of another Presbyterian statesman whom he greatly admired, President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The publisher headed a committee and raised the funds —about $8.5 million—required for the building project.

Unfortunately, Luce didn't live to see it completed. Nor did Eisenhower, whose funeral was conducted a year ago—in the same Washington Episcopal Cathedral where Dulles' last rites were held.

NOT IN GUIDEBOOK

You won't find that little bit of history in the official souvenir guidebook on sale at the National Presbyterian Church and Center. But the handsomely-illustrated book, written by former Washington Star religion editor Caspar Nannes, is full of other fascinating facts about America's newest great church.

That congregation came to be known, aptly enough, as First Presbyterian Church. In 1930, it merged with Covenant Presbyterian Church in a grim Romanesque building that had stood at Connecticut Avenue and 18th Street NW since 1889. The combined church was renamed in 1947 the National Presbyterian Church.

IKE'S BAPTISM

It was there that Dwight Eisenhower was baptized a few days after his inauguration in 1953. Eisenhower attended faithfully during his eight years as President, and his pew, number 41, has been preserved, along with historic pews used by 17 other presidents, in a special wing of the new edifice known as "The Chapel of the Presidents."

Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, Chaplain of the U.S. Senate, is chief minister of the new church. The conference center — a separate operation — is under the direction of Dr. Lowell R. Ditzen.

Built of white Indiana limestone, the church will seat 1,260 people.

College Professor Will Deliver Talk

Dr. Gordon Chan, professor of biochemistry at College of Marin, will be the guest speaker at a special guitar folk mass at 10 a.m. at the Church in Ignacio (Episcopal).

The congregation will celebrate a "litury of the good earth" written by Rev. Charles Gompertz, vicar, in celebration of the fifth anniversary of the dedication of Grace Cathedral in San Francisco.

Religious Work

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI)—One of the world's largest religious works, Jan Styka's "Crucifixion" which measures 44 by 195 feet, can be viewed at Forest Lawn Memorial Park here.

Commitment For Unity Plan Urged

NEW YORK (LC) — A statement calling for commitment to the ultimate goal of Lutheran unity has been submitted for consideration and action to the participating bodies of the Lutheran Council in the United States of America.

Drafted by a seven-member Consultation on Inter-Lutheran Cooperation, the report is being recommended for adoption through appropriate channels of the Lutheran Church in America, American Lutheran Church and Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod.

"The goal of Lutheran unity," the statement asserts, "is that the oneness of those who are committed to the fulfillment of the will of God shall be evidenced by their oneness of understanding, activity and structure."

The churches are urged to seek, as intermediate steps, increasing theological agreement, congregational fellowship, and unified programs. . ."in awareness" that such efforts "may lead also to structural unity."

OVERALL PLAN

"This will come," the statement adds, "when there is general consensus that the envisioned unity of faith and life, mission and ministry, unhampered by needless duplication or competition, will further the fulfillment of God's will."

The report stresses that the concept of union "should not be restricted to mean a monolithic structure which embraces all Lutherans in a single church," although "such a structure represents one possibility which merits consideration."

Cited as another possibility is a federation of regional churches made up of Lutherans within predetermined geographic boundaries.

In this arrangement, it is noted, each regional church "might address itself to the needs and challenges of its region."

The regional churches could relate to one another through a common structure "where a united program, action, and witness could be developed to meet national and international needs."

WISDOM, JUDGMENT

"It will require wisdom and judgment to determine the most appropriate structure that will be needed to carry out the functions of a united Lutheran church," the statement observes.

"This judgment must be based on sound organizational principles designed to achieve carefully defined goals."

The report says "it is recognized that neither the structure of the church nor its activities assures the fulfillment of God's will," that "this is accomplished only by God's grace."

Eastern Lutheran Group To Join Missouri Synod

BYRAM, Conn. (LC) — By a margin of better than six to one, congregations of the Synod of Evangelical Lutheran Churches have approved merger of the 20,556-member denomination into the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Rev. Milan A. Ontko, president of the SELC, who is pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church here, reported that congregations voted 41 to 9, with 14 abstentions, to ratify the affirmative action taken at the SELC's 43rd general convention last October. Only a simple majority was required.

April 10 had been set as the deadline for completion of the referendum and congregations that did not respond by that date were recorded as favoring the merger.

The synod's board of directors will meet in New York City, this coming week, at which time steps will be taken to execute and implement the union agreement with the LC-MS. The formal merger is expected to take place this summer, possibly by June 1.

According to the agreement, the synod will become the SELC District of the 2,870,355-member Missouri Synod for a period of seven years, after which the former Slovak Church will be dissolved and its congregations, pastors, and teachers assigned to the appropriate LC-MS geographical districts.

The SELC, according to 1968 statistics, the latest available, has 62 ordained ministers, of whom 50 are serving congregations. Its baptized membership of 20,556 includes 15,247 confirmed members. It has 57 Sunday schools with 640 teachers and 5,525 pupils.

Missionary Team To Talk Tomorrow

Rev. and Mrs. Paul Seaberg, newly appointed Assemblies of God missionaries to Sierra Leone, West Africa, will be guest speakers at 7 p.m. tomorrow at the Central Assembly of God Church in San Rafael.

On Wednesday, Rev. Artus S. Erickson, veteran missionary to Peru, will talk at 7:30 p.m.

CHURCH SPEAKER — Minerva Mattar of Pasadena who, together with her late husband, Dr. Solomon J. Mattar, spent 15 years as warden of the Garden Tomb in Jerusalem, will speak on her life in Palestine tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at the San Rafael First United Methodist Church.

A CROCODILE SHOWS UP FOR BAPTISM

LUSAKA, Zambia (London Express) — A candidate for baptism at a Zambian Watch Tower sect ceremony recently in the Kafue River found the water a little nippy.

For just as he and 200 other participants were immersing themselves he was bitten on the leg by a crocodile.

The man, Davison Kapyasa, was wrenched from the crocodile's jaws by other initiates. But he will get no satisfaction of revenge. Commented sect leader Lawson Pupwe:

"We don't intend to kill the crocodile as it's a creature of God, and according to our beliefs its blood should not be spilled."

Marin Baha'i's Will Observe Feast Of Ridvan

The Baha'i Faith of Marin will observe the Feast of Ridvan, beginning Tuesday through May 2. It is one of the most sacred holiday periods of the independent world religious body.

It was also announced this week by the group that Dr. and Mrs. Douglas Gibson of Marinwood will be delegates from Northern California at the 61st annual national convention of Baha'i's to be held in Wilmette, Ill., beginning Thursday through May 3.

Delegates to the convention will hear activities planned by the U.S. Baha'i Community in connection with the observance of International Education Year 1970 and the 25th anniversary of the United Nations.

Pulled Punches By Networks

(Editor's note: This is the second of two articles by the outspoken Federal Communications Commission member and author of the current "How to Talk Back to Your TV Set" from Atlantic-Little Brown Press. The columns are adapted from Nation magazine.)

By NICHOLAS JOHNSON

For some time I have contended that the networks—CBS, NBC, ABC—have been pulling their punches by withholding from the public information in their possession.

Now, Variety magazine provides a long list of "shrunken or vanished" documentaries at CBS which have been shelved, turned down or killed.

The list includes the following: a "hard-hitting" documentary on homosexuals by Bill Peters, gutted by the management before showing.

An in-depth investigation of Saigon corruption by Jay McMullen of CBS News, tabled.

Felix Green's film footage of North Vietnam, rejected for broadcast by CBS and given to NET.

Doug Leiterman's hour production on the black middle-class, dumped several months ago.

A project on "police brutality" turned into "an industrial promotion film for sponsor IBM."

And Gene DePoris' probe of the military-industrial complex, ultimately devoted to the "nomenclature of military rockets."

THE ARTICLE says CBS News has also had pending for several years a project on "Congressional ethics." I wonder when we'll see that one.

In fairness to CBS, and its news president, Richard Salant, the Variety article congratulates CBS for being the best of the lot, and at least having "good documentary intentions." Perhaps author Bill Greeley of Variety was remembering an earlier article in that publication which reported that ABC had doctored some of its documentaries to fit the corporate tastes of the sponsoring 3M Company.

Before Elke Sommer and Carol Burnett were censored—or since both CBS management and Vice President Spiro Agnew dislike that word—"edited", Mrs. Martin Luther King had hoped to deliver an impressive stack of mail, asking for an end to violence and war to President Richard M. Nixon.

CBS' rather cloudy explanation for censoring the idea was "long established network policy prohibits appeals for active support of any cause without prior consultation with the network."

YET THERE was ample time for such consultation between CBS and its employee, Carol Burnett, during the five or six days between the show's taping and broadcasting. Indeed, one wonders whether Vice President Agnew's similar appeal for mail during his Des Moines "media speech" was also subjected to "prior consultation" and network approval.

Just the other night Bob Hope presided over a nationwide NBC entertainment special which honored Mrs. Eisenhower and featured a statement by President Nixon—with explicit appeals for money, not just letters, for an "Eisenhower Hospital." And "long-established network policy" does not prevent "appeals for active support" in overt and subtle plugs for products—whether cigarettes, alcohol or automobiles.

In its recent Red Lion Broadcasting decision, the U.S. Supreme Court upholds the constitutionality of the FCC's "Fairness Doctrine." In its opinion, the high court made the extremely important observation: "Freedom of the press from governmental interference under the First Amendment does not sanction repression of that freedom by private interests."

It is clear that events and law, (most recently, the CBS censorship of Carol Burnett and Elke Sommer and the Supreme Court rulings) are converging toward newer doctrines prohibiting censorship by government and private corporations alike.

IN RED LION, the court made another observation that has generally been overlooked by commentators. The broadcasters had "strenuously argued" that requiring them to devote time (possibly free) to issues of controversy might force them to eliminate such coverage completely.

The court rejected this for two reasons:

First, the Court quoted network officials to the effect that they did not intend to abandon their efforts to cover controversial issues.

Second, and more significantly, the Court said that if broadcasters reduced the "volume and quality of coverage," the FCC has power to insist that they give adequate and fair attention to public issues.

The Red Lion decision was scarcely three months old when Variety reported that CBS has refused to broadcast an announcement by Look, describing an article on New Orleans Dist. Atty. Garrison, because the Look advertisement might require CBS to offer Garrison rebuttal time.

It would appear, therefore, that the Supreme Court's precise fear has materialized: that "licensees should suddenly prove timorous." To the extent that broadcasters are now refusing to cover issues of public importance and controversy, new approaches are needed to safeguard the flow of information to the public.

THE NETWORKS have also tried to argue that the dissemination of "news and opinion" is different from "entertainment" and that while they may censor news with some reluctance, they normally feel free to cut and chop "entertainment" programming as they see fit.

On this professed ground, for example, CBS eliminated the Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour. Yet here, too, the networks have refused to heed the clear words and warnings of the Supreme Court, which has discussed and rejected the distinction between opinion and entertainment:

"The line between the informing and the entertainment is too elusive for the protection of that basic right (a free press.) Everyone is familiary with instances of propaganda through fiction. What is one man's amusement, teaches another's doctrine."

The networks are used to asking others to listen to them. Now it may be their turn to listen—to the people, and to the Supreme Court.

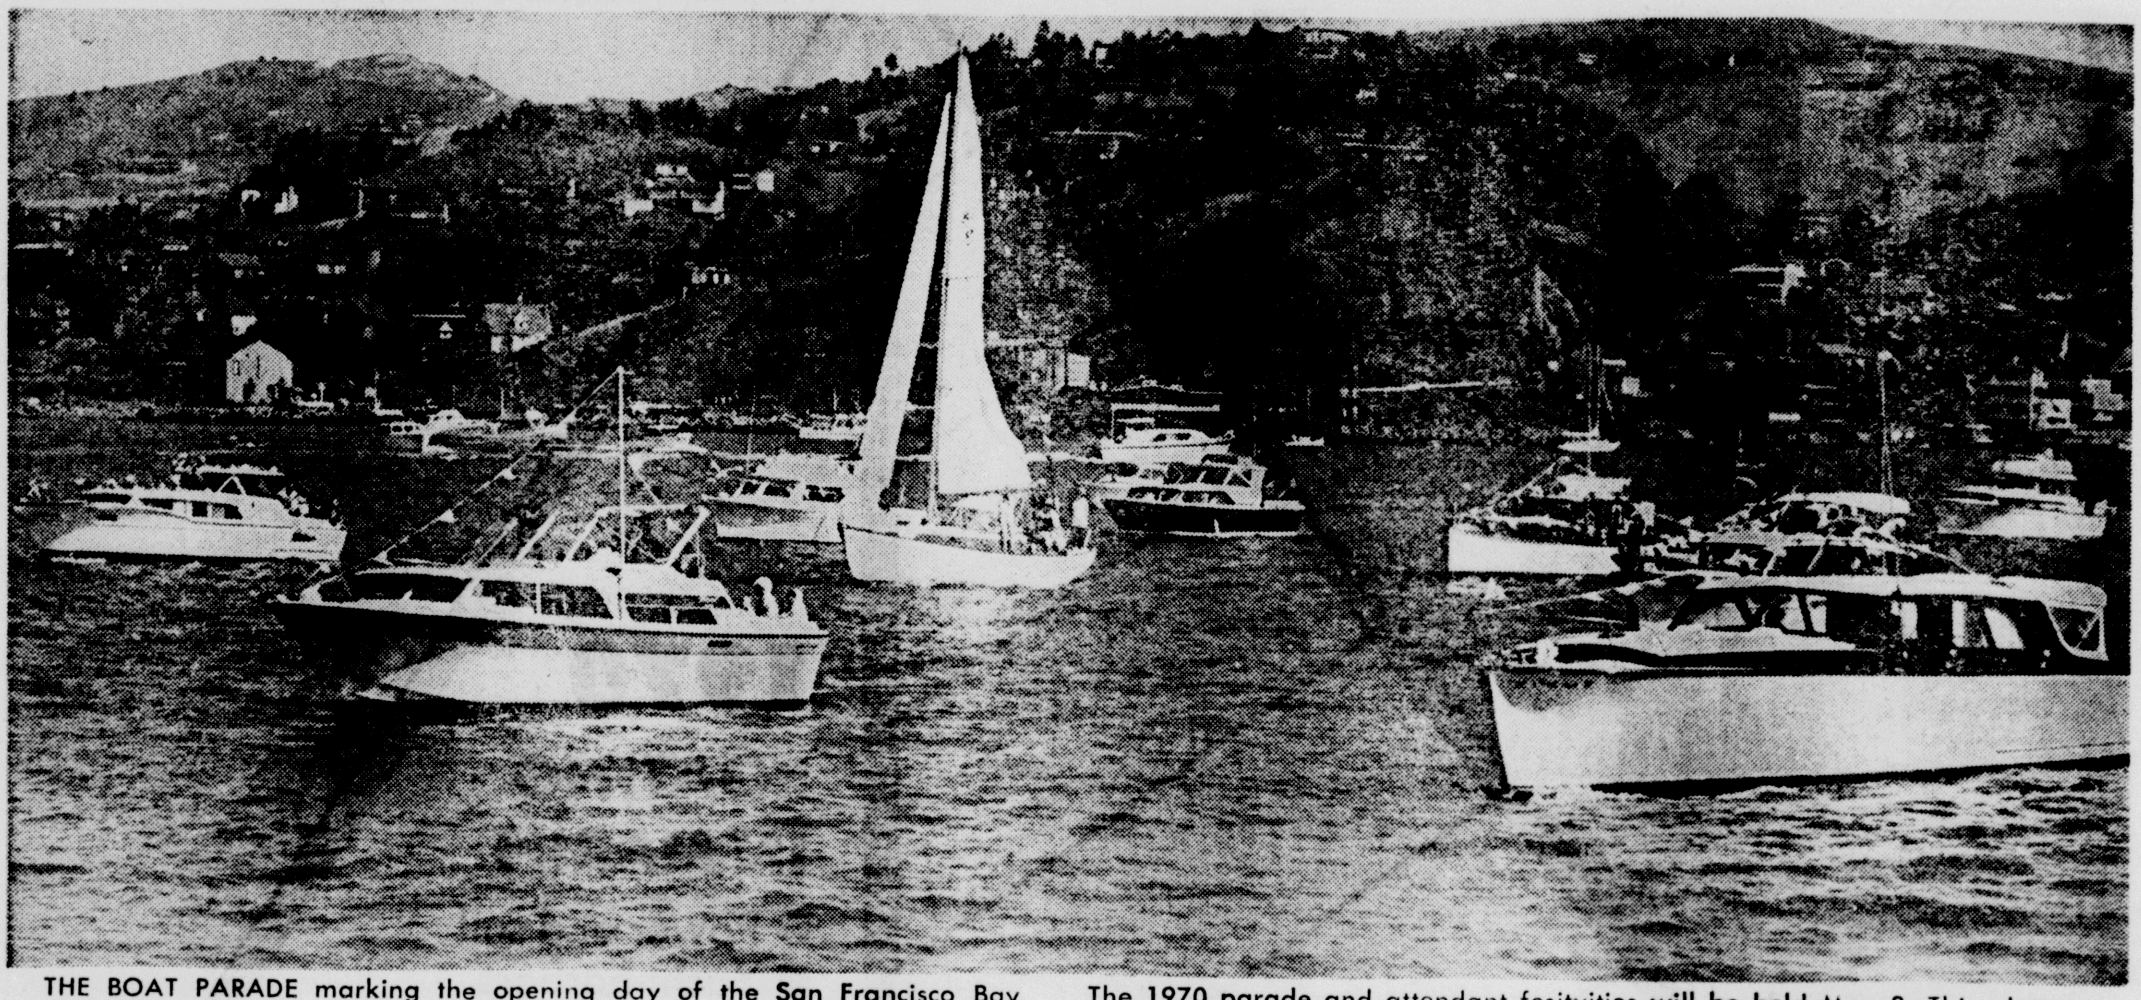
MARIN COUNTY BOATING



THE BOAT PARADE marking the opening day of the San Francisco Bay yachting season is a colorful Northern California tradition, bringing out thousands of both motor and wind-driven vessels of all shapes and sizes.

The 1970 parade and attendant fesitvities will be held May 3. This photo showing a part of the 1969 parade flotilla, with Tiburon in the background, was shot by Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean.

The Boats Will Parade On Bay May 3

All year long, they drift or putter out on the bay, ready-made shots for a photo magazine, unnoticed by anyone except maybe shutter bugs, their owners, or big-eyed kids just discovering machines that motivate.

"Look, daddy, there's a ship-boat!"

Look, daddy, on May 3 there will be a thousand ship-boats, and sailboats, and motorboats, and boat-boats, all or some of them decked out like a dowager going to her second debutante ball.

ACTUALLY, there's expected to be some 3,000 pleasure craft of all sizes, shapes and gaudy colors on hand off Racoon Straits on hand to be blessed in something more concretely spiritual than champagne when the 1970 yachting season officially opens on San Francisco Bay with the giant parade of boats.

Things will get under way at Corinthian Yacht Club in Tiburon with a breakfast, pledge to the Flag and a prayer for the deceased in Vietnam.

From there according to activities chairman Capt. Elmer Towle, who helped originate the blessing of the fleet some six years ago as a Marin County tradition, the host of crafts will converge on Racoon Straits to begin the parade and receive the three-denominational blessing from aboard the U. S. Navy's destroyer the USS Cowell.

Rev. William Perdue, of the Westminster United Presbyterian Church in Tiburon, Rabbi Joseph Ashley of Temple Emanuel in San Francisco, and Fr. George Johnson of the St. Hillary's Church in Tiburon, will be on board to deliver the solemn and impressive blessing.

THE BLESSING of the fleet will also be actual in form, since the boats will be baptized, so to speak, by spray from a fireboat. In addition, there will be music from the 26th Navy Band.

All sorts of boats, enough to boggle anyone's nautical imagination will be on hand for the Pacific Inter Club Yacht Association-sponsored event, from sailboats to power cruisers of all sizes to some huge windjammers.

The blessing is set for 10 a.m., with the actual parade of boats going at 10:30 a.m.

YACHT CLUBS will once again be divided into three fleets for different starting times. The three color designations are green, blue and red.

The San Francisco Chronicle will again liven up the event with some friendly competition with its ninth annual best-decorated-boats award, with winners receiving plaques plus prizes of merchandise.

Marin County clubs among the 63 yacht clubs participating will include the Corinthian Yacht Club, San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere, Sausalito Yacht Club, Sausalito Cruising Club, Paradise Cay Yacht Club, Strawberry Cove Yacht Club, Marin Yacht Club, San Rafael Yacht Club, Gallinas Yacht Club, Loch Lomond Yacht Club and Bel Marin Keys Yacht Club.

The Coast Guard will be on hand for the second straight year, to assure greater safety on what is bound to be a super-crowded bay. This will be achieved through regular and auxiliary patrol craft for possible boarding of boats that break safety and parade rules.

IT'S BOUND to be a pleasurable, memorable day on the bay.

And if on May 3 your little toddler suddenly says: "Mommy, daddy, I see a whole ocean of ship-boats," you better believe it.

The Cruisers Woo Ladies With Luxuries

Upgraded Galleys Typify Trend In The Bigger Boats

Ever since builders elected to grant full voting rights to women in boat-buying decisions by including woman-appeal in their designs, there has been a growing emphasis on interior comfort, convenience, and — yes, that's the word for it — luxury.

This year more than ever before, in greater numbers than ever before, big-boat builders and their designers have pulled out all the stops to woo the feminine vote.

TO WIN IT, they are putting forth some truly handsome candidates among the big-boat power fleet. These are the luxury craft of 30 feet and up which, on the outside, bear the rich good looks of the thoroughbreds they are.

Inspection of the interiors yields proof their beauty is much deeper than a skin of gleaming fiberglass, and also underscores the importance the designers have placed on the distaff endorsement.

Not surprisingly, the aim to appeal to women has resulted in some distinct improvement.

Aware that a woman looks first to the kitchen, designers have up-graded galleys in most luxury craft to include larger stoves and refrigerators; many include ovens this year as standard or optional equipment. Specifically, the three-burner countertop stove is now the norm where once a two-burner unit was standard. And electric power has replaced alcohol in many instances.

REFRIGERATORS, once a cheese-and-beer proposition, are bigger, fully lined and color coordinated. In several of the houseboats and one or two large cruisers, refrigerators are full wall units.

Several 36-foot sportfishermen come with eye-level wall ovens, an improvement straight from the architectural magazines. One electronic model will roast a meat course in a matter of minutes.

Even the electric garbage disposal can be found on board this year, and more shelf space and easy-to-clean counter tops and floors make the clean-up chores easier.

Indoor-outdoor carpeting, wall-to-wall, is standard in virtually all luxury boats on the market. So, too, are such wife-winning ways with interiors as color coordinated lined curtains and slipcovers; wipe-clean surfaces throughout in richly-grained wood patterns; fuller, more spacious heads (frequently two) with showers, ventilation, and electric flush toilets; fluorescent-lit vanities with dressers; more closet space; and general roominess.

TODAY YOU can order your yacht with air conditioning and built-in stereo and TV.

The campaign to win the women's vote is clearer than ever this year. Designers and builders, determined to remove a man's boats from the status of "the other woman" in his wife's eye, have unmistakably brought the afterguard to the fore in the luxury yacht design — and made some marked improvements for everybody in the bargain.

WITH THE OFFICIAL start of the 1970 San Francisco Bay yachting season drawing near, Peter English, rear, and Jerry Gunn put a new coat of paint on the bottom of the Galatea at the San Francisco Yacht Club harbor in Tiburon. They crew on the Galatea, giving skipper Allan Laidlaw a hand. (Independent-Journal photo by Alfred M. Arn)

Big Sailboats Put Stress On Comfort

Competitive Qualities Are Unaffected By The Changes

Stock cruising sailboats for 1970 show more attention to interior comfort for the crew than in previous years, yet they still carry features designed to give them a competitive edge in racing.

There is an increasing trend toward the fin keelspade rudder configuration along with high aspect ratio sails, more ballast-to-displacement ratio, and small, lightweight diesel engines in the auxiliary sailboats.

FEMALE FIRST mates will appreciate the better galleys, dinettes, and berth arrangements in many of the 1970 models.

The O'Day 23 - foot keel-centered sloop utilizes a simple mechanism to raise the cabin top to increase headroom from four feet six inches to six feet three inches, with side curtains for weather protection. The cabin of this trailerable cruising sailboat sleeps five.

Mid-ship cockpit, double cabin layouts providing greater cabin privacy are found in Newport Boats' Concept 25 and several imported English boats.

THE FIN KEEL-spade rudder arrangement common to many racing class boats appears on boats as big as the Columbia 43, designed by Bill Tripp. Also available with a centerboard, the Columbia 43 has a waterline length of 32 feet six inches with a broad beam affording fine stability and plenty of living space below. The boat is a flush deck sloop.

Chris-Craft's new Pawnee 26, built in Taiwan, has a high ballast-to-displacement ratio, as does the Grampian 30 (46 per cent), the Tartan 34 from Douglass & McLeod, the Jensen's Cal 2-30, the Allied 39 cutter, and Larsson Trade USA's Vega 27.

Nautica Corp. is producing what may well be the smallest ketch-rigged yacht around. Only 20 feet long, the keel-centerboarder sleeps four and has a galley and head. Like most of the cruising sailboats available today, the hull is fiberglass and the spars aluminum.

THE VIVACITY 24 from Russell Marine has a special barbecue galley and twin ice boxes for use from cabin and cockpit.

Among the new small cruising sailboats available are the 18 foot Alberg-design Typhoon by Cape Dory with 160 square feet of sail, MacGregor Yacht's Venture 22-foot retractable keel boat sleeping five, and the Gary Mull-designed Newport 20 from Lindsey Plastics. Nautica Corp.'s 16-foot Marauder, a keel centerboard boat sleeping two, is one of the smallest.

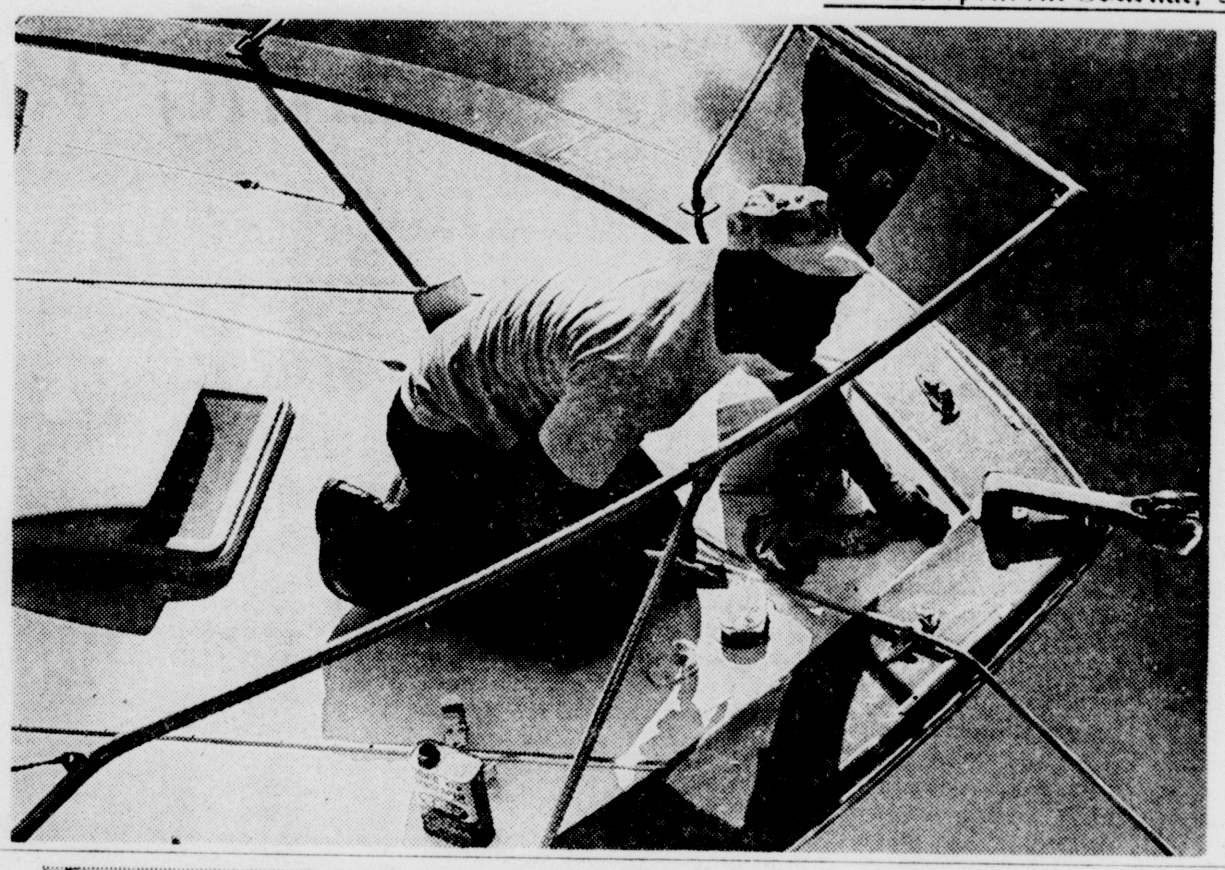
The trend to diesel power for auxiliary sailboats is more evident this year, notably in boats from 28 feet up. Despite initial higher cost compared with gasoline engines, the diesel offers sailors more long range dependability, greater protection from fire and explosions, and operating fuel economies.

The trend has been boosted by the development of smaller, lighter weight engines that fit into the tight space and rigid weight requirements of racing-cruising sailboats. Diesel power is available on Chris-Craft's 35-foot Caribbean, the Islander Yacht 37-footer, and the Larsson Signolla 34-footer, as well as a number of others.



RAFAEL GARCIA is pictured at work on the Circle in the Sausalito Yacht Harbor. The boat is not his. But some day, he says, he will have a boat of his own. In the meantime, he is happy at the opportunity to work upon and around the fine watercraft that abound in the waters and the harbors of Marin and its neighboring San Francisco Bay counties.

You Can Take Good Boating Pictures

Follow These Simple Rules To Retain The Pleasure Of Your Outings

By FRANK ROHR JR.

There's probably no sport more suited to exciting and memorable photography than pleasure boating, and the best looking ships' logs are those with photo sections.

Whether it's a silent anchorage whose peace will vividly recall the cruise, or a boisterous family weekend complete with kids, picnic hampers, rain squalls and brilliant sunshine, good pictures can increase the pleasure in boating.

YOU NEED NOT be a skilled semi-professional to produce good boating photos. With luck, the beginning amateur is likely to snap the one great picture of the trip.

There are, however, some rules and precautions which will reduce the element of chance and help insure good results.

Marine photography demands cameras with adjustable lenses. The moments are fleeting, and usually include action, often distant; so for all but the most tranquil scenes, fixed-focus types are not sufficiently versatile. The 35-millimeter camera in an adjustable, single-lens reflex model, is compact and perfect for sequences on board your own boat.

A long distance or zoom lens will "pull in" nearby scenic and sport subjects.

THE TWIN-LENS reflex while more bulky and capable of taking only a 12-exposure roll, can be invaluable, especially for color photography. For example, there's nothing like a good two and a quarter inch square color negative for big color prints, for magazine reproduction, if and when you enter this field.

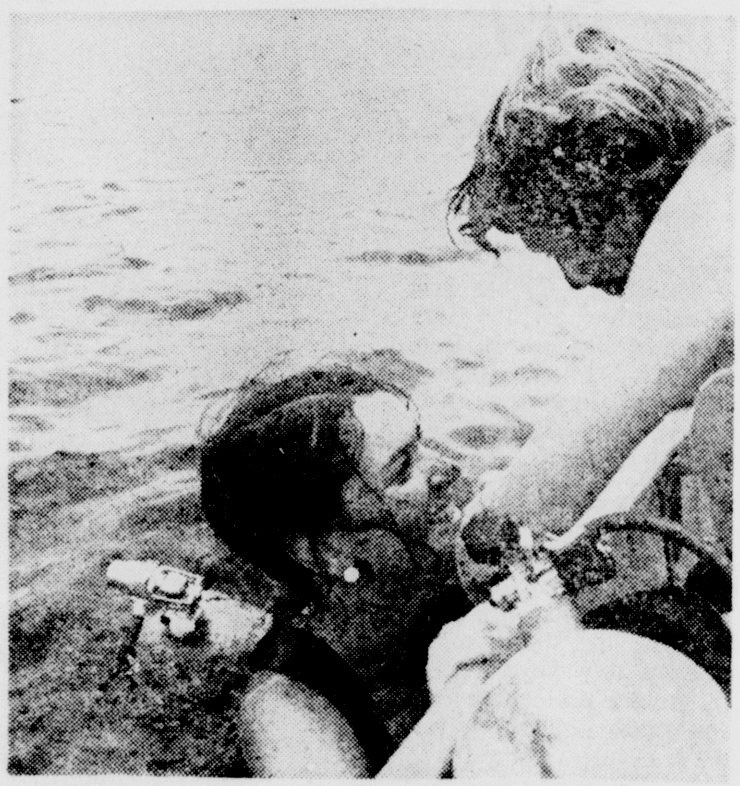
Simple cameras which provide a good introduction to marine photography, such as the Kodak Instamatic line, use foolproof film cartridges and, in more sophisticated models, have automatic electric-eye exposure control. Remember that the basic fixed-focus types may have great depth of field, but employ a relatively slow lens—about 1/50th of a second—which is better for still scenes than action.

In both power and sail, action is primary to good boat photography. Life aboard tends to look fairly sedentary in photos. Landings and departures, guest arrivals, sail drill, racing drill, racing starts and finishes, picnics and swimming parties are perfect subjects.

REMEMBER, when photographing other boats from your own deck, it's easier to stop action coming towards or going directly away from the camera than at right angles to the lens. Distant action is always more easily stopped than the same thing close up. Even the simplest cameras can photograph action by "panning"—following the moving subject with the lens as the shutter is tripped. You'll get a blurry background, but a sharp subject and a great impression of speed.

Clamp a lens shade on your camera and keep it there all day. Out on the water, the glare and glancing light have a far greater effect on what you think is proper exposure than they do ashore.

Since boats are at best unstable, use at least 1/125th of a second shutter speed. With fast films in bright sunlight, 1/250th of a second, and, at close focus, even 1/500th is indicated. Try to keep the horizon line level; it makes heeled sailboat and planing powerboat scenes even more dramatic.



ON OR OFF the water, the same general picture-taking rule holds true when people are involved as subjects: Your shots generally will be more interesting if taken close-up. If you can't get near, a long focus camera lens will help.

LET THE CREW become natural actors. Photograph them while they're working, playing, talking. Ocean racing and round - the - buoys competition provide excellent photo opportunities.

Good spots for photography on sailboats (unless there's a short-tacking duel in progress) are the transom and the high side of the deckhouse. On powerboats, use the flying bridge, the "back porch" and the bow pulpit.

On bright days, a yellow filter will highlight sea and clouds, and give otherwise hazy scenes dramatic definition. Remember to compensate by opening up to one full aperture stop when shooting through this filter. Take it off when you photograph people; it gives even the deepest tan instant anemia.

IN ALL CASES, consult your meter, whether built-in or separate. But bear in mind that brilliant sun and sea often require a half-stop less exposure than normal. This correction factor can vastly improve your photos. Don't be afraid to close way down and shoot into the sun. Backlighted marine photography can produce dazzling effects.

At times, bracketing the subject with a variety of exposures provides insurance against mistakes. A wide angle lens is helpful in close quarters.

Salt water is murder on delicate camera parts; the briefest wetting can put your camera out of action. Keep it in its case, with the strap around your neck. If you have more than one camera, a water-resistant bag is indispensable. Make the bag fast on deck when you're not shooting. Never, but never leave the bag adrift, unless the sight of all that expensive gear bouncing overboard won't give you heart failure.

FILM, TOO, suffers from high temperatures and humidity. Don't leave a loaded camera sitting in the sun, and don't keep exposed rolls of film on board longer than necessary.

There's a great variety of film on the market today. Familiarize yourself with several types in black-and-white and color, and stick to them for consistent results.

One fast black-and-white film, for example, is Kodak Tri-X in both 120 and 35 mm. With an ASA of 400, it has great flexibility. You can use it in natural light at dawn and dusk, shoot successfully with it on the darkest days, and stop the fastest action on bright ones. A good standard setting with this film on sunny days is 1/250th of a second at f/22.

IN COLOR, Kodak's Ektachrome-X for richness and most action situations is a good choice. With an ASA of 64, a standard setting in bright sunlight is 1/125 of a second at f/11; down south, however, and on exceptionally brilliant days up north, consult your meter for a setting of 1/125th of a second at f/16. High Speed Ektachrome, with an ASA of 125, gives you even more versatility in color action. Slower film, like Kodachrome II, has great richness and subtlety of tone.

A sky filter, which needs no correction, will eliminate an occasional over-blue effect in color photography.

Greater Sportfishing Emphasis Is Yet Another Trend In 1970

If continuity and widespread adaptation are marks of a trend, then trend-spotters viewing the 1970 fleet of small and medium sized power craft can count at least six trends:

Bigger power on smaller boats.

A stress on safety — through sink-proof hulls — that is virtually industrywide in all models this year.

Stern drive power on the increase.

Continued emphasis on sportfishing craft and the recreational fisherman market.

Across-the-board endorsement by builders of the split-cockpit layout in medium size (15-24 foot) runabouts.

STILL MORE signs of the Detroit influence in small boat styling.

At least a dozen builders of power craft are marketing boats which qualify as high-performance craft, small boats which go fast — 40 miles per hour and up. Generally, these are two-and four-passenger designs, sleek in appearance and with hulls shaped just for speed. They are powered by stern drives and, in some cases, jet-drive engines from 210 to 500 horsepower in single and twin installations.

As examples: Monza Marine's Monza 19, which can take a power plant of up to 400 horsepower; Arrow Marine, a 17½-footer with 500 horsepower jet propulsion; Chris-Craft's XK 19 runabout, a Jim Wynne-designed speedster whose 230 horsepower drive and deep-V hull combine for speeds in excess of 50 miles per hour; Enterprise Yacht's 27½ foot Super Sport 288, powered by twin 255s and a V-drive train. And, of course, those gleaming Donzi designs are back—the smallest of which (the Ski Sporter), at 16 feet overall, tops the 50 miles per hour mark with a single 165 Interceptor stern drive unit.

SPEED, EXPECTEDLY, is not cheap; the aforementioned craft carry price tags ranging from about $6,000 to a top of $18,000.

And, of course, they've influenced the design of other small power craft — those which might be termed junior high performance boats. They don't have a sternful of horsepower — but they still look fast. Sports car styling elements such as dished Gran Prix steering wheel, racing stripes, bucket seats, two-plus-two consoles, proliferate instrumentation, air scoops — these all contribute to the look of speed, real or illusory.

Count among these hot-looking designs Glastron's 14 foot Jetflite, Carlson Contender, and Arrow's Super Sidewinder 16. All three are outboards but with hull shapes that should bring them near the 40 miles per hour criterion of high performance craft.

VIRTUALLY EVERY small and medium range power craft has built-in foam flotation this year. Foam is now distributed in side walls as well as boat bottoms, and the balance factor has been pretty thoroughly engineered.

Stern drive power? This year, it provides perhaps another indicator of a trend to serve the boating public's apparently growing appetite for speed; 210 horsepower seems the most popular power unit — in the 16-23 foot runabout class. But optional higher power is available in almost all instances.

This year, a trend which first surfaced a few seasons back is more marked than ever — the inclusion of the open fisherman-type craft in a builder's line. These are clean-lined boats with uncluttered cockpits, usually in the 20- to 24-foot range — a helmsman's console, located amidships or slightly aft, a pair of vee-seats forward, and that's usually it. Some designs of this type are easily capable of speeds over 35 miles per hour.

ONE POPULAR trend in the power fleet this year: widespread adaptation of the split cockpit layout among runabout models. These bowriders, as they are often called, do away with foredecks entirely and utilize the resulting space as forward seating area.

The design is especially effective in wide, or blunt-nosed bows, and increases the overall seating area considerably.

The most standard item among the smaller power fleet for 1970 is the standard equipment list. For most boats it reads this way:

"Deep-padded fold-down seats, full instrumentation, fuel gauge and tank, mechanical steering, positive flotation, bow and stern rails, bilge pump and blower (stern drive models), deck hardware, navigational lights. . ."

Convenience For Operator Is Key In New Outboards

New Refinements Are Certain To Add To Boating Pleasure

Changes, modifications, engineering refinements, most aimed at greater operator convenience, are seen on the 1970 line up of outboard motors.

For example, all new Mercury motors have new corrosion-proof, plastic water pumps, and jet prop exhaust for less maintenance, less noise.

THE JOHNSON'S have sturdier stern brackets, starter interlocks and better air scoops.

Molybdenum-filled piston rings reduce cylinder wall friction to a minimum in the new Chrysler outboards. This contributes to performance and reliability.

On Evinrude's 60 horsepower Triumph, additional power is wrung out through three changes: a third intake passage is added, new piston rings with angled construction are incorporated, and carburetion improvements contribute to easier breathing.

The four-cycle outboard from Fisher-Pierce is fine-tuned and honed by the manufacturer for even better fuel economy and smoother idling.

SMALL THINGS? Yes. But important to the skippers who buy and use outboards and want maximum performance and minimum grief during the boating season.

The big motors are bigger this year, too. Kiekhaefer Mercury now tops its line with a new 135 horsepower, six-cylinder motor. Johnson and Evinrude have machines of 115 horsepower, and Chrysler has a 120.

Despite improvements and new features, outboard prices remain highly attractive. Smallest motors in the one and a half to two horsepower class cost about $150. Fishing motors from 10 to 15 horsepower are priced about $450; and skiing motors in the 50 horsepower class are tagged at around $800. Top power machines for the hot outboard boats and cruisers list for from $1,300 to $1,600.

USE OF capacitor discharge electronic ignition is spreading from the largest outboards down to the smaller ones. Along with electronic ignition, surface gap spark plugs are finding increasing popularity in outboards of all sizes.

Electric starting is offered on outboards down to the 10 horsepower class, while long and short shafts are available on almost every size of kicker. Most of the motors are water-cooled, but several of the smallest fishing and auxiliary outboards are air-cooled.

Propeller options are wide this year. Most motor manufacturers offer props for racing, water skiing and cruising. In addition, the larger propeller manufacturers are offering special wheels for stock outboard motors in many materials, including low cost plastic.

PROVISION FOR battery charging receives new attention from the manufacturers. For example, nine-ampere flywheel alternators are standard equipment on the 115, 85 and 60 horsepower Evinrudes. A 10-ampere generator with automatic voltage regulation is part of the 40 horsepower Lark.

Keen engineering continues to push up horsepower yield per cubic inch of piston displacement. Mercury's new 40 horsepower motor, for example, displaces only 33.3 cubic inches. Only a few years ago it was almost unheard of for a production engine to produce as much as one horse per cube. In 1970 it's a reality surpassed.

It's those little engineering refinements and constant plugging on the part of outboard engine company's research departments that make these things possible.

IT MAY SEEM a bit early, but those warm late spring and summer days when sun bathing becomes a California pastime really aren't so far away. And what better place to enjoy the sunshine than in the privacy of your own boat? It's the ideal way to escape the crowded conditions of today's beaches.

Carry Extra Line Along On Boat Outings

Before leaving on your next boating outing, the Evinrude people suggest you make up a spare line or two and take it along.

A bow, stern, or anchor line may be lost or used for some other purpose, so extra line always come in handy.

To prevent unnecessary grief, make a check of all lines before going out in your boat. A little extra time spent in checking that line may save time and equipment. Lines are quite often neglected.

The Inboard Engines Proliferate, Diversify

There's A Wider Range With More Options For Buyers In 1970

The inboard engine offering for 1970 has been likened by one boatman to the expanding universe, "scattering ever outward, yet never decreasing in density. They seem to proliferate while they diversify!"

Conventional production engines currently span twice the range offered a few years ago and offer four times the number of options, features and transmissions.

Inboard marine engines for pleasure boats now range from eight to 525 horsepower, and from one to eight cylinders in both gasoline and diesel.

Each manufacturer offers a selection of power trains: bobtail, manual or hydraulic transmission, direct drive or reduction geared, V-drive, angle drive and outdrive. Yes, and there are turbine jet drives too.

CLOSED CIRCUIT, fresh-water cooling is a popular option on most gasoline engines and is offered as standard on some. Most of the new diesels come through with fresh-water cooling as part of the standard package. The closed system offers faster warm-up, better control of temperature and much reduced internal corrosion.

Diesels have shed even more weight while increasing horsepower output per pound of weight. Smaller diesels for auxiliary sailboat use are blossoming. Fuel oil burners from five to 35 horsepower are now offered by several manufacturers for the raghoister wanting the safety and economy of diesel propulsion.

Diesels have adopted the outdrive, too. Or is it the other way around? The houseboat explosion has contributed to this development since they usually are designed for outdrive power. The result is the happy marriage of the diesel to the outdrive in a wide range of powers.

BIGGER BORES, shorter strokes and V-configurations have made some of the current diesels spittin' images of their gas burning cousins. Several of the high speed, light weight Vs look startingly like automobile motors. The gargantuan, ungainly diesel of yesteryear is gone.

The high performance two-cycle diesel has expanded its scope. Manufactured by Detroit Diesel for many years in a selection of powers and displacements, the type is now joined by Chrysler's Nissan.

Turbocharging is on the upswing for both gasoline and diesel engines, with particular emphasis on the latter.

WHILE WOMEN'S skirt hemlines go up, engine profiles go down, albeit perhaps not in the same ratio. Numerous new inboards are offered in slant or angled versions, and a few are horizontal. Lower engines allow lower cockpit decks, contributing to cruiser comfort and safety.

Engine cost on a horsepower basis remains a bright part of the boating picture. A typical 200 horsepower gasoline power plant complete with transmission and all accessories, can still be bought for under $2,000. Typical price for a 200 horsepower diesel is about $6,000. But diesel prices vary more widely for a given power than gas engine prices.

"Toned-down" and "cooled" versions of gas engines are marketed by two or three manufacturers. Such "de-souped" mills are aimed squarely at the power cruiser man who cruises extensively and hard—and who wants reliability above all. Lower compression, slower rotation, beefier parts, tougher valves, mark these work horses. Seamaster and Palmer are typical manufacturers.

ELECTRONIC ignition, popular on larger outboards, is appearing with increased frequency on inboards. Advantage is hotter spark that can fire fouled plugs, better idling, superior high speed performance, and increased breaker point life or even complete elimination of the points. On some new engines, a slotted disc replaces the points. On others, tiny rotating magnets do the work.

Attention to details on the 1970 inboard engines means starter motors are placed higher on the engines, away from bilge water and easy to service. Better drive arrangements and multiple V-belts are appearing on alternators and cooling water pumps. Exhaust manifolds are designed and placed to prevent back-flow of condensate into the cylinders.

At least two firms offer engine conversion kits in addition to complete marine engines. Kits for both automobile engines and truck diesels are available.

A SEPARATOR fiberglass inboard is a new and sporty addition to the Correct Craft fleet. The spiffy 16-footer seats six.

Plastic Bags Handy

Plastic bags are useful on board not only for keeping foodstuffs dry, but also for taking wet laundry or garbage ashore.

A Booklet Lists Films

A booklet listing nearly 400 boating films for showing to clubs, groups, schools, etc., is available from the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers.

The pocket-sized booklet lists films on boating adventure, cruising, boat construction, racing, fishing, water skiing, diving, navigation, swimming, sailing, marine engines, boat maintenance, education and weather lore. Each film is described briefly and rental costs are given. Many of the films, however, are available free. The distributor of each film is listed.

The directory, called "Boating Films", is published jointly by the NAEBM and the Boating Industry Association. For your free copy write to NAEBM, 537 Steamboat Road, Greenwich, Conn., 06830.

Boating Industry Optimistic For '70

Recreational Craft Sales Expected To Show Gains

The pleasure boating industry is expected to weather any federal anti-inflationary moves during 1970, possibly expanding its already record dollar volume, and at the very least holding its own in an era of tight money.

"I don't think the industry will enjoy the same rate of growth during 1970 that it has known in the past," said an industry spokesman recently, "but I am confident that the broad base we have built over the past decade will support any temporary shrinkage in available dollars."

Recreational boating recorded a new high in retail sales in 1969 of $3,292,000,000 worth of new and used boats, motors, accessories, safety equipment, fuel, insurance, docking, maintenance, services and club memberships. This represents a 5 per cent expansion of the market each year during the 1960s.

A NUMBER OF manufacturers reported record sales and earnings for fiscal years ending in 1969 among them Outboard Marine Corp., whose sales were up 47 million dollars from 1968 and net earnings rose $1,416,000, and Chris-Craft Industries Inc., which reported a sales increase of $13,294,000 and a rise in net profits of $948,000.

At the end of the model year from September, 1968, to August, 1969, the industry reported an increase in the combined dollar value of shipments of motors, trailers, and all boats of 14.9 per cent. Unit shipments in certain categories were down from the previous model year, however: outboard motors, down 1.3 per cent; inboard boats, down 8.6 per cent; sailboats, down 0.2 per cent; and canoes, down 2.9 per cent. Still, all product categories except canoes showed gains in dollar value of shipments, indicating a general rise in dollar value per unit augmented by a willingness on the part of the consumer to "buy bigger": bigger motors (motors of 45 horsepower and up commanded a 5 per cent greater share of the motor market) and bigger boats (the average length of outboard boats sold reached a 10-year high of 15.9 feet.)

Shipments of marine accessories for the model year were ahead 13.2 per cent in dollar value over the previous model year.

AT A GLANCE, estimates of the pleasure boating market during 1969, shaped up as follows:

BOATING HIGHLIGHTS OF 1969
43,230,000 Americans used the waterways more than once.
8,646,000 watercraft were used including —
615,000 inboard boats and auxiliary sailboats.
5,101,000 outboard boats
598,000 sailboats without inboard power
2,332,000 rowboats, canoes, and miscellaneous craft
707,000 inboard gasoline and diesel engines were in use
7,101,000 outboard motors were in use
3,660,000 boat trailers were in use

ESTIMATED SALES FOR 1969 INCLUDED:
310,000 outboard boats
510,000 outboard motors
49,000 inboard/outdrive boats
295,000 boat trailers
35,000 sailboats
26,000 canoes
2,000 houseboats
6,000 pontoon deck boats

There was continued merger and acquisition activity in the boating field during 1969, a trend that is expected to continue during the early 1970s.

ADVANCES IN technology and a growing desire on the part of boat owners to escape the scraping and painting chores have evoked a swing to more carefree materials. Where U.S. Coast Guard numbering statistics in 1960 showed 51.8 per cent of all numbered boats having wooden hulls, the percentage dropped to 34.7 by 1968 as aluminum and fiberglass reinforced plastics increased their shares of the market. The growing use of aluminum in boating generated a 93 per cent increase in the poundage of aluminum going into boats and engines in the decade just closed, reaching an estimated 122,000,000 pounds in 1969. The consumption of fiberglass reinforced plastics by boating reached an estimated 278,000,000 pounds last year, an increase of 209 per cent in 10 years.

A recent survey by the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers showed that fewer builders were using the full range of hull materials. In 1969, 87 builders were using aluminum, compared to 91 the year before; 530 were using fiberglass compared to 537 the year before; and the trend continued for all materials, including steel and rubber.

An industry source reported that while boating dealers averaged 15 per cent higher gross sales during 1969, their margins of profit were smaller than in previous years. The increased cost of doing business generated by higher wages, raises in interest rates on floor-planning monies, and other jumps in overhead expenses absorbed more than the increase in gross sales.

More And Better Marine Accessories

New Products Mean Added Boating Enjoyment

The evolving technology of the leisure sciences, with a smattering of space science, all but obliterate the great age of "iron men and wooden ships" for the modern boatmen.

The 1970 crop of marine electronics, hardware, coatings, cordage, and even clothing promises greater comfort, safety, and labor minimization.

BOATMEN WHO have squinted and strained in the bright sun to read their depth sounders will enjoy the digital readout depth indicators found on some of the 1970 models. There are no blips or flashing lights to decipher, just simple, easy-to-read dials with instant depth soundings in bold, familiar letters.

Sounding more like a piece of space equipment than a boat accessory, the Hadrian dead-reckoning computer from Brookes & Gatehouse is a fully automatic device that shows the boat's position at all times, subject to the navigator's making a correct assessment of the tidal set and leeway. It shows on its dial any distance accidentally made to port or starboard of the prescribed course.

For the sail enthusiast with a yen to really tune his sails, Palmer Johnson has introduced the Baron efficiency comparitor. This device interrelates amplified water speed and apparent wind speed (via an anemometer) to give the skipper a true picture of the trim efficiency of his sails.

THEN THERE is the wind-powered trickle charger from Allan Marine. Installed on the deck or wherever it can catch the breeze, the charger will maintain a battery's charge as long as there is a five-knot wind or more to spin the propeller. The charger is designed for 12-volt batteries.

Another labor saver is the Superwinch, electric boat trailer winch with remote control, stop/lock gearing, instant off switch, and 20 feet of steel ca-

A STRONG FLUORESCENT polyethylene ski rope is a big boon to water sportsmen. The Sun-Glo, manufactured by Berkley, is virtually impossible to lose in the water. Boat operators can see it easily, reducing the danger of cross-overs and tangles.

LOW-COST PROTECTION for boat finishes that suffer so frequently from scuffing and marring when banged against dock edges is obtainable through Salisbury Dock-Gard edging, made of tough, heavy-duty white rubber with DuPont Nordel by Salisbury Rubber Products. It comes in two designs, standard and a special product that fits over edges.

ble. It is marketed by the company of the same name.

With anti-pollution the topic of the day, Raritan Engineering is manufacturing an electrochemical chlorinator for all force-flush marine toilets that reportedly destroys 99.96 per cent of all bacteria and pulverizes all waste.

TO RID CABINS of stale air, Beckson Manufacturing offers a new cabin ventilator, the Vent-O-Mate, that sucks out as much as 350 cubic feet per hour, in only a two-knot breeze without creating any draft in the cabin.

An anti-glare shield on the Ray-Line searchlights from Portable Light Co. is said to eliminate reflective deck glare by cutting beam spillage and concentrating the light rays directly ahead.

Marine coatings are also being improved for greater durability and protection as well as enhanced eye appeal. Baltimore Copper Paint Co. has a new Vinyltex "Tie-Coat" to assure better adhesion between the barrier coat and antifouling paint on aluminum and steel hulls.

BORDEN Chemical Co. is making its debut in the marine field with the Sparvar line of easy-to-apply aerosol paints, while Pettit Paint Co. is offering its new Trinidad 75, priced at over $60 a gallon, said to maintain a toxic efficiency for as long as 22 months in tropical waters. It contains up to 75 per cent cuprous oxide.

Woolsey has a new high gloss topside paint said to retain its color and finish for up to three times longer than more conventional topside paints. The secret is an exclusive silicone copolymer formula that gives a mirror-smooth finish.

Practical boating fashions has not been immune to change.

Gentex has come up with a sailing vest that allows complete freedom of movement and fits persons weighing 90 pounds or more. The firm states it is the only such vest to be granted the seal of the North American Yacht Racing Union, and designed to qualify for U.S. Coast Guard approval as a special purpose life saving device.

WITH ALL THE new products to ease the tasks of yachtsmen, the old skills of the seafarers still frequently prove profitable to the modern boater. Here, at the Lowrie Yacht Harbor, San Rafael, Harry Shiff, a Coast Guard Auxiliary flotilla commander, uses "turk's head knots" to attach some binding on his Terna. Knot-tying has long been an essential element of seamanship. (Independent-Journal photo)

HOME-MADE ANCHOR IS TOO RISKY

Too many pleasure boatmen ignore the importance of carrying a good anchor warns the Evenrude News Service.

Although an empty paint can filled with cement qualifies as an "anchor," these home-made specials do not have that extra margin of safety for the unusual situations.

If all anchors "look alike" to you, it's time to consult a qualified marine dealer. He'll be able to tell you which type is needed in the areas you plan to do your boating.

Anchors aren't all alike. Some are made for mud bottoms while others are more suited to rocky or sand bottoms.

Adequate anchor line is an other important phase of safety. The magic number is six. The line should be six times the depth of the water you're anchoring in. For example, if you're anchoring in 10 feet of water, the line should be 60 feet long.

The longer the line, the greater the holding power.

Keds® Mainsails. For Landlubbers, too!

We built the Mainsail with sea-dogs in mind. With zigzag cut soles for sure gripping on slick decks, quick-drying, sturdy canvas uppers. But these Keds were just too handsome, too comfortable. Landlubbers wanted them, too. They find the non-skid soles are just as good for slippery places on land. So many Mainsails are stranded on land. Keep an eye on yours. WHILE Jim Fisher, 13, and Ruan Lakovich, 3, loll in the small sailboat and enjoy the sunshine, breezes, and water, Rod Lakovich prepares to snap their picture. The scene is the Lowrie Yacht Harbor, San Rafael, just one of the many Marin places where preparations are at their peak for the opening of the 1970 San Francisco Bay boating season. The 'Daysailer' Fleet—

They Are Great For Family Fun

Excitement and family fun are promised by the 1970 show of one-design sailboats and daysailers, many with self-bailing and self-righting features along with retractable keels for easier portability.

There are also several smaller sized catamarans, sailing dinghies with flexibile spars, a nine-foot trimaran¼ and a new Olympic class, the Soling.

The daysailer fleet represents the output of more than two dozen companies as well as developments in England, France, Norway, and Scotland.

THE NEW Gemico 17 foot Wildfire combines the design talents of two notables, Ian Proctor and George O'Day. It has a retractable keel and self-bailing cockpit and lists at $1,975. Gemico's Soling 27 foot Olympic class keel boat sells for around $4,650 less sails, while the 14 foot Skipper dinghy and the CD-11 sailboard, which weighs only 50 pounds and also is from the Proctor-O'Day design team, sell for around $300.

Annapolis Sailboat Builders, Inc., has introduced a 15 foot Pirate, a centerboarder with selfbailing cockpit and built-in foam flotation. The same firm also markets an 18 foot Discoverer with selfbailing and a mast that's stepped on the foredeck.

FROM THE makers of the Sailfish and Sunfish, AMF Alcort, comes the 14 foot Flying Fish, a catrigged sailing dinghy with flexible fiberglass mast and fully battened Dacron sail, for $1,100.

New from Newport Boats are the 16 foot International Contender and the 15 foot Surprise, engineered to be a family's first boat. The latter carries 110 square feet of sail, is self-rescuing, and sells complete for $1,235, while the International Contender features streamlined rudder and centerboard, hiking straps, complete trapeze equipment, vang and Cunningham sail controls, and is priced, less sails, at $1,395.

Newport is also marketing the aluminum Petrel with main and jib for $899, a 19 foot Holiday daysailer, anod the eight foot Flipper marconi rigged catboard.

An asymmetrical catamaran, the 13 foot eight inch ASI-CAT from ADF, Inc., is said to have the stability of a catamaran and the maneuverability of a monohull. It knocks down for transporting or storage by removing two wing nuts. Price, with 85 square foot lug sail, is $650.

ANOTHER NEW sloop with self-bailing is the 17 foot Sandpiper from Goldfish Sailboat Co., makers of the 14 foot Sea Hawk II Scow, and the eight and a half foot Teddy Bear dinghy.

With upwards of 12,000 "420" sloops competing around the world, this one design is growing in popularity. Nautica Corp. markets the Lanaverve-built version from France for $1,200, less sails.

O'Day Co. has two new daysailers, the 21 foot Yingling by Norwegian designer Jan Linge, and the O'Day 15, a planing centerboarder that is self-bailing and self-righting.

Douglass and McLeod, Inc., has introduced its new C-Lark 14 foot sloop. It is designed to meet the needs of colleges and sailing instruction classes.

WEIGHING ONLY 65 pounds the seven foot Econo-Sailer dinghy from Atlantic Laminates selsl for $259, with a 35 square foot sail, and is one of the smallest sailboats available.

A longer version of last year's Hobie Cat is available from Coast Catamaran. The new model is 16 feet (last year's was 14 feet) and like its kid brother has asymmetrical hulls and a trampoline cockpit.

A unique nine foot trimaran molded of ABS plastic is made by Snark Products. Call the Triumph, it weighs 85 pounds and comes with lug-rigged sail and motor well, for $349.

One In Nine Families Own Craft

By HARRY CRAFT

A pleasure boat in the family is usually a healthy sign of "the good life."

But boats, except for the higher-priced luxury cruisers and sailers, can no longer be taken necessarily as status symbols. There are just too many of them around.

It is difficult to be smug or snobbish about owning a boat these days when one family in every 12 in California is registered as having something that floats on the water. In Marin County, which has water on three sides, the incidence of boat ownership is even higher — about one in nine families.

TRUE, MANY of these are the garden variety that can be hitched to the back of any family car and towed to bay, lakes and rivers. But they have served to make the attitude on boating and boat ownership "sophisticated." And turnover ratios are high in Marin, with many "graduates" moving into ownership of de luxe models each year.

As a sport, boating ranks among the foremost recreational pursuits. During the model year ended Aug. 31, 1969, Americans bought more than 500,000 outboard motors, 550,000 boats of all types and 250,000 boat trailers. The total value of these three products alone came to 1.2 billion dollars — and that was 14 per cent over the year before. The value of the countless other products and services related to boating cannot even be calculated with any accuracy, since so many different categories are involved.

A guess on the part of this writer as to what the pleasure boating industry means to Marin retail sales would be something like five million dollars annually. But its impact on the county's total business is much higher than that when boat rentals, storage, fuel, dock rentals, construction and taxes are considered.

THE LIST OF Marin commercial establishments getting most or a substantial part of their revenues from this industry has always been an impressive one. Our directory of services this year is not materially different from those in previous boating editions, but there have been a number of new additions (particularly among new boat dealers) since last year, a few changes in name and some firms have dropped out of business.

The Right Shoes

Leather-soled shoes slip very easily on boat decks, wet rocks and the pine needles and leaves on forest floors. Boating experts suggest outfitting everyone on your camping cruise with a good pair of boat shoes.

IT WAS NOT yet officially the 1970 boating season, which begins May 3. And the skies were a bit gray and the bay breezes nippy. Yet the waters of San Francisco Bay were already dotted with the sails of boaters unable to await the formal opening gun. Want To Go Into Marina Business?

A supplement to "Marinas — Recommendations for Design, Construction & Maintenance," the keystone in the marina publications series available from the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, will be ready for distribution in May.

The most recent updating of this comprehensive text on planning and building marinas was made in 1961. The first edition of the book appeared in 1939, with a supplement appearing in 1947. The book was completely rewritten in 1961.

Author of the book Charles A. Chaney has designed hundreds of marinas across the country and has written several other books on the subject of marina design.

The present supplement will update the technical sections of the book to cover new materials and new regulations governing marina construction and equipment.

Other books in the marina series are as follows: "Accounting Manual for Marinas and Boatyards" — a guide to accounting systems for marinas.

"Boat Handling Equipment in the Modern Marina" — an evaluation of boat handling techniques and equipment.

"The Modern Marina" — a guide to those areas that affect marina development, such as location, traffic, financing, local politics, profit ratios, gross revenues, and others.

"Marina Operations and Service" — a look at the small craft facility through the eyes of the boatman.

"Study of Marina Revenues & Costs, Profit Ratios, Slip Rental Rates, And Some Boat Owners Impressions of Marina Services."

"Marina Architects, Consultants, Designers, Engineers" — a listing of professional services.

The entire set of publications is available for $22 from the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, 537 Steamboat Road, Greenwich, Conn., 06830.

Safety Booklet Covers Basics

"A Safety Primer for Pleasure Boat Operators" available from the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers is a guide to safe equipping and operation of small craft.

It covers most of the basics of small boat handling and is suited for use in instruction programs.

NAEBM is located at 537 Steamboat Road, Greenwich, Conn., 06830.

Boats Are Safer Than Cars, Planes

People who like their sport motorized are safer in a boat, according to an analysis of accident statistics conducted for the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers.

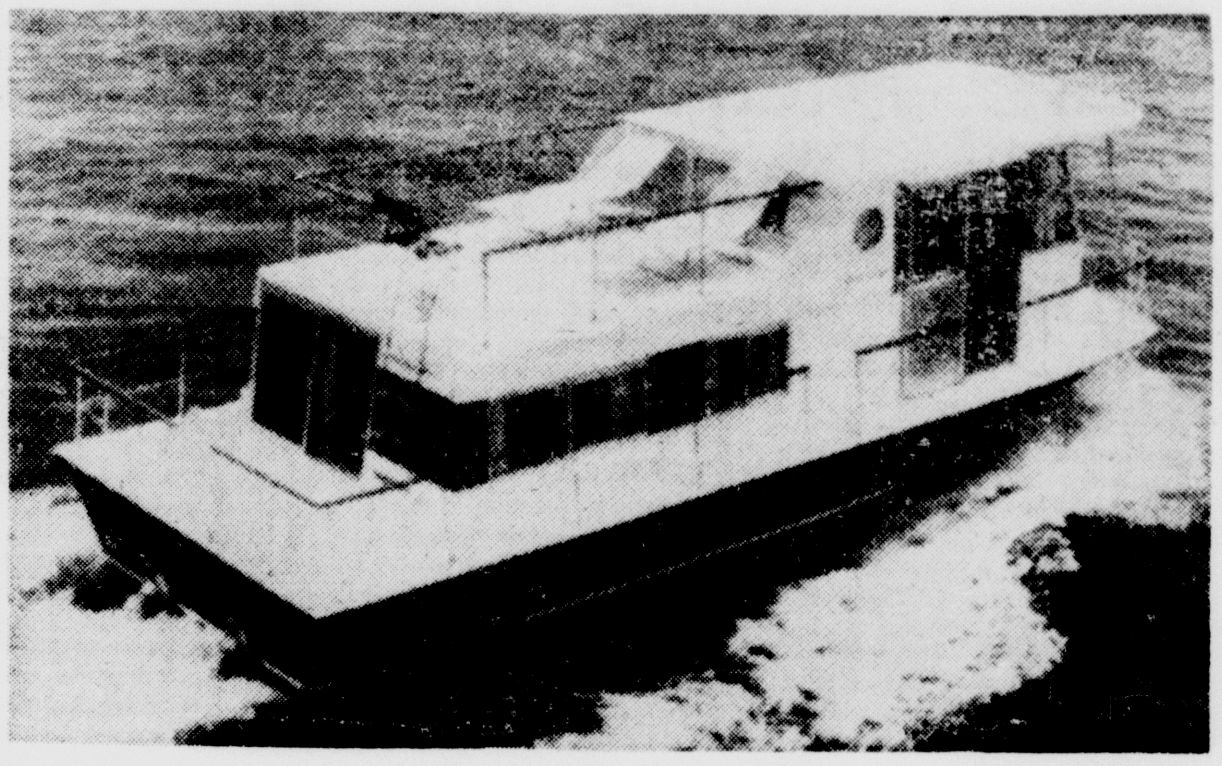
During the year 1968 the U.S. Coast Guard reported that there were 1,342 fatalities in boating related accidents. With 8,400,000 boats, this amounts to about 16 fatalities for every 100,000 boats in use or 28 per 100,000 registered motorboats.

On the same basis, the National Safety Council reported 1,228 deaths in general aviation (excluding commercial airlines) where there are 120,000 registered aircraft. The rate per 100,000 aircraft is 1,023.

Then there is the passenger car statistic where the number of licensed vehicles in 1968 totalled 82,821,000 and the number of traffic deaths reported by the National Safety Council reached 36,500. Here the rate per 100,000 vehicles is 44.1 or almost three times the rate for boating.

Even though recreational boating has traditionally a low accident and fatality rate compared to other motorized activity, the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers has been engaged in a strong boating safety program for years.

Recently, the NAEBM adopted a four-point program for improving boating safety: expanded development of safety standards for boats and boating equipment; expanded emphasis on education of boatmen at all levels, from new boatmen buying their first boat to experienced skippers; increased effort to seek compliance and recognition of existing safety standards; and continued pressure for using more funds from the Federal Land and Water Conservation Fund for boating enforcement at the local level.



THE 34-FOOT Aqua-Home from Chris-Craft sleeps six within her 12 foot 10 inch beam. The fiberglass hull is powered by a 200 horsepower V8 with Volvo stern drive, typical of the new houseboat mobility and comfort.

Houseboats Retain Their Popularity With Americans

As houseboat popularity continues to rise with no visible crest in sight, so do innovations in houseboat design.

With designers striving for more speed and stability, it is increasingly difficult to distinguish the performance houseboat hull from the high speed cruiser hull. The shapes, in short, have been happily married.

The new 38 foot Cargile Cutter is a case in point. Viewed from the bow it is a cruiser — with a narrow, deep-V entry. From any other angle it is clearly all houseboat. The result?

A blending of the smooth-riding habits of the deep-V forefoot with all the obvious comforts of a houseboat hull. The design is a distinct departure from the modified-V and bluff bows with which designers began experimenting a few years ago.

A SECOND example is Glasspar's new mini-houseboat, the 21 foot Cruiser Home, whose very name announces the wedding of high speed hull and houseboat comfort. In this case, a tri-hull shape has been used.

Elsewhere among the 1970 houseboat fleet, hulls of modified-V, cathedral, and variations of the tunnel design are present, all bidding for speed, stability, and comfort underway.

Another trend in the making appears to be the trailerable houseboat, whose principal feature is a narrower beam, usually about eight feet, which eliminates wide-load highway hazards. Three new models of this type are prominent — the Golden Viking, the Seacamper and a Viking Boat Co. entry, all 24 feet long.

OFTEN, THESE mini-houseboats double as camp trailers when on land.

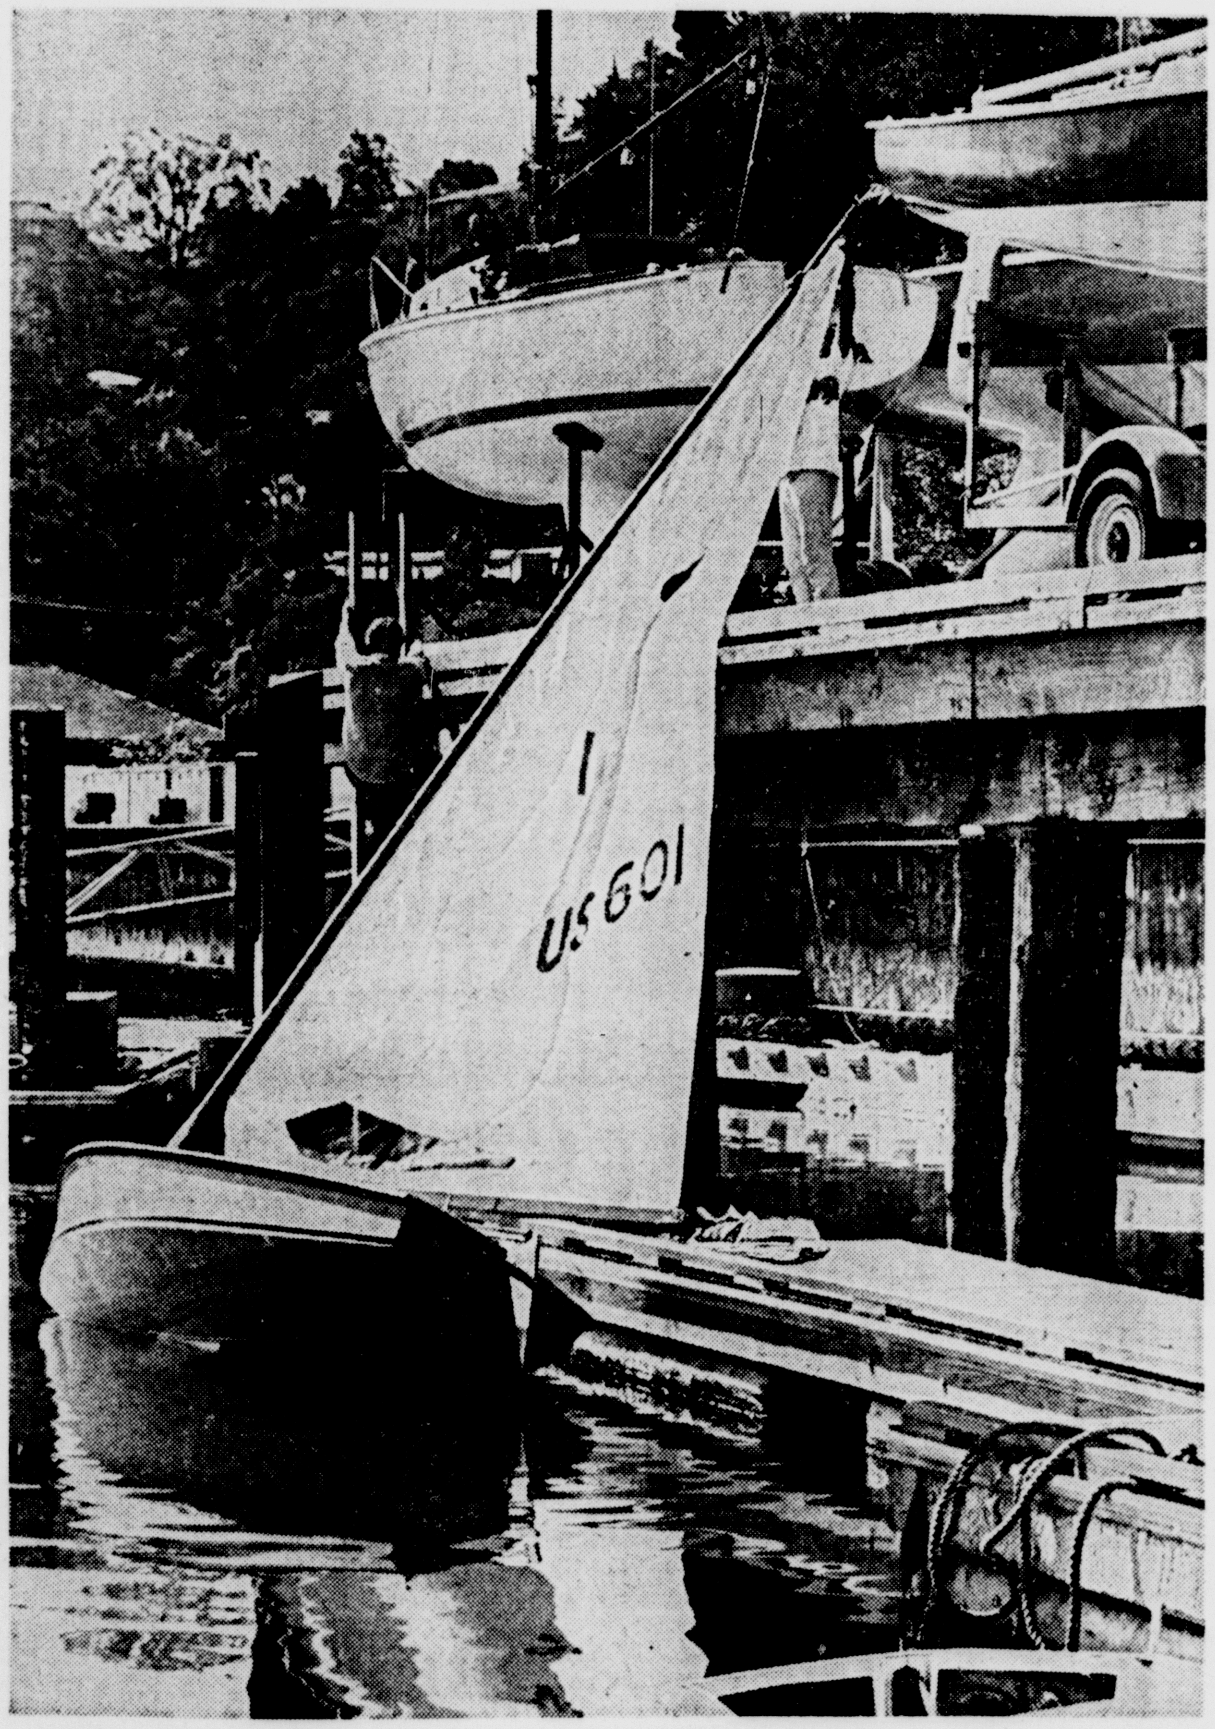
Larger houseboats are as present as ever. Two new models in the 1970 fleet are Cargile's 47 foot Leisureliner and Thunderbird Products' Drift-R-Cruz at 46 feet eight inches.

These luxury craft can be ordered with appointments and furnishings that include wet bars, stereo, air conditioning, and lavish carpeting.

The 1970 fleet is equipped with power to spare, too. Tollycraft's Royal 40 will take up to 300 horsepower in twin stern drive installation. Twin installations starting at 200 "horses" are fairly standard for houseboats in the 34 foot range—craft from Chris Craft, Trojan, and Nauta-Line (at 43 feet) are exemplary.

THESE FLOATING homes come in a wide range of prices, from a low of around $6,000 to over $50,000 depending on options—making a houseboat still an excellent investment for anyone in the market for a vacation home but unable to go for the luxury line in conventional cruisers, and resistant to owning an immovable cottage in the hills or on the shore.

Houseboating holds all the promise of a complete vacation home as well as mobility that is limited only by the depth of the water and the size of the fuel tank.



THIS JUST HAS to be the easy way to rig your sails. Busy at San Francisco Yacht Club Harbor in Tiburon are Roland Herman, on the ladder, and Charlie Newman, up top, readying craft for the new boating season. (Independent-Journal photo)

Two Major Boating Bills From 1969—

By RICHARD D. SNYDER

Secretary, National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers.

Out of the more than 100 major bills related to consumer protection introduced into the 91st session of the U. S. Congress during 1969, two major boating bills emerged, the Recreational Boating Safety Act, and the omnibus water pollution control bill.

The Boating Safety Act reached the floor of Congress late in the year, too late for action during 1969. Originally introduced in January 1969 as HR 1125, the bill placed responsibility for boating accidents on boats and associated equipment. It also gave the secretary of transportation wide power to issue regulations establishing safety standards and to require all users of such equipment to display evidence of compliance with the regulations issued under the act. Stiff penalties were proposed.

IN THE FACE of overwhelming negative reaction to the bill in testimony and statements before the Congressional committees, the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries instructed the U. S. Coast Guard to submit recommendations for a re-draft of the bill. This was accomplished in cooperation with representatives of industry, state administrators, and the boating public. The resulting bill proved more acceptable to the boating fraternity.

In its re-drafted form, the Recreational Boating Safety Act provided necessary safeguards to offset complete federal control, and protected the basic framework of the Motor Boat Act of 1940 and the Federal Boat Act of 1958, insuring continued recognition of joint jurisdictions and responsibilities of state and federal governments.

The new bill provided that changes in or additions to present laws must be made on the basis of demonstrated need. Safety standards for boats and equipment shall be issued only after the secretary considers the validity of existing boat safety standards, and only after he consults with the Boating Safety Advisory Council established in the bill.

OTHER KEY provisions of the proposal were the numbering of all motor boats regardless of horsepower; provisions to encourage greater state participation in boating safety efforts, including the allocation of federal funds to states for this purpose; and protection of boat owners from reckless and negligent operators.

This new safety bill probably will be a topic of discussion in boating circles for a number of years to come.

In the interim, the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, one of the two major trade associations in pleasure boating, adopted a comprehensive program to intensify industry's campaign for safe boating. The program provides for a re-examination of all published boating safety standards to determine their validity; establishment of a priority list of product performance standards and promulgation of any additional standards through the quasi-public standards-making body, the American Boat and Yacht Council; urging all manufactuerers to use the standards developed by ABYC; initiation of wide-spread use of product testing and certification by qualified private agencies; expansion of boating safety information programs; and close cooperation with the state boating law administrators to help them secure support to provide effective state boating safety programs.

Safety Law, Pollution Control Are The Major New Measures

IN THE WAKE of rising concern over the fouling of our waterways, Congress undertook during 1969 to pass a pollution control law. The proposals took two forms, a Senate and House version, both basically the same in their major provisons but differing in the matter of state control of pollution from boats on navigable waters.

The Senate version allowed states to establish anti-pollution requirements on all waters within their boundaries, while the House version provided for federal preemption of state requirements on navigable waters within the states.

The pleasure boating industry pressed for adoption of the pre-emptive clause as it appeared in the House bill. The action sought to prevent the establishment of a myriad of individually conflicting state anti-pollution laws that would cause confusion for the inter-state boatmen.

WITH THE passage of the anti-pollution bill, industry and the boating public must turn their attention to ways and means whereby the experience and needs of all in boating can be made available to those public officers who will be charged with administering this law.

To meet this goal, the NAEBM and the Boating Industry Association are sponsoring a symposium on water pollution from boats. Representatives from government, industry and the boating public will participate. Industry's position has been that proper equipment, designed to very specific performance standards is available, and perhaps, with modifications and industry's initiative, the problem of waste disposal from boats could be entirely eliminated.

Industry also will review the adequacy of existing standards of performance and safety for waste treatment and holding devices to determine how these standards can be improved and whether new ones are needed.

AT THE STATE level, there was continued movement toward earmarking more funds for recreational boating during 1969. Arizona, Florida, Indiana, Texas and Utah passed bills allocating revenue from boat registration to boating facilities development and boating law enforcement.

Equipment requirements were extended in a number of states to cover more boats. In many cases, the requirements match those of the Federal Boating Act. In two states, California and Connecticut, the boat rental operator or liveryman is now responsible for insuring compliance with the states' equipment requirements.

Fuel taxes jumped in 11 states last year, and three states moved to earmark more fuel tax revenues toward development of boating facilities and boat law enforcement. Nevada increased its allocation by $100,000 with the added revenue going to the Division of State Parks for facilities improvement. Pennsylvania set up procedures for the allocation of tax receipts to the State Fish Commission for use in facilities development and law enforcement. In Utah, motor boat fuel tax receipts are restricted for use in boating development, administration and enforcement.

OTHER STATE regulations of note include Connecticut's action to require youngsters under 16 years old to pass a State Boating Safety Course before operating boats over five horsepower on their own. Additional enforcement powers were granted to harbormasters in Maine, state conservation officers in Minnesota, and marine patrolmen in New Jersey.

Both the recent federal and state actions in boating regulation reflect the present trend to increase the safety and enjoyment of boating. As boating grows—its present growth rate is around 5 per cent annually — more and more legislation undoubtedly will be introduced at all levels of government. The boating fraternity, including government, industry, and the public, will have to protect its interests the same way every other segment of our nation watches its own interests.

However, boating has been able to not only maintain but to increase the overall mood of cooperation between government, industry and public.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

Some new records from RCA Victor:

SAMUEL BARBER: Two Scenes from "Antony and Cleopatra"; "Knoxville: Summer of 1915" — Leontyne Price/New Philharmonic Orchestra/Thomas Schippers, conductor — RCA LSC-3062:

Faithful readers of this column know by now that my taste runs a bit tepid on vocal music. But once in a while something really hits me, and the latest by La Price is one of these.

Although the complete Barber opera "Antony and Cleopatra" was a dreadful flop, these two excerpts featuring the soaring voice of Miss Price are jewels. The piece de resistance, however, is the lyrical and poetic picture of approaching dusk in the old home town, using words of James Agee.

SCHARWENKA: "Concerto No. 1 in B Flat Minor"—Earl Wild, piano/Boston Symphony Orchestra/Eric Leinsdorf; BALAKIREFF: "Fantasy for Piano on A Life for the Tsar"; MEDTNER: "Improvisation, Opus 31, No. 1: D'ALBERT: "Scherzo"—Earl Wild, piano solo—RCA LSC-3080:

The rebirth of interest in the Romantic Era, especially as it was expressed in piano solos and concerti, is rapidly gaining momentum. Here is an earful of pianistic virtuosity, and in the bargain a mouthful, too—Xaver Scharwenka, to be exact.

This Polish composer created four piano concerti with wild piano parts and large orchestral forces. No. 1 has lush melodies and lots of energy and the reproduction is terrific. The solo encores sound more dated somehow, although their complexity is great.

"LARRY ADLER PLAYS WORKS FOR HARMONICA AND ORCHESTRA"—MILHAUD: "Suite"; ARNOLD: "Concerto"; BENJAMIN: "Concerto"; VAUGHAN WILLIAMS: "Romance"—with The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra/Morton Gould—RCA LSC-3078:

Larry Adler probably has been the major influence in the elevation of the harmonica during the last 30 years or so from back street via music hall to symphony hall. These four compositions were all created especially for his talents. They are all delightful and unique—the most appealing to me being the earliest of the works, the 1943 Milhaud composition.

If you haven't heard classical harmonica before, this fine LP will be a very pleasant surprise.

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS: "Sinfonia Antartica (No. 7)"—Heather Harper, soprano/Ambrosian Singers/Sir Ralph Richardson, narrator/London Symphony Orchestra/Andre Previn —RCA LSC-3066:

Previn continues to make high scores with his series of unhackneyed orchestral performances.

This disc launches Previn's new series which will encompass all the symphonies by the British impressionistic composer. Written in 1951-52, the music is based on a film soundtrack Vaughan Williams created for "Scott of the Antarctic." It has plenty of programmatic bits, what with wind machines and wordless women's chorus to evoke the frozen wastes, but nevertheless communicates its central theme of heroic man striving against a hostile environment.

Sound is superb throughout.

KHACHATURIAN: "Symphony No. 3"; RIMSKY-KORSAKOFF: "Russian Easter Overture"—Leopold Stokowski conducting the Chicago Symphony—RCA LSC-3067:

First recording outside the Soviet Union of this massive (in sound, not length) one-movement symphony which includes pipe organ and 15 trumpets. It turns out to be a robust and exciting work, and naturally old Stoky draws every bit of drama out of the printed score. The timely inclusion of the Russian Easter Overture serves to second the motion that the Chicago Symphony still is hard to match for sheer gusto and excitement in this type of music.

PROKOFIEFF: "Symphony No. 2;" "Lieutenant Kije Suite"—Boston Symphony Orchestra/Erich Leinsdorf—RCA LSC-3061:

More Russian music, and one of the rarely-heard symphonies of Prokofieff. Written in Paris in the 1920s it is in the spirit of that milieu with a conscious effort to be different.

"A symphony of iron and steel" is what the composer intended, and that is what he got. But the beautiful Prokofieff lyric melodies are not completely forgotten.

The umpteenth recording of "Lt. Kije" is more welcome than most of the others, for it includes vocal versions of two sections, scored for baritone (David Clatworthy) and orchestra. The "Romance" is quite lovely.

RAVEL: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; IBERT: "Capriccio"; "Suite Symphonique"; FRANCAIX: "Serenade"—The Chamber Symphony of Philadelphia/Anshel Brusilov — RCA LSC-3089:

This Frenchy grab-bag, aside from "Le Tombeau," will be unfamiliar to most listeners. Some of the works were recorded many years ago before stereo and have been unavailable.

The Ibert suite is a witty musical travelogue of Paris and its surroundings that should captivate anyone already into the whole Satie mystique. The wit of all this music is matched by an underlying irony that is so, so Parisian.

I understand the Chamber Symphony of Philadelphia is no more, and more's the pity since they have produced some fine albums in a rather neglected area of the repertoire.

TORU TAKEMITSU: "Asterism for Piano and Orchestra" (Yuji Takahashi, piano); "Requiem for Strings"; "Green"; The Dorian Horizon for 17 Strings—Toronto Symphony/Seiji Ozawa—RCA LSC-3099:

Takemitsu is now considered the leading Japanese composer. His "November Steps" was a big hit in San Francisco not long ago, and he did the chilling musical scores for such Japanese films as "Woman of the Dunes" and "Face of Another."

These four recorded works show various aspects of his development. "Requiem" is almost conservative. The later works do very complex chromatic things with the string section of the orchestra, resulting in errie effects somewhat akin to but not copied from Pendereckl.

"A NEW SOUND FROM THE JAPANESE BACH SCENE"—Featuring two kotos, shakuhachi, guitar, bass and drums—Victrola VICS-1458:

Well, Bach has been tried on everything from soup to nuts, so why not on traditional Japanese folk instruments? Why not, indeed? It works!

The arrangements (by Norio Maeda) are models of restraint and almost make old J. S. sound like he was Japanese to begin with. Selections include various well-known Bach themes such as the "Air for G String" and the "Little Fugue in G iMnor".

Talking about it makes it sound like the last word in gimmickry, but just listen and you'll be convinced!

Excellent stereo presence and balance too.

"AFRICAN RIPPLES"—Fats Waller—RCA Vintage LPV-562:

Yes, another Fats re-issue! RCA could put them out at the rate of one a month and I'd still snap them all up for wonderful, lampooning, happy-go-lucky jazzing-up of often corny and square popular tunes of the thirties.

There's never been anyone else in jazz like Waller. Whether he's tickling the ivories in a piano solo like the title tune, or throwing out an aside on a pop tune from a movie "I Love to Whistle"—"Wait a minute boys, I broke my whistle . . ' — Fats will make anyone get over their blues in a hurry.

Mendocino Remains An Unspoiled Oasis That Has Defied Modernity

Nothing changes much these days at Mendocino: the wind still picks at the shingles, the students bend over their potters' wheels, the painters' smocks and bib-overalls mingle at mail time in the Post Office.

Time was, a few years back, when doomsayers predicted success would ruin this Down East port, clinging for a century to its cliff above the Pacific.

THE PROPHETS are gone to greener pastures. City folks have added some paint and tiles to their $40,000 Grandma Moses hideaways, and there's a new place to eat. And a new saloon.

But Mendocino still centers on its general store, nobody has gambled on a neon drive-in, and the old churches and mansions still freeze, model-wise, for the casual dabbler in watercolors or acrylic.

Ten, or is it 12 years ago, a pride of threadbare artists from San Francisco transformed Mendocino from a rotting lumber port into the most talked-about art colony on the West Coast. Galleries sprang up like toadstools, scouts from the avant-garde tried to establish beachheads, and the native endured it in customary silence.

THE HIPPIES came and went. Mendocino is too hard-scrabble. Serious artists survive, and a center, or school, was financed and still flourishes. Local housewives and fisherfolk have learned to paint for fun and profit.

The serendipity-seekers discovered Mendocino a decade ago, and the hardy ones still come here to stay at the cozy inns, stroll on the cliffs, photograph the gulls and huddle round the fire.

Nowadays Mendocino is bypassed by a highway which deals tenderly with the old town. Wild roses and nasturtiums climb on the whitewashed barns. . .("We don't plant 'em, we fight 'em," says one localite when some visitor exclaims over the beauty of it all.)

BUT THE TOWN no longer dreams of an art boom, a real-estate bonanza, or (conversely) fears the dollar and the bulldozer. After the first flush of fame, the jet-setters found it too distant, too austere for a steady diet. And the speculators discovered the problems of water and ownership made the quick buck too uncertain.

Mendocino in 1970 is content to dwell between its graveyards, take life in its stride. Tourists come through enroute to Fort Bragg to ride the "Skunk" train, look at the lush Botanical Gardens, or (in April and May) photograph the wild rhododendrons, those great "California Rose Bays" that preen like peacocks along this coast.

ANCIENT AND PICTURESQUE watertowers that once stored that vital liquid for the Redwood Empire lumber port of Mendocino now serve as homes for newly-established artists. Such scenes make Mendocino, on State Highway 1, a prime tourist attraction for Californians and out-of-staters alike. (Photo courtesy of Redwood Empire Association)

When And Where You Will Need A Visa, And How You Can Get It

By MURRAY J. BROWN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Preparing for a trip abroad can involve more than just getting a passport and making sure of hotel accommodations and transportation.

It could also mean obtaining visas and travel or transit card.

Many countries in the Western Hemisphere and in west Europe no longer require visas for American tourists for visits up to three months. But others elsewhere around the world will not admit Americans without one.

THE VISAS, usually stamped in the passport, is official approval of the foreign government for entry and travel within the borders of the country. Some must be obtained in advance of departure while others are granted at border posts and other points of entry.

In the United States, visa applicants can be obtained from foreign embassies or consulates in Washington and other major cities where diplomatic missions are maintained. The completed application, passport and, if required, the fee and photographs, should be sent by registered mail. As a precaution against loss, include a self-addressed envelope and at least $1 for return by registered mail.

If more than one country is involved, you will have to repeat the process. Allow one week to 10 days in each case.

Entry requirements differ almost from country to country and can change overnight so check with your travel agency, airlines and steamship company.

BUT AT THIS writing, if your itinerary should include Upper Volta in Africa the visa will cost $12 and you will need two pictures. Mongolia in Asia charges $9.60 but you will have to go to London, Paris or Moscow to get the visa.

The Soviet Union imposes a $1 "processing" fee for a visa but the American visitor must have a prepaid itinerary arranged by an authorized travel agency through Intourist, the official Soviet tourist organization.

Communist Cuba, North Vietnam and North Korea are still off limits. The U.S. State Department will validate passports to Communist China for those with a "legitimate purpose" but the Peking regime has shown no signs of opening the Bamboo Curtain to American tourists.

NO VISAS are needed for Americans visiting Britain, France, Italy, West Germany among other countries this side of the Iron Curtain.

A visa is required for entry into Japan, but no fee is charged. Nationalist China also issues free visas to Americans visiting Taiwan but none are needed for Hong Kong, Singapore, Thailand or the Philippines.

No visa is necessary, either, for visits of up to seven days to South Vietnam. A transit visa, valid for 15 days, costs $2.75, however.

In Africa, a valid passport will get Americans into Morocco and Tunisia. But Ethiopia charges $3.20 for a visa and Kenya and Zambia $3.15 each each.

And for a stopoff in The

Congo Republic (Kinshasa), an American will need a passport, $7 for a visa, three pictures, a police certificate, proof of financial responsibility and an onward transportation ticket.

FOR TRAVEL to Latin America and the Caribbean, U.S. citizens generally need a passport or other proof of nationality or a tourist or transit card. A few still insist on visas, but usually issue them without charge.

Tourist and transit cards can be obtained at consulates or other government agencies, airlines and steamship companies and sometimes at ports of entry. Some times a fee is charged, usually about $2, while others are free.

Argentina and Brazil ask neither a visa nor tourist card from American tourists, only a valid passport. A passport and tourist card, issued free, is needed for admission into Chile.

Other countries issuing free tourist cards include Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela. Without the tourist card, an American visitor to Venezuela could have to pay up to $18.45 in departure fees.

Three New Books On Exotic Cuisines

MIDDLE EASTERN COOKING by Harry G. Nickles; Time-Life, 206 pages, $7.95. THE COOKING OF JAPAN by Rafael Steinberg; Time-Life, 208 pages, $7.95. THE COOKING OF INDIA by Santa Rama Rau; Time-Life, 208 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Three more books in Time-Life's prestigious Foods of the World Series bring the total of volumes to 14 and cover some the world's most exotic culinary cultures.

Like their predecessors, these are books that are not only superb collections of ethnic recipes, but also encyclopedic studies of regional cuisines, enlivened by lavish and color-filled illustrations.

Most unusual of the three newcomers to the series is "Middle Eastern Cooking" by retired Holiday editor Harry G. Nickles, covering the foods and food traditions of nine lands—Greece (from whence came the author's ancestors), Turkey, Lebanon, Jordan, Israel, Syria, Iraq, Iran and Egypt.

Naturally, there is a rich variety of food tastes and techniques amony so many disperate peoples. Israel, alone, is a joining of immigrants from scores of lands, all of whom have contributed to that country's cuisine.

But Nichols also points out that there are also some shared qualities—the preference for lamb, mutton, kid "and even camel" over beef and pork; the widespread use of eggplant; the liking for coffee, sweets and spices; the ever-present dolma with its grape leaf wrappings; the yoghurt, rice, garlic, green peppers, and, yes, shish kabob.

Nichols has selected dishes that are different enough to revitalize jaded western tastebuds, and yet not so radically different as to be rejected automatically by westerners.

In "The Cooking of Japan," journalist Rafael Steinberg, long stationed in the Orient, stresses the Japanese devotion to cooking as "a total sensuous experience" with much ritual and great care in the preparation, the serving and the consuming.

The highly nutritious fish and soybean are the key ingredients. Tempura (deep frying) and sukiyaki (simmering) the vital techniques.

Steinberg admits that many westerners pull away from Japanese cooking and foods. "I have decided," he writes, "that this hesitancy is largely a matter of nomenclature. . .for the unfamiliar language can create difficulties with the names both of the ingredients and of the techniques." He then proceeds to dissipate those clouds in support of his claim that actually Japanese cuisine "should be every housewife's delight, for most of its dishes, far from being difficult, actually allow great freedom and rich opportunities for creativity in cooking."

In India, says author Sanka Rama Rau, it is the use of spices that plays the pivotal role in the creation of a distinctive national cuisine. She explores it fully and interestingly in her "The Cooking of India."

The currys, chutneys, rice dishes and all the other staples of the India diet are there in a variety that few westerners have encountered previously.

One of the more remarkable aspects of India's cooking is the flavorful use it makes of vegetables, thanks to Hindu religious requirements. And in India, Madame Rau points out, the effort is not to make a vegetarian meal taste like a pallid imitation of a non-vegetarian repast, but rather "quite manifestly and triumphantly vegetarian."

All these books featured the patented Time-Life picture essay idea, demonstrating beautifully in color the various traditions such as a geisha party in a great Japanese restaurant or an Easter week celebration in Greece or a formal dinner in Bedouin tent with a desert sheik.

All also include the separate, smaller, spiral-bound booklet in which the recipes in the larger book have been reprinted with additions, making for easy kitchen use.

Doubly fortunate is the owner of all 14 books in this splendid series, for she, or he, is blessed with both good eating and good reading.

A GROUP OF Iranian rug-washers enjoy a mid-day meal of spicy mutton stew called dizi in this photograph from the Time-Life Foods of the World book, "Middle Eastern Cooking" by Harry G. Nickles.

SOME NEW READING FOR THE JUNIORS

For Libraries

"Books For Elementary School Libraries: An Initial Collection" has been compiled and edited by Elizabeth Hodges and is available for $7.50 from American Library Association, Order Department, 50 East Huron Street, Chicago, Ill., 60611.

"Bird Life (for Young People)" by Helmut E. Adler of the American Museum of Natural History and others was originally published in 1962 and now has been repeated by Sterling Publishing Co. in a new, updated edition.

The most impressive addition to this well-regarded nature book is a gallery of 200 full-color illustrations by Eva Hulsmann of birds and bird families.

Newly discovered information on bird habits including their migrations have also been included.

This is not just a bird identification book, but rather a text aimed at answering the questions youngsters might well ask about birds. How do birds fly? What birds store their food? What is the purpose of their preening? Can birds see at night? What enables some birds to swim, while others cannot?

The illustrations and descriptions, however, qualify the book to serve as an identification manual on at least the elementary , beginning level.

It is an attractive book, and a readable, usable one. The price is $6.95, not exorbitant considering the artwork.

Some other new books for juniors:

"Seven American Stories" (Little, Brown, $6.95) is a collection of tales by Walter D. Edmonds, the much-read writer of "Drums Along the Mohawk" and other works set in early America. The anthology includes his "The Matchlock Gun" that won the 1942 Newbery Medal and such other hits as "Wilderness Clearing" and "Cadmus Henry." His books make rousing adventure reading, transporting young readers back into other eras. "For readers 8 to 80," says the jacket. But 10,11, and 12 seem about right to us.

"A Wind Named Anne" (Doubleday, $3.50) is another by a veteran writer of books emphasizing action and adventure for young boys. J. Allan Bosworth tells a fast-paced story of Kip James, a New England lad, with a problem of some looted lobster pots. And a more serious problem ahead in the form of a hurricane headed for his town. There's lots of local, regional color, as well as plenty of action.

"The Mexicans" (Little, Brown, $5.95) by Harold Coy, retired newspaper man now living in Mexico, is a history of a people about which most young Americans know very little. Coy goes all the way back to prehistory to tell how Mexico and Mexicans became what they are today. Coy's earlier book, "The Americans," received the 1959 Thomas Alva Edison Foundation Childrens Book Award, and indeed, he does write well and forcefully.

The hero of Syd Hoff's "The Little Knight" (McGraw-Hill, $4.50) is the kind we could use more of today. Sir Dudley, it seems, is a compulsive cleaner-upper, more interested in picking up litter than in winning tournaments and championing fair maidens, or slaying dragons. There's an ecology lesson in this fun-filled romp, supposedly in the past, but somehow so very applicable to today.

"All the Lassies" (Dial, $3.50) by Liesel Moak Skorpen with art by Bruce Martin Scott is a clever little book about an appealing boy with an overpowering desire to own a dog. Other pets fail to detour him from his objective. Both story and illustrations are charmingly done.

The hero of "Sebastian" (Funk & Wagnalls, $2.95) by Florence Parry Heide is an endearing little spider who is not at all spider-like. In fact, as a web-spinner, he is a flop. And he has no taste for flies. How Sebastian triumphs over his shortcomings makes for an unusually beguiling child's tale. Elizabeth Mary Fraser has done the illustrations with authenticity and humor. As an added bonus, there are a couple of spider songs, words and music, in the back of the book.

THE BOOK PAGES

Rise Of Black Music From Underground To Dominance

By DON KEOWN

THE WORLD OF SOUL by Arnold Shaw; Cowles, 306 pages, $6.95.

While the process is still imperfect and incomplete, the music world has gone further toward integration than most fields — newspapering, for instance.

It is a trend that has gained impetus in more recent years from white discovery and appreciation of black music that was formerly mostly underground and restricted to a single race.

Indeed, that discovery has gone so far that black music labeled generally as Soul music has become the single most important element of our popular music catalogues.

In his "The World of Soul," white musicologist, composer and author Arnold Shaw tells how Soul music came into being, and how it captured the ears of a white public that had generally been uneasy with or disdainful of its predecessors.

Shaw devotes much of his book to the country blues, and to its successor, rhythm and blues.

A Mayo Williams song told us: "The blues ain't nothing but a woman crying for her man." And, adds Shaw, vice versa.

Howlin' Wolf put it this way: "Blues is problems, and singing about them doesn't make things easier, I think. It just takes your mind off it."

Said Albert King: "What most people don't understand is that it (the blues) has no color. It's just a musical language that man uses to express his inner self. . .You might call the blues a problem song."

Rhythm and blues, Shaw writes, is the more urbanized kin of the country blues. "To some extent the difference between the two musical forms can be found in the varying effects produced by acoustic and electrical guitar, and simple guitar accompaniment and driving combo accompaniment. (But) it is also a manifestation of the disparity in tempo and tension between life in rural Mississippi and racist Chicago of the postwar years."

Or as Albert King put it: "The old blues made sense in their day, but the problems today are different."

Shaw's text covering both the blues and rhythm and blues movements is rich in the names of the greats of black music, and his comments upon those musicians are unfailingly perceptive and stimulating.

And after the space devoted to those two branches of black music, it is something of a surprise to have him declare: "Not spirituals, not blues, not rhythm and blues, but gospel songs are the immediate blood relatives of Soul."

He quotes Mahalia Jackson: "Blues are the songs of despair. Gospel songs are the songs of hope. When you sing gospel, you have the feeling that there is a cure for what's wrong."

And Shaw adds that whereas Gospel singers "make a joyful sound unto the Lord, Soul singers make a stirring noise unto man. And the fervor of the Gospel becomes the frenzy of Soul."

This very humanistic quality in Soul might lead some observers to assert that the blues rate at least equal billing with gospel as a parent of Soul music.

Before taking up some of today's top Soul singers, Shaw states: "Possession is the word and state that separates the black singers previously considered in this volume — except for the gospeleers — from those who follow.

"Possession begins with the singer. When it is potent enough, it sweeps like a tidal wave...Rooted in the blues, soul singing is in a different bag than the blues. Admittedly, they both stem from the same tradition of personal expression. But the essence of the blues is the degree of control, reserve, detachment and distance that make it possible for the singer to face adversity and frustration with calm and courage. The essence of Soul is the degree of involvement, that emenates from the singer's feeling of rage and outrage at the adversities and frustrations of an abominable world."

In other words, the difference is much the same as that which separates the black generations — the older ones who felt compelled to bear their special burdens with courage and dignity, from the younger ones who with equal, or greater, bravery, shout out their grievances and their determination to throw them off. Something similar, but in its own racial context, also divides the white generations as well.

Shaw then goes on to analyze such major Soul figures as Nina Simone, James Brown, Ray Charles, Otis Redding, Jimi Hendrix and Aretha Franklin.

He is pleased that this very black music has bridged racial chasms to attract white admirers. "Pop music today is like a satellite drawn by the huge gravitational pull of black music," so that white and black strains are beginning to blend and mix.

"Expressive song of the future depends on the richness of that mixture," says Shaw, ". . .and the more integrated our society, economically as well as musically, the richer the mixture."

But he also sees some dangers: That some whites imitate and try to sound black, rather than adapt the best from the black music to the best of their own music. And that some blacks compromise their own musical heritage in striving for white acceptance and commercial success. And that as they experience that success on white terms, they will be less and less a part of the black society that has produced the very music that got them their beginnings up the ladder.

Adapting from each other's cultures, not imitation, is the answer to a fruitful closing of the music gap, Shaw believes.

Shaw's book might well be read in conjunction with Phyl Garland's "The Sound of Soul" reviewed here some weeks ago. Shaw is a thoroughly competent musicologist, technically skilled in analysis and expertise. And he writes with a proven record of genuine empathy for blacks. But Miss Garland is herself a black, and thus has a built-in advantage over Shaw in exploring some of the most subtle nuances of the music that has been one of the Negro's few unstolen and most cherished possessions.

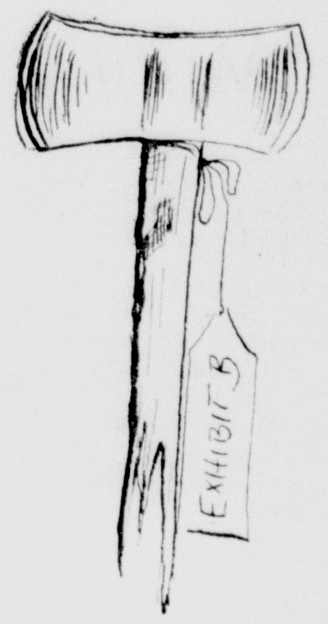
Sleuths & Suspense

THE FACE OF INNOCENCE by Elisabeth Ogilvie; McGraw-Hill, 260 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



As a teen-ager, Susan Linden had been palmed off by her domineering, opportunistic mother as the reincarnation of an Egyptian princess who expressed herself through paintings.

Susan fled that life to begin another as a suburban housewife and mother. Then the quiet and stability of that existence are threatened when she is confronted by her paintings and a man from out of the past.

Trapped because she has not told her husband of her earlier identity, Susan struggles desperately to safeguard her family and cling to her hard-won happiness. Ultimately, murder brings the menace into the open.

In her 14th novel, Miss Ogilvie has an imaginative plot which, unfortunately, she fails to present with sufficient conviction to be really effective. "The Face of Innocence" will appeal largely to tried-and-true Ogilvie fans who are considerable in number and mostly women.

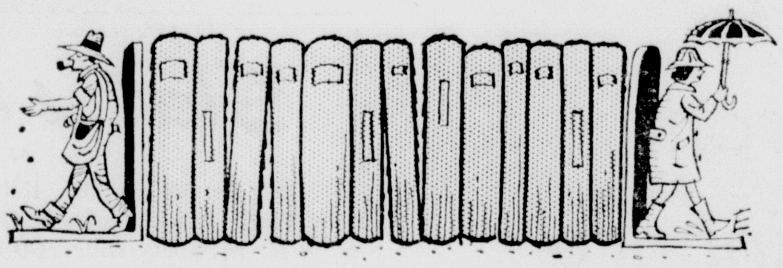
The Story Behind A Mutiny



THE UNLAWFUL CONCERT by Fred Gardner; Viking Press, 239 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Norm Howard.

The temptation to exercise authority without fulfilling its concomitant responsibilities is one of the problems of military life. The temptation crops up in civilian life too; but so far the American political system has found ways of coping with it in that sphere.

But in the Army there seems to be no way of ameliorating the abuse of authority that does not undermine the instant obedience that is required in combat. Military discipline, then, rests on regulations; military justice must depend on a kind of noblesse oblige. This relative absence of codified restraints on authority is often the undoing of small men.

So it seems in the case of the Presidio Mutiny.

The exercise of some self-restraint, the avoidance of a tendency toward hysteria, on the part of authorities at the Presidio might have prevented the so-called mutiny from ever coming to the attention of the general public. Indeed, the demonstration itself might never have occurred had the repeated protests of the potential "mutineers" through proper channels been heeded.

The evidence that Fred Gardner provides in "The Unlawful Concert" leads toward one conclusion; that the Army so hopelessly maltreated the Presidio 27 that they had no avenue of expression left to them other than a demonstration. It was a long chance in any case. A wise commander might have kept the demonstration from erupting into the cause celebre that it eventually became. Labeling the demonstration a "mutiny" made it newsworthy.

But why was there a demonstration at all? Gardner seems to want us to believe that the unspeakable injustices of military life will drive the sanest of men to desperate behavior. This is not quite the case.

Gardner describes the mutineers as " . . . by and large, from the poorest, least fortunate strata of white America. Only five had graduated from high school. None but Rowland finished a year of college, and he finished exactly one."

Sociologists tell us that one of the attributes that distinguishes this American stratum from more fortunate ones is the former's relative inability to regard the future realistically—an obliviousness to consequences. There's the nub, then. Most young men endure what the Army dishes out because they have their eyes on the future. They are able to weigh the consequences of protest against their certain freedom in the not-so-distant future. They are able to choose endurance and so avoid the concentration of the negative aspects of Army life that the stockade represents.

The Presidio 27, however, were culturally unable to take that view. They reacted immediately and violently to the absurdities of the military. They ended up in the stockade. When life in the stockade became unbearable, their reaction took the fashionable form of a demonstration.

Seen in this light, the mutiny becomes not so much a conscious act of the middle-class intellectual left as it does spontaneous revolt of the oppressed.

Gardner suggests that as the subsequent trials progressed, the 27 became more conciously revolutionary—that they came to regard themselves as part of that middle-class intellectual left.

He makes no attempt to unravel the formative years of the various Army prosecutors and judges involved. Certainly, it seems, their actions and reactions were as compulsive as those of the defendants. One wonders what American strata produced these men, too. The reason that we do not find out is that this book is really a pamphlet rather than an account or an analysis.

Further light is shed by Fred Gardner's credentials. According to Viking, "Mr. Gardner was formerly an editor at Scientific American and at Ramparts magazine. He initiated the GI coffee-house movement and contributed to the screenplay of Zabriskie Point. . . Mr. Gardner was a defense witness in the recent Chicago 7 trial."

Black Experience In Double Exposure

I KNOW WHY THE CAGED BIRD SINGS by Maya Angelou; Random House, 281 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Elizabeth Rogers.

A confluence of talent and circumstance has enabled Maya Angelou to recreate the emotions of an exceptional child in a setting that will startle the average reader.

Her book is a culture medium for the growth of racial empathy. In writing it, she has done mankind a greater service than all the sociologists and anthropologists who try to provide the answer to one of today's most puzzling problems.

This is a selective autobiography, and as such is out of balance and betrays the amateur. It reads more like a novel than an autobiography, and makes the reader wish that Miss Angelou would try her hand at the more creative form. The use of poetic images, the unusual insight into character, her easy use of language, her recall — precise and sensitive — all belong especially to the novelist.

Maya Angelou's account of her childhood is like a double exposure of the black experience. Part of it, spent with her grandmother in a small southern town, carries overtones of slave days. Both blacks and whites are held by the attenuated but unbreakable bonds of former times. Like Bunyan's Christian, the blacks move through their daily lives like people struggling in the slough of Despond, carrying a burden almost too heavy to bear. Only religion gives them emotional release and hope for the future.

In constrast, the impact of ghetto life in the cities is like the hammering of a piledriver — shock after shock of strange and demoralizing experiences deaden the sensibilities and seduce the will. It is a tribute to the race of man that someone like Maya Angelou can survive with the core of her being intact, with the desire and power to communicate the meaning of her life to other people. That she is not alone, she points out to us in a terse statement of cause and effect.

"The Black female is assaulted in her tender years by all . . . common forces of nature at the same time that she is caught in the tripartite crossfire of masculine prejudice, white illogical hate and Black lack of power.

"The fact that the adult American Negro female emerges a formidable character is often met with amazement, distaste and even belligerence. It is seldom accepted as an inevitable outcome of the struggle won by survivors and deserves respect if not enthusiastic acceptance."

An Historical Novel That Has Been Richly Researched

THE TEMPTATION OF ANGELIQUE by Sergeanne Golon; G. P. Putnam's, 424 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Shirley Graves.

"The Temptation of Angelique" is the seventh in a series of novels tracing the adventures of the beautiful Angelique.

Of French nobility, the earlier chronicles of her life in 17th Century France told of her marriage to Joffrey de Peyrac, and her life at the Court of King Louis XIV after being separated from her husband by the trickery of their political enemies. One attempt to leave France resulted in capture by pirates and imprisonment in North Africa, from which she escaped only to be discovered by the King's agents and returned to France.

Condemned to death, she again escaped and this time succeeded, sailing to America to be reunited with Joffrey and their two teen-age sons.

Joffrey has prospered in the New World, establishing a seaport colony in Maine and controling many inland mining operations and outlying forts and settlements. When this book opens Angelique and Joffrey have survived their first winter at Wapassou, one of the forts, and are on their way to Goldsboro, the Count de Peyrac's colony.

Angelique is in for dangerous adventures in the New World, too, but these adventures and Joffrey's commercial endeavors are so expertly woven in to the actual history of the times that the reader will feel them to be a real part of history rather than fictional characters.

The book has a great deal to offer a serious history student as well as a lover of adventure stories in the historical-romance category and also the over-30 woman who may enjoy an "older" heroine (in her late 30s) who is so beautiful that she becomes a legend among the Indians and settlers. It is to be read thoroughly, all 424 pages, to get the benefit of the obviously great amount of research that made possible so much attention to detail.

Caught in the midst of political intrigue between English and French agents and mistrusted by both Puritans and Catholics, Angelique and Joffrey are again separated. She is tricked into taking a trip inland and, while Joffrey matches wits with their enemies at Goldsboro, Angelique narrowly misses death in the massacre of an English Puritan settlement. Heading for the coast with the few other survivors, she is captured by the notorious pirate Goldbeard who turns out to be the lovely Angelique's greatest danger in many ways.

The author's name, Sergeanne Golon, is the pen name of a husband and wife writing team, Ann and Serge Golon; their books are first published in their native France and translated by Margaret Barnett.

The Fern Is Favorite For Marin Landscapes

Garden Page

Ferns. The name conjures-up different thoughts: Tall stately tree ferns, airy and delicate fronds adding a coolness to the shade garden, beds of arching sword ferns, conversation-piece ferns in hanging baskets.

Ferns are favorites with Marinites with good reason. They are fun to garden with, and the range of textures and shades of green foliage add a distinctive dimension to the landscape.

TAKE HOLLY FERN as an example.

It's favorite because of its handsome dark green fronds with holly-like leaflets. Growing two to three feet in height, this fern is an excellent landscape shrub in limited sun or shady locations.

Light green Sword Fern is a hardy specimen, more sun tolerant than many others and may be used to fill-in larger areas. Its low-growing appearance decorates foundation planting beds, too.

The upright growth and softening effect of its fronds are truly desirable.

NURSERYMEN HAVE a selection of Tree Ferns to use for creating effects in the shade garden or patio. These boast tall stately trunks and arching fronds whose beauty is striking.

Tree Ferns do well in containers, also, and add charm and beauty to porch or patio when used this way.

The Maidenhair Fern is a versatile one—it is used in the landscape, as a groundcover, hanging basket or pot plant. It has small,firm leaflets and will take some morning sun in coastal locations.

Sprenger's Fern—one of the Asparagus Ferns—has tiny needles of an almost chartreuse shade. It's versatile, too, and whether in a hanging basket or in the ground, you'll enjoy this one, which takes more sun than most ferns.

THERE ARE popular landscape-type ferns as well as novelty ones. Your nursery will have those which flourish in our area.

Shopping may reveal such fun things as the Rabbit's Foot Fern or the Stag Horn Fern—each is all the name implies and it's an enjoyable experience to grow these on the patio—or indoors—as lovely conversation pieces.

FERNS ARE FAVORITES with Californians who use their wide range of textures and shadings of green foliage to add distinction to their landscapes. Typical of the family is the graceful Woodwardia Fern shown here, perfect in a rock garden, with colorful flowers or as the foundation planting in a shade garden. Geraniums Belong In Our Gardens

Hardly a garden in Marin does not boast of a geranium or two.

To the surprise of easterners, a great number of geraniums do well here.

There are tall, dwarf and trailing varieties with both colorful flowers and unusual foliage. The varieties are botanically known as Pelargoniums. Several species even have scented foliage.

LEMON GERANIUM (Pelargonium crispum) features lavender flowers and the foliage, when crushed, gives off a pleasing lemon scent.

Another unusual Pelargonium is the Nutmeg Geranium. It has scalloped gray-green leaves with a strong nutmeg scent and tiny white flowers.

Well-known in the Pelargonium family are Martha Washington—or Lady Washington—Geraniums. They have heart-shape leaves and flowers of scrumptious colors: Pink, red, lavender, white and purple. Darker markings add to the beauty of the flowers.

Both scented geraniums and Martha Washington Geraniums may be planted in the garden or grown in pots, enabling you to have portable color for porch or patio.

THE POPULAR Zonal Geraniums are the ones taken for granted for decades by Californians, who still rely on them for colorful accents throughout the garden. They bloom in dwarf and miniature forms in addition to the regular three foot size grower. Flowers are red, white, pink and salmon in many shades.

Ivy Geraniums serve many purposes: As a groundcover, border plantings and as hanging basket plants. The foliage is glossy and bright green, the flowers—in red, rose pink, pink, white and lavender—adorn the plants throughout summer.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Frequent pinching of new growth on fuchsias forces bushy side growth and added new wood to carry blooms.
- Spring is a most favorable time to seed new lawns. Lawns planted now will become established before summer's hot weather.
- Now that the danger of frost is over, plant your citrus and other evergreen fruit trees such as avocados.
- Spring-flowering deciduous shrubs such as weigela, forsythia, spirea and philadelphus should be pruned as they finish flowering.
- The National Lawn and Garden Week program seeks to improve the environment. Celebrate and help beautify your corner of America by planting annuals now, which will provide quick color, and add beauty and summer-long cheer to your garden and neighborhood. Asters, zinnias, marigolds, dwarf dahlias and petunias are just a few prolific bloomers to consider.

What To Do About A Stump

Cutting down a tree is simple with a lightweight chain saw — it is stump removal that stumps the home owner!

The tendency is to cut the tree as close to ground level as possible and hope it will rot away quickly.

But in spite of formulas for burning and potions that guarantee the stump will disappear promptly, it remains to cause aggravation every time the lawn is mowed.

The best way to remove a stump is to dig a trench around it, cutting all roots, undercutting as much as possible and then wrap a chain around the stump and pull it out with a tractor, a jeep or a winch fastened to an adjacent ree. To get a purchase on the trunk you must cut it high — the higher, the more leverage you get.

But the easiest way is to hide the stump with greenery. Soil and moisture hasten rot as fast as any preparation ever concocted. Using your light weight chain saw, you can carve out the inside of the trunk and cut niches in the sides of the stump.

Fill the cavities with planter mix for growth of such trailing vines as periwinkle (Vinca Major), nasturtium or lantana.

Weeping shrubs, basket fuchsia, prostrate rosemary or annuals as petunia and ivy geranium are good choices for the planter.

IN REMOVING a dead or dying tree, or one that has become a hazard, follow these four steps. First, cut the stump high at about three feet above ground level. Then, two, saw off the stump to a flat top at table height to make a planter. Three, use your lightweight chain saw to carve out the inside of the stump and to make niches in the trunk at intervals. Fill with peat moss and soil mixture. Four, vines such as nasturtium, periwinkle, ivy or lantana may be planted to cascade down to the ground. Weeping shrubs like fuchsias, prostrate rosemary or annuals such as petunias and geraniums will grow with little attention. The pockets will be ideal places for Hens or Chickens. "How Do I Choose A Good Drycleaner?"

As a newcomer to your community, choosing a drycleaner becomes a necessity. Your own good judgment will often help you make the proper selection. Your personal inspection of a drycleaning plant or even a call office often reveals good housekeeping habits that reflect quality drycleaning.

If you think of it before changing residence, ask your regular drycleaner. Perhaps he can suggest someone. Frequently drycleaners know the better plants in many cities.

Another suggestion is that you look for identification of a drycleaner with his local, state or national association. Drycleaners who belong to trade associations have the advantage of being kept up-to-date on drycleaning developments, new fabrics and finishes. They indicate that they take pride in their profession and support it. They probably take pride in their workmanship, too.

Follow these suggestions and you should find a reliable, expert drycleaner wherever you go.

Spring Is Improvement Project Time

By VIVIAN BROWN

Lumber yard and building supply catalogues are loaded with ideas that will give a house distinction and provide it with utilitarian advantages. A new entranceway, a lean-to for outdoor storage, and screened-in porch-to-patio rejuvenation are some ideas noted in these booklets.

And what a way for the do-it-yourselfer to spend spring—outdoors.

The do-it-yourselfer is re-emerging with level, plumb and saw in timid fashion. Many have been reluctant to resume home tasks as some lumberyards had been so uncooperative. The attitude was that the do-it-yourselfer didn't know what he was doing, and the lumber yard didn't want to get involved in his jerry-building.

THERE IS A new image. The do-it-yourselfer is being encouraged by these service outlets. Big housing has been slowed up, which is one reason for the new attitude. But, more than that, the do-it-yourselfer is recognized as an innovator, and a key to progress in the building trade. If he doesn't know that something has never been done, he may even try to do it. Builders do not like to experiment, especially in a tight-money market, when they might risk losses. They prefer to stick with their old formula.

An entrance way can set a house apart from the development house next door, but builders purchase a load of entrance ways, and save a few dollars, if they take one plan. This is true of many things that go into the house—fixtures, windows, and so on.

You can set a house apart in a look-alike area by converting an ordinary entrance way to an architectural one with pilasters, sidelights, archway, and so on. Go to the building supply yard with measurements and discuss your ideas.

Another outdoor project is an outdoor storage lean-to that may be attached to the side of the garage. The long side of the lean-to might have wide doors for storage of bulky garden tools. On either side of those doors, there may be smaller doors in the upper area where shelves can be put for storage of small items, such as small equipment, paint cans and so on. Doors opening on either side of the lower half of the short sides of the lean-to may be a convenient place for storing bulky items, lawn mowers, bicycles, and so on. The space above these doors is reached from the small doors on the long side of the lean-to.

A do-it-yourselfer would surely endear himself to his family with such a project. In some households, the man of the house harasses everyone, insisting that outdoor equipment be stored neatly in the garage or basement. If the family is active, it is an impossible task that cuts into the outdoor fun. But, the lean-to permits convenient maneuvering of stuff into it from the outside. There is a place for everything, without patting it into place.

ANOTHER family-appreciation project might be a screened-in porch conversion. It is especially timely, if you are at the point of screens renewal. One building supply catalogue illustrates a screened-in porch that becomes a covered patio. You merely put in sliding doors that go to the ground, opening the entire area on the side facing lawn, water or another pretty view. Brick, flagstone or other weather-permitted material may be used on the porch floor and carried out into the patio. An awning is another good extender.

If the architecture of the house is Colonial, you can preserve its traditional architectural stability by utilizing insulated glass sliding doors with wood pine frames. A ranch house or other contemporary-style dwelling may utilize the less-expensive aluminum framed sliding glass doors.

LOOK AROUND! You probably won't be able to find a swivel tilt chair and ottoman to match this HOUSEMASTER® CHAIR by SELIG in the 5-point Quality Test! If you do find such a chair chances are it will cost many Dollars more. READ how each of these 5 important Dad-pleasing features was achieved.

1. SURE TO PLEASE DAD WITH IT'S SUPREME COMFORT! "Cuddle Comfort" Reclining and with swivel! A deep-down, lasting comfort achieved by experts. Seat and back are engineered with perfect "pitch," move indefinitely at varying angles in each of its many positions, providing perfect body-hugging comfort. The tilt and swivel mechanism makes it a most-wanted, most comfortable, most easy-going of all chairs of it's type.

2. LOOKS GOOD . . . MADE TO PLEASE DAD AND MOM, TOO! Upholstered in deep, handtufted rugged black vinyl. It's almost as tough as elephant hide. Yet has the look and feel of costly leather . . . and soft, so soft. Sculptured molded shell construction is supported on Swedish chrome steel base.

3. DAD PLEASING QUALITY . . . MADE TO LAST! Made to be passed on to the next generation. The frame is solid as Gibraltar. The final touch in ultimate luxury was achieved by adding great quantities of urethane foam with polyester fibre. Seat cushion is fully detachable for easy cleaning. Painstaking care was taken to assure each point of contact was generously cushioned. Listen how whisper-smooth the swivel rocking Swedish chrome base operates.

4. GENEROUS DAD-PLEASING PROPORTIONS! It's King Size big, a full 39" high, a generous 27" wide. Make no mistake, this is a "king size" chair in every sense of the word, not to be confused with skimpy imitations. Yet, for all of its generous heft, it is sleek and graceful, suitable for living room or a prideful position in a Dapper Dan's Den.

5. AT THIS LOW SALE PRICE . . . this swivel rocker chair and ottoman just has to be "DAD-Pleasingest" value in town! Before you invest in a nameless so-called "bargain" chair, we invite you to look this one over and compare it to chairs normally selling from $319.95 and up.
